Judge Wilson, of Fredericton, lectured in the Albert Street Church on New Year's evening, his subject being "Remember the Days of Old." There was a small audience, rauch smaller in fact than the occasion called for, but this was perhaps due in a measure to the many home gatherings, which usually take place at this season of the year. The Judge's subject was well thought out and nicely delivered and those who are fortunate enought to attend spent an enjoyable evening. He was tendered a vote of thanks at

Stranger Than Fiction,

When nearly two years ago we read of the earthquake in California, no one ever dreamed that it would change the whole life of a family living quietly in the little hamlet of Jacksonville. Such, however, is the case and the circumstances are as follows:

Thirty years ago Atonzo D. Kinney of this place grew dissatisfied with his material progress and decided to strike out for a new country, leaving behind him his wife and three children. The good fortune he expected did not come at once and for some years little news reached his family as to his whereabouts.

In the meantime Bessie, his second daughter, married George Everett of Jacksonville and Annie, the oldest girl, became a firstclass teacher, graduating from Fredericton Normal school with high marks. The boy, who was always delicate, died, and the mother carried on a prosperous dress-making establishment, making for herself and daughter a comfortable home at Jacksonville.

Miss Kinney decided at last to see more of the world and went to Boston to take up further study. While there her mother went week after a lungering illness of Cancer of the to live with her daughter, Mrs. Everett, face. He leaves a wife four sons and two where she is at present. Two grandchildren sweet baby girl.

> Then news of the earthquake was sent broadcast and when the subject had become of secondary importance, word came from Oregon of a New Brunswick man who had made a fortune out of seemingly valueless property, because of the influx of people from San Francisco. Very soon Mr. Kinney wrote to his wife and sent large sums of money and a life insurance policy for several thousand dollars. He persuaded his som-inself, and two months ago he left, returning within a month's time a wealthy man.

Mr. Kinney had bought largely of timber lands and erected a mill between the towns of Mushfield and North Bend, Oregon.. He further acquired 1400 acres of property suitable for building lots which are being rapidly bought up at immense profit. The milk and lumber lands he has deeded to Mr. Everett and as it is worth today $50,000 he is in an assured position.

The happy family will soon be reunited to the long-absent husband and father, as they are preparing to leave in a short time for the new home he has made for them. They will have made themselves loved and respected. Many good wishes will follow them from friends and relatives all over the country.

A report comes from up river that three Assyrians in Madawaska Co. enticed an innocent fellow countryman to the woods and there set upon him with knives, took upwards of $100 from him and fled to Maine. They were pursued by officers captured and taken to Edmundston for trial.

The unfortunate man who was assaulted, crawled on his hands and knees to a near by house after his assailants had fled and there gave the alarm.

It is said that he may not survive his injuries and in that event the trio will have to stand trial on the charge of murder.
