

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited,
Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 165 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success. I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

ALEX. McZAE,
Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Almost every mail brings us letters like the above. Psychine will repeat this record in every case. It is the greatest medicine known. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

Escapes From Siberia.

(London Tit-Bits.)

Nothing, perhaps, better illustrates the indomitable courage of the men and women who are fighting today for the emancipation of the Russian peasant and their unswerving belief in the ultimate triumph of their cause than the fact that, although many of them have endured the horrors of Siberian imprisonment, from which they have either escaped or been released, they still continue their propaganda work.

The hero of the Russian prison breakers is Leo Deutsch, who is also still engaged in revolutionary work, although he has been sent to Siberia on three occasions, and has escaped each time. His last escape, in 1905, was perhaps the most audacious of all. He had returned to Russia after the Czar's constitutional manifesto, when the authorities practically guaranteed the safety of himself and other revolutionaries. But in spite of this solemn promise Deutsch was rearrested and sent to Turukhansk; and his friends then gave up all hopes of rescue.

On the road, however, Deutsch got the permission of the officer of the escort to purchase some clothes and provisions while passing through a little town on the road to Turukhansk. Two guards accompanied him on his shopping expedition, and while at a draper's they began to chat affably with the shopkeeper, forgetting all about the dangerous prisoner in their charge.

Deutsch, noticing their attention was diverted, gently stepped into a private room adjoining the shop, and bolted thence into the courtyard, where, luckily, he found an unfastened gate leading him to liberty. He was fortunate enough to have some personal friends in the town who hid him for some time and then helped him to return to St. Petersburg in disguise, when he immediately took train to Finland, and eventually arrived in England.

Another name held in reverence by Russian revolutionaries is that of Hypolyte Muishkin, who was shot in 1885, and who first fell into the hands of the police through trying to liberate from prison the famous novelist and political economist, Nicholas Tchernishevsky. The attempt failed, and Muishkin was condemned to ten years' penal servitude. Misfortune seemed to dog him in his attempts to escape his punishment. He made a series of attempts, the most sensational being that practically accomplished from the Kara political prison in Siberia.

By tunneling under the walls of the prison Muishkin and seven other prisoners managed to liberate themselves. Unfortunately, one of the men attracted the attention of one of the sentinels, who gave the alarm, and all the eight were ultimately recaptured. But it was not until Muishkin and a fellow prisoner had made a journey of more than two thousand miles and actually reached the sea coast, that they were rearrested at Ladiyostok, just when they were on the point of starting for hospitable shores.

If ever there was a prison from which escape seemed hopeless it is Paviak, Warsaw. This prison is encompassed by a very high wall, is strongly guarded by military as well as warders, carrying both swords and revolvers, while interviews between prisoners and their friends are only allowed under the most exceptional circumstances. And yet, in 1906, ten important "politicals" escaped from its walls. It was a revolutionary coup which still rankles in the minds of the Russian officials of the town.

The prison administration was made to believe by telephonic message that the military governor of Warsaw desired the transfer of ten prisoners from Paviak to the Citadel, the message further stating that the prisoners were to be conveyed to the fortress under escort of an officer of gendarmes, who would bring his own guard. The gendarme officer arrived, accompanied by six policemen, and handed over to the officer what was apparently an official document ordering the transfer of the ten prisoners, each of whom was correctly mentioned and described in themissive. The prisoners were handed over to the officer, who gave a certificate stating that they had been delivered into his charge.

Next morning the prison van was found on the outskirts of the town, surrounded by prison clothing, uniforms and swords—all that remained of the ten prisoners and their escort; for the officer of the gendarmes and his police were friends of the prisoners, who had adopted this daring ruse to free their comrades. And the ruse was a complete success, for all the efforts of the authorities to discover the culprits proved unavailing.

The Imperial Guard.

(Australasian, Melbourne.)

Under a scheme initiated at the Imperial Conference, and now approaching realization, what may become a new division, to be known as the Imperial Guard, is being added to the British army. The central idea is that every state shall have its troop or squadron or other unit entirely under the control of its own officers and state government, but affiliated with the King's Colonials and forming part of a world-wide organization having its headquarters in London, the Prince of Wales as colonel-in-chief and Colonels Lawrence and Fortescue as officers in command. In India, Canada, South Africa, and Australasia, recruits are to have the same uniform, the same name—it is hoped the same esprit de corps. If a man in a squadron in England returns temporarily to his home, or men from the states of the empire visit England, they can do their training in their Imperial regiment, wherever it is. The regiment is to be their Pilgrims' Club, and if they know not a man in the state they travel to they will come into the heart of this freemasonry, with all its advantages. No liability to foreign service imposed or suggested, but whenever a state decides to offer is accepted, the unit of the Imperial Regiment would be the first to take the field, and on arrival it would be incorporated with other contingents similarly trained and with the like traditions.

