It makes them plump, rosy, active, happy.

It contains Cod Liver Oil, Hypophosphites and Glycerine, to make fat, blood and bone, and so put together that it is easily digested by little folk.

Clever Thought.

When a certain Berks County storekeeper, who was also the postmaster of the borough, began the transaction of business one morning about a year ago, he found that the safe in which were kept the postage stamps had been robbed, during the night, and promptly reported the matter to the proper authorities. The latter decided, after an investigation, that restitution should be made for the stolen stamps, but that the expense of repairing the damage to the safe would have to be borne by the storekeeper, which was accordingly done.

Some time later, a second robbery was committed and reported as before, as the result of which there was another investigation, which disclosed the fact that the stamps had been abstracted on this occasion without any violence to the safe.

"But how was it done?" asked the inspector, somewhat puzzled. "The safe does not seem to be injured at all."

"I made up my mind I would not be caught again," replied the postmaster, slyly. "I left it open."—[Philadelphia Public Ledger.

To Purify The Blood.

The liver and kidneys must be enlivened by Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The blood not only carries nourishment to the cells and tissues of the body but also takes up the poisonous waste material or ashes which remain from the fire of life.

These poisonous substances can only be removed from the blood by the liver and kidneys and this accounts for the extraordinary success of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a means of purifying the blood.

By acting directly and specifically on these organs this medicine ensures regular and healthful action of the bowels and a thorough cleansing and invigorating of the whole digestive and excretory systems.

The blood is purified, digestion improves, the vital organs resume their various functions, biliousness, constipation, liver complaint and kidney trouble are overcome, and rheumatism, backache and all pains and aches disappear.

There is no treatment so prompt and certain and none so reasonable in price. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box. All dealers or Edmanson, Bate & Co., Toronto, Ont. Portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. the famous Receipt Book author, on every box.

Youth and Immoral Fiction.

(Springfield Republican.)

The recent agitation in England over the alleged immoral character of a large part of recent fiction led Lord Alfred Douglas the other day to call for a restriction upon the reading of the young:

"The bulk of the readers of novels are young women and girls. You may see these young people, with their hair hanging down their backs, standing at the counter of Mudie's library and calling for these objectionable books. Yet if these same girls were to go into a public house and call for a pint of beer, the publican would refuse to serve them. And which would do them more harm?"

He would require a certificate of maturity on the reader's part as a protection against a kind of fiction which he thinks to be growing. It is very true, certainly, that there are many books which are by no means immoral, but which most people would consider harmful or at least improper for the young. There is a whole class of subjects which fall within the quite lawful range of fiction, but which have dangers for an immature mind. Much of the criticism brought against recent fiction rests on the assumption, which has been made in America even more than in England, that anything called a novel is for miscellaneous consumption. There may be preferred brands of fiction, as of chocolate, but all are assumed to be safe for the young person.

Evidently this habit of mind is being seriously disturbed, and is quite as well; such liberty is perhaps neither good for the young person nor for the art of fiction. But does not the oversight of the reading of children belong rather to parents than to the police? It is a responsibility that has been too much shirked. The keeping out of pernicious new novels is but a small part of it; the more important thing is to cultivate in the home such an interest in good books that there is neither time nor temptation to read trash.

Barnum's Old Lion.

Among the features of the parades of the Barnum circus there was formerly one that never failed to attract attention. On the top of one of the wild beast cages lay an enormous lion. He was not confined in any way, and nervous people watching the parade would shudder at the sight of contemplate the terrible possibility of the lion springing into the midst to the crowd.

But the venerable old king of beasts had reached the leonine dotage, and stiffened muscles and blunted claws rendered him harmless. He was as mild as a kitten and in the winter quarters, where he was allowed to roam at will, sometimes had to be protected from the onslaughts of irreverent and mischievous puppies.

One night he wandered from the quarters. In the course of his travels he chanced on a barn where a meek eyed cow was placidly chewing her cud. A faint flicker of the slumbering jungle spirit stirred his pulse, and, with a crushing blow of the huge fore paw, the cow was slain; then, lying down beside his victim, he went to sleep and dreamed of the time when he was a shaggy little whelp playing with his brothers under the bright sun of his far off African home.

