

Don't neglect your cough.

Statistics show that in New York City alone over 200 people die every week from consumption.

And most of these consumptives might be living now if they had not neglected the warning cough.

You know how quickly Scott's Emulsion enables you to throw off a cough or cold.

"Cigarette Heart."

(Lloyd's News, London.)
"Cigarette heart" was mentioned at Tuesday's Battersea inquest on William Griffith Duke, 43, a solicitor, late of Atten borough gardens, Battersea.

His housekeeper said he had complained of palpitation of the heart, and took tonics. On Jan. 24 she found him dead, sitting fully dressed in a chair in the dining-room.

Dr. Morton, who lives in the same house, said he was called to see the deceased. He complained of pain around the heart and of a feeling that he might die soon. The witness made an examination, but only found a little palpitation. It would be more correct to describe the heart as a "cigarette heart." The deceased was an excessive smoker of cigarettes. The witness prescribed no medicine, and did not anticipate death. He was called in next morning, and found the deceased sitting in an armchair and holding a paper in his hands, practically in the attitude of sleep. He was quite dead.

Dr. Freyberge said the organs of the abdomen were enlarged and firm. The contents of the stomach gave off a strong smell of ammonia. Apart from that smell there was quite enough natural disease to account for death.

The inquest was adjourned for an analysis of the contents of the stomach to be made.

Wonderful Medicine for Whooping Cough

WORDS SCARCELY EXPRESS THE APPRECIATION OF MOTHERS IN PRAISING DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE.

Nothing appeals to a mother so strongly as does her babe. It is natural then that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is highly prized by mother when it effectively cures children's ailments. The fact that whooping cough wakes the child during the night, entails the loss of sleep and almost racks the body to pieces with vigorous coughing, and is contagious, makes it the most formidable disease of children. The sudden attack during the night and the severe strain upon the sick child make it important for every home to have a preparation that will immediately relieve and permanently cure it. Here are two testimonials which speak for themselves:

Mrs. Henry M. Edmonds, Allen Park, Ont., says: "We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for whooping cough. My children were very bad with this disease, especially the youngest girl. For three weeks I got very little rest with her. Given after every hard spell of coughing, this medicine soon brought relief and cure. Words can scarcely express my thankfulness for this great medicine."

Mrs. John A. Wilson, Little Shippegan, N. B., also recommends this cough cure. She writes: "Last fall the children all took whooping cough. I got a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and it did them lots of good, bringing relief from hard coughing and curing them. In the spring they took colds, which settled on the lungs, but again we resorted to the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine with most satisfactory results. I cannot praise this medicine too highly."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine should not be confused with mere cough mixtures, and as there are imitations it is necessary for you to be careful in buying; 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for Dr. Chase's 1908 Calendar Almanac.

Set the House High.

It is always better, for many good reasons, to have your house stand as high as the land will permit; therefore, do not dig a deep cellar, but build up the foundation walls quite a distance above the ground. The earth taken from the cellar can be banked up and filled in on the outside of the foundation cellar walls. Possibly the house may at first appear very high from the ground, and look a trifle awkward, but as soon as the grading is made the height will not be noticeable, the only difference being that the building appears to far better advantage and of much more importance than if set low. Besides all this, when the foundations are high, they admit of larger cellar windows, and these mean a light cellar, which is very desirable.

Have as many cellar windows as can be made without lessening the strength of the foundation, and you will rejoice in a cheerful, light, dry cellar, often sunshiny, too, a cellar that can be kept clean and sweet with little effort, where plants may flourish in the sun shine of the windows, and where a box of growing parsley will be a joy of fresh green, ever ready for use. Such a cellar has been built, and is a decided success.

Of course, the cellar must have a nice, smooth, level, concrete floor, and if you can afford it, let the ceiling of the entire cellar be plastered, with the last coat as white as snow. The plaster adds warmth to the house, prevents possible mice from gnawing through to the first floor, keeps dust from sifting through to rooms above, and makes the cellar lighter and cleaner.—Journal of Modern Construction.

That Simple Rustic!

How the days had flown! Already the leaves were falling sere and dead from the elms—dead as the hope that had once animated the now crushed and bleeding heart of Peleg Springbottom. Why could she not have left him content with his simple rustic life? What right had she to bring her practised arts to bear upon this young and trustful nature? Ah! what a pitiful conquest it was this girl had made.

How she had led him on and on, farther and farther into the net, until there was no escape, and then! The bitterness of that moment when she explained to him, tearfully (for she felt a pang of remorse in the midst of her hollow triumph), why she could never be his! Now she was going away, and he would never see her more.

"It was best," she said, "since things were thus, that he should not."

"Miss Comeround—Clara," he murmured, in low and broken tones, "I ain't going to fling it into your face how ye fooled me, now that yer goin' away. I wish now, as I've wished a hundred times, that ye hadn't never come here; but what's done can't be undid. After yer gone, I'm goin' too—fur off to for'in lands."