Already the New Brunswick Hussars, in Canada, have requested to be affiliated to the King's Colonials, and have been so affiliated. The Cape Border Rifles and the Natal Carbineers—famous regiments both—have joined. A New Zealand regiment may join this year; and of Australian regiments the six Light Horse regiments of New South Wales have applied, and their request has been received in London and granted.

Of Australian regiments the South Australian Infantry has already been affiliated to the 3rd British Infantry, and the 8th Regiment (Victoria) to the King's (Liverpool Regiment), and Mr. Ewing, having approved of this, may be expected to approve of the larger plan.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The Moulting Season.

Moulting time is a hard season for the hens and not a very agreeable one for the owner. The egg yield falls off, feathers accumulate in the poultry houses and yards, and if there is any weakness present among the hens it is pretty sure to declare itself. It will not do to leave feathers lying about in the houses and yards abiding places for lice and mites. They should be gathered up and destroyed. A little change in the feed given is beneficial at this season. A hen in supplying herself with a new coat of feathers undergoes quite a strain on her vitality. She should therefore receive just as much food as when laying. Corn charred in the oven, waste popcorn, stale bread, and at last, but not least, sunflower seed are all good feeds at time, any one of them being of benefit if given in small quantities in addition to the regular feed. If the above plan is followed, she will soon have an entire new coat of glossy feathers and be contributing toward the egg basket instead of moping about, half naked and perhaps ill.

Give the hens as much range as possible during this moulting period. Out of the numbers of things they find on range they pick up those that are the best for their health under the conditions. The poorest looking lot of moulting fowls are usually found in small yards without much shade and without change from their regular feed. In case the hens cannot be given free range, some beef scraps should be provided.

Abner Watkins' Tears.

Traded horses yistiddy! Abner Watkins cried when he led his gray mare out! By jing, He's too soft for anything! "Treat her kind, Bill!"—stroked her head, Half choked up—that's all he said, Wished he hadn't let her go!

"Don't seem right," he said, an' I Saw a big tear in his eye When I led her off, an' say! He jist turned and went away With his head bent down as tho Wished he hadn't let her go! But a trade's a trade, an' he Can't go back on one with me!

Kick, you cussed brute! an' lay Back them sharp ears that way, Lay down in th' shafts, an' say! Abner Watkins cried that day; "Treat her kind, Bill!" stroked your head, "Treat her kind!" that's all he said; Oh, you must 'a' laughed or tried That day Abner Watkins cried.

Might Not Be.

A bright-eyed old man boarded the train at St. Paul, bound for Seattle. As the conductor passed through the car the old man stopped and asked how far it was from St. Paul to Seattle.

"Sixteen hundred and twenty miles," the official answered curtly.

The next time the conductor came along, the old man stopped him again and asked him how far it was from Seattle to St. Paul.

"See here, my man," said the conductor, pompously; "it's 1,620 miles from St. Paul to Seattle, and it's 1,620 miles from Seattle to St. Paul. Do you understand?"

"Maybe so," said the little man, modestly. "I didn't know. You see, it's only seven days from Christmas to New Years, but it's a long time from New Years to Christmas."—(Rochester Herald.)

Scotch Wit.

On board one of the Scottish steamers, which have been built with exceedingly light draft to get over the frequent shallows of one of the rivers in Scotland, a Yankee tourist remarked to the captain, a shrewd old Scotchman:

"I guess, skipper, that you think nothing of steaming across a meadow when there has been a heavy fall of dew."

"That's so," replied the captain, "tho occasionally we hae tae send a man ahead wi' a watering can."

Effects of Electricity.

The observations of Dr. Mullendorf concerning the effects of electricity on the animal to-day shows some remarkable results. Man has much greater power of resistance, or much less susceptibility, than many other animals. A leech placed upon a copper plate which rests upon a larger plate of zinc is unable to crawl off on account of the feeble electric action excited by the contact of the metals. Horses are troubled by slight differences of potential. An ox treated for rheumatism with electricity succumbed to a current absolutely inoffensive to man.

Hubbie—My dear, if I cannot leave the office in time for dinner tonight I will send you a note by messenger.

Wife—You need not go to that expense. George, for I have already found the note in your coat pocket.
