Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pang of this deplorable disease.
In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfect, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence, recommend Horse-sense.

One of the members of a State legislature in the South was a man who had lived a farmer's life most of the time until he was elected; and his wife, having never seen a railroad train and having no wish to test one refused to accompany her husband to the capital.

When the legislator reached his destination he found that almost all the other members were accompanied by their wives, and he sent an imperative message to his brother to "fetch Jane along."

The brother telegraphed: She is afraid even to look at the engine.

After pondering over the message for a while, the legislator sent the following command: Blindfold Jane and back her onto the train.—Edwin T. Rrisse.

Rheumatism promptly driven from the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy. Don't waste time with common remedies. A test will surely tell. In tablet or liquid form. Sold by all druggists.

Roman Villa Unearthed.

The remains of a Roman villa at Hems-worth Farm, about eight miles from Wim-borne, Dorset, the existence of which, says the London Times, was known as long ago as 1831, having recently been uncovered.

The first pavement, thirteen feet square, is occupied by a series of concentric bands all enriched with beautiful ornaments. In a round panel in the centre appears a perfect head, apparently of Jupiter tonans, with six bolts of forked lightning issuing from the hair.

The central panel of another floor is occupied by an artistic representation of Venus rising from the waves, and screened at the back by an enormous, beautifully fluted, and delicately colored shell, the rays diverging from the point where goddess's feet met.

A clergyman writes: "Preventics, those little Candy Cold Cure Tablets are working wonders in my parish." Preventics surely will check a cold, or the Grippe, in a very few hours. And Preventics are so safe and harmless. No Quinine, nothing harsh nor sickening. Fine for feverish restless children. Box of 48 at 25c. Sold by all druggists.

The Rounded Cutaway.

Another device instrumental in suiting the Directoire coat to the short skirt is the rounded cut-away, with the back cut in one with the girdle. In another, a deep, square yoke with narrow extensions, at both front and back, serves to lend a favorable effect. In both of these models double box plaits, graduated in width toward the bottom, give the proper lines. In the latter, the box plait is returned and formed by an empiecement inserted at the patch pockets.

To be strictly correct, the walking suit that typifies the Directoire adaptations has a coat which escapes the hem of the dress by an inch, with a centre back seam, which curves not so much as to lose the precious hiplessness, nor so little that the whole garment appears to have been designed for another person than the wearer. That centre seams in the back or the two side seams that regulate the back, as the case may be, are the two most difficult points of construction.

Where the skirts are not made in one with the bodice, they are finished at the top with a strap or band so that the dividing line is inconspicuous, or else, as is more frequently the case, the trimming of the one piece is continued in the other contrasting material seems to be tacitly reserved for more formal costumes. An illustration of the way this is managed is noticeable in a costume of smoke broadcloth. The skirts, a gored circular, is merely turned at the top, stitched blindly and pressed, while at the front and over the hips a braid extends from the hip line up over the top of the skirt and two inches over the bodice, each point fastened to it with a hook.

Success.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)
"I find it difficult," he said, "to keep from feeling that my life has been a failure."
"Nonsense," she replied. "Why should you ever have such a thought? You have all ways made it possible for your wife to wear good clothes."

The Policeman's Lot.

[An Ohio policeman had to arrest an alligator last week. It happened at the time to be following an intoxicated pedestrian.]

Robert, I envy not
Thy lot!

When chill the night and polar,
And thou art whistled to thy work
To probe my garden's inky mark
Lest haply some slim burglar lurk
Behind the ghost-like roller;
And when thou rushest in, where I
Tremble to tread lest bullets fly,
Then, Robert, as I watch thee go
I marvel! Yes!—envy? No!

Nor, Robert, would I choose
Thy shoes

When Suffragettes will fight thee,
And thy coercive arm must quell
The lawless wrath of Christabel
And all those Amazons who swell
The swarms that scratch and bite thee,
Yet though, when all is said and done,
Thy lot is not a happy one,
Believe me, thou art blest beyond
Thy luckless peers across the Pond.

If oak and brass be bound
Around]

The length of thy equator,
What adamans canst thou suggest
Must gird the hero's dauntless breast
Who may be summoned to arrest
A scaly alligator?
No Suffragette has such a jaw
To scare the guardians of the law,
Nor such a long and moving tail
To make them tremble and turn pale.

It makes my heart grow queer
To hear
The tasks they may be brought to,
If they must seize each fearsome beast
That hunts, with fury still increased,
Convivial gentlemen who feast
More freely than they ought to.
Ah! if 'tis difficult to snare
An alligator which is there,
How much more hard his hapless lot
Who has to capture one that's not!

Keen Vision.

Curiously enough, according to the best eyesight in man is found at the Equator and in the vicinity of the Poles.

It is stated that good vision is most common found in the country and on barren wastes broken by few objects in the line of sight. There, we are told, the keenness of vision developed would be amazing to a city bred man, whose sight is nearly always deficient in many respects.

Eskimos have been known to detect white foxes stealing along the snow-covered waste at incredible distances, and to be able to discern objects clearly in places where the chance traveler would see only fields of blinding white.

The Arabs of the desert are provided with keenness of vision quite equal to their northern brothers.

The plainsmen of our own West have the best eyesight of Americans, inasmuch as the wide sweep of the Western plains develops their vision by reason of the absence of obstacles tending to shorten the range.

The Indian's keen sight is of course proverbial; and it is doubtful whether any white men of this country have ever attained his remarkable proficiency in this respect.

"A'fully sensitive that De Rouge-spot girl is. Won't speak to me now."
"Why, what did you say to her?"
"Oh, nothing. Merely asked if she bought her hats to suit her complexion or her complexion to suit her hats."

Psychine Missionaries

A friend of Dr. Slocum Remedies writes: "Send a bottle of Psychine to Mrs. W... They have a daughter in decline, and I believe it would help her. I have mentioned your remedies to the family, and also cited some of the miraculous cures accomplished inside the last 18 years, of which I have knowledge."