As he spoke these words he held her trembling hand, and gazed at the distant horizon with misty eyes.

"I'm sorry," she said, with a little sob, "I'm so awfully sorry it happened, Mr. Springbottom; but you oughtn't to go away just on that account, you know. Your father needs you to help him on the farm, and you'll soon find some nice little girl whom you'll think a good deal more of than you do of me."

"Never! I ain't never going to marry, an' as for staying here, where we've walked and talked when the work was done, I couldn't stand it. I'm going to sea in the Navy, and I hope you'll think sometimes of me when there's big storms, and how I may be wrecked somewhere off an iron coast."

"Oh, don't Mr. Springbottom; you'll positively make me cry again, and I've nearly cried my eyes out already over this unfortunate affair. I'd do anything for you that I could—you know I would; and I care for you, too—you know I do—only not in that way."

"Clara"—his voice was husky with emotion—"give me that there little ring on yer finger to wear next my heart and be buried with me! That is my last request."

He bowed his head and suffered mutely. She slipped the ring from her finger and put it into his hand. The carriage that was to bear her away was coming. Five minutes later Peleg Springbottom was closely examining the circlet of gold with its stone setting.

"It's smaller'n I thought it was," he mused; "but I reckon it'll fit Em'line. Prob'ly that city high-flyer thinks she's made a great mash, and I'm willin' she should s'long's she's saved me two pounds on an engagement ring for my girl."

Lived after Being Hanged.

Innumerable instances of resuscitation after hanging are recorded. Henry III. granted a pardon to a woman named Inetta de Balsham, who was suspended from nine o'clock on a Monday to sunrise of Thursday, and afterwards "came to." Dr. Plot tells of a Swiss who was hung up thirteen times without effect, on account of the peculiar condition of his windpipe, it having been converted into bone by disease.

Annie Green, a servant-girl, was hanged at Oxford in 1850, and recovered fourteen hours afterwards under a doctor's treatment. Mrs. Cope, who was hanged at the same place eight years later, also recovered. On September 2nd, 1724, Margaret Dickson was hanged at Edinburgh, and recovered while being carried to the grave. She lived for many years afterwards, and was universally known as "Half-hanged Maggy Dickson."

A housebreaker named Smith was hanged at Tyburn in 1705. A reprieve came when he had been suspended a quarter of an hour. He was cut down, bled, and revived. William Duell, hanged in London in 1740, revived and was transported. A man hanged in Cork in 1765 was taken in hand by a physician, who brought him round in six hours, and we are told the fellow had the nerve to attend a theatrical performance the same evening.

Richard Johnson, hanged at Shrewsbury, October 3rd, 1696, obtained a promise from an under-sheriff to place him in the coffin without changing his clothes. After hanging half an hour he still showed signs of life, and on examination it was found he had wrapped cords about his body connected with hooks at the neck which prevented the rope from doing its work. The apparatus was removed and the man hanged effectually.

It may be offered in explanation of the cases mentioned that there was no drop used at execution in those days, the culprit usually suffering asphyxia without the cerebral column being broken.—Tit-Bits.

A little girl whose mother takes pride in her actions in company failed to remember her teachings one day this week when a friend of the family gave her a nice big orange.

The mother gazed at the little one severely a moment, then she said:

"Echel, I'm surprised. The lady gave you an orange and you never even said 'boo.' What have you to say to the lady?"

Little Echel twisted the hem of her dress a moment, then, shyly peeping at the lady, exclaimed:

"'Boo!'—Youngstown Telegram.

Goodwin, the American actor, described at a recent dinner a Turkish bath that he once took in Mexico. "My rubber," said Mr. Goodwin, "was a strong man a very strong man. He laid me on the slab and prodded and kneaded and punched and hammered me in a most emphatic way. At the end after I had got up, he came behind me before my sheet was adjusted, and gave me on the bare back four resounding whacks with the palm of his enormous hand."

"What on earth did you do that for?" I panted.

"No offence, boss," said the man; "it was only to let the office know I was ready for the next comer. You see, the bell's out of order in this room."

"Life in Every Dose"

"I cannot speak too highly of Psychine, for it is the greatest medicine I ever used. I was just about 'all in' when I began the treatment, and in 3 months I was as well as ever. It is a great tonic for weak and run down people. There is new life in every dose."

The Foundation of Every "Progress" Coat

The good looks, and shape, and wear, too—of a "Progress Brand" Coat, depend on the part you never see—the INSIDE.

This figure shows the anatomy of "Progress Brand" Coats. The patent sleeve and shoulder pads—the strong felt, genuine hair-cloth and thoroughly shrunken canvas. This foundation is moulded by hand and held by hand stitches.

It is this perfect building of the foundation that gives perfection to the finished "Progress Brand" garment.

"Progress Brand" Suits and Overcoats prove that they are made right, by the wear they give.