In the morning the owner of the cow, a stalwart female with the blood of Irish kings in her veins, entered the barn with milk pail in hand. She was filled with wrath at the sight that met her gaze. With a keen edged ax in her hand and grim determination in her eye she fearlessly approached the sleeping lion, and when the men sent out to search for him arrived he lay cold in death. Barnum promptly paid for the dead cow and engaged to appear on exhibition "the woman who in mortal combat had slain a lion."

Where Egg Shaped Heads Are in Fashion.

(National Geographical Magazine.)

The egg shaped heads of some of the natives of Malekula, in the New Hebrides, were once thought to be naturally conical. For that reason scientific men decided that the Malekulans were in the lowest rung of the human ladder.

Later it was found that the conical heads were produced as the Chinese women distort their feet, by binding them in infancy. The egg shaped head is still fashionable in Malekula, where some extraordinary results are achieved.

The conical shape is produced by winding strong sennit cord spirally about the heads of young babies and tightening the coils from time to time. A piece of plaited mat is first put on the head and the cord is coiled over this, so as to give it a good purchase. The crown of the head if left to develop in the upward and backward fashion that is so much admired.

Marketing.

One of the most important details in conducting a profitable poultry plant, even if only a very few fowls are kept is to put every thing on the market as fresh as possible and in the most attractive condition. Eggs should never be more than a week old. They should be washed perfectly clean and graded for both size and color. If only one breed of fowls is kept the eggs will be very uniform. This adds considerably to their value when it comes to supplying a fine trade.

Each egg should be stamped with the name of the farm where it was produced. This is a guarantee to the consumer that it is a first-class article, which is always in demand at an advanced price.

Chickens and fowls should always be well fattened and dressed because there is never any profit in marketing an inferior article. They should be killed by bleeding from the mouth and broilers should be dry picked, care being taken to remove all the pin feathers. Old fowls can be dressed very well by scalding them in water a little below the boiling point and then dipping them quickly into cold water before picking. This makes the feathers stick together so they can be removed much quicker. It also keeps the outside thin skin from peeling off. They should then be cooled thoroughly and packed in boxes. Plain paper is used to line the box and between the layers. Each chicken should be labelled with the name of the producer. Both eggs and poultry should be marketed as soon as possible after they are ready.

A Brown County Epic.

The gentleman from Brown fished around in his clothes until he found a newspaper clipping containing the following tender bit of verse:

SAVED FROM THE TRAIN.

Bud Applegate's hog got loose one day,
And wandered on the railroad track,
While Bud was hunting all around,
A-thinking for to bring him back.

The hog he went a-snootin' round,
Although he should have better knew;
For there he was on the railroad track,
With the fast express train jest about due.

And all of a sudden there she come,
Bud the whistle gave and awful yell;
But the hog jest kept a-rootin' aroun',
And heeded not his funeral knell.

Bud Applegate was a-runnin' up,
An' I'm telling you no lie;
He says I'll save that dad-burned hog,
By Heck, if we both must die.

Bud hit the hog with his big club,
An' made him squeal and prance;
An' then as the train a-nearer came,
Bud kicked him in the pants.

The hog went scootin' off the track,
But I will have to state
That when that train did come along
'Twas the last of Applegate.

They picked him up in baskets
An' buried him bit by bit;
An' though this happened a month ago,
The funeral's lastin' yet.

"There," said the gentleman from Brown county, "there's the poetry what is poetry. Do you think Riley ever wrote anything like that?"

"No," said the artist sincerely, "I'm sure of it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Investigating Grandpa.

A grandfather, well known in the English house of commons, was chatting amicably with his little granddaughter, who was snugly ensconced on his knee.

"What makes your hair so white, grandpa?" the little miss queried.

"I am very old, my dear; I was in the ark," replied his lordship, with a painful disregard of the truth.

"Oh, you are Noah?"

"No."

"Are you Shem, then?"

"No, I am not Shem."

"Are you Ham?"

"No."

"Then," said the little one who was fast nearing the limit of her Biblical knowledge, "you must be Japheth."

A negative reply was given to this query also, for the old gentlemen inwardly wondered what the outcome would be.

"But, grandpa; if you are not Noah or Shem or Ham or Japheth you must be a beast!"
