A Popular Entertainer.

Miss Elsie G. Phelan, the young woman composer, who recently was the head-liner at B. F. Keith's Theatre in Boston, gave a most interesting interview which appeared in the Boston Herald. Miss Phelan said "fame as a woman composer is almost unheard of."

"Listen to this," she said, as she sat at her baby grand piano playing a stirring march with dash and abandon.

"You like music, but you are not musical, I judge," said Miss Phelan as she finished playing. "Ever hear that march before? Yes, I'll bet you have. I've heard bands play it, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in fact it has been played everywhere and you don't know who wrote it. Do you? Well, how can a person expect to win fame as a composer?" asked Miss Phelan with a smile. "How many persons ever look at a program to learn the author's name? 'Now that march is my 'On the Gridiron.'"

She got from a stack of music—"On the Gridiron"—E. G. Phelan.

"E. G. Phelan," she repeated, "more often it is billed just 'Phelan' and I suppose one person in a thousand would suspect the composer to be a woman. 'When you talk about fame, well,' said Miss Phelan smiling, 'I have hopes. I am working all the time and nowadays, to make any kind of a showing at all with men in the competition for musical honors, it means work, work, work, and unflinching persistence.

But here is another story which you may think contradicts what I have said before. You know I appeared in the Society Vaudeville at the Boston Theatre recently and gave a pianologue, that is, sang a few songs to piano accompaniment. After the performance I found a great many people were disappointed because I had not sung and played my own compositions. They probably expected I would play such ones of my own as 'O'er the Dreamy Bay,' 'Let us Forget,' or probably selections from my latest collection of songs, 'In April.' But the fact is, I don't sing. I just talk off the songs I use to piano accompaniment and really it is good fun. I enjoy it.

"In writing my songs I always have in view a good lyric and I strive to make the songs musically good. To keep up to a certain standard I try not to write too much. I might work all the time, but as it is I write only when I have an idea that is really worth using. Take my latest song, 'What Makes the Thunder Sound?' Now I received the lyric from S. K. Creighton in the early morning mail and at two o'clock I was at the publishers with the song off my hands."

Miss Phelan is prominent in Boston society circles. She is a member of the Boston Professional Women's Club and of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Several of her compositions have sprung into instant popularity and she is now recognized as the youngest of the standard comedians of the most promising of the day. It was not until recently, however, that she began to attract attention as an entertainer and even then it is not so much what she did as the way she did it. She is an accomplished pianist with a rare touch, and with this has a passion for quaint songs with subtle humor, and these she sings in her own happy way.

The Boston Transcript said of her pianologue at Keith's Theatre—"In the first place Elsie Phelan has a personality whose magnetism easily carries across the foot-lights and she at once puts herself on good terms with her audience. Without any preliminary remarks she enters quickly into the scene and with a pleasant nod to the audience sits down at the piano and begins her enjoyable program. She is sure to 'make good' every time."

Miss Phelan is summering in Woodstock and is to be heard at a concert to be given in the Opera House sometime the last of August, for the benefit of the Carleton Co. Hospital. She will be assisted by Mr. Hollis Lindsay and Mrs. Dr. Knerr.

The Markets.

his time of the year, between seasons, a little interest in produce prices, and the quotations given below are the average prices paid the farmers at the various shipping centres of the county.

Raspberries have been plentiful in most localities, and blueberries are said to be a good crop.

The lack of rain continues a serious menace to all crops, especially oats. Buckwheat is doing well, however.

Potatoes seem able to stand lots of dry weather and the fields many of them ten to twenty acres in extent, are looking fine. There is still time for rust to set in, however, but the outlook is favorable. It is expected digging will begin within three weeks.

The prices on the few seasonable lines are:—

Butter..... .20
Eggs..... .18
Live hogs bring..... $5.25 to $5.75

Beef cattle are bought in various ways but the price in any shape is good, for "critters" are scarce.

Sheep and lambs are being marketed at good prices and shipments from the county are made almost daily.

Poles Like Walking Better than Work.

Last week Johnson Bros., G. T. P. contractors with headquarters at Plaster Rock, sent to Montreal for a crew of thirty Polanders to work on the railway. He paid their fare and fitted each out with clothing and shoes. For nine of them one day's work was sufficient. In the middle of the night they decided to hit the pike for Montreal. They started at once but their departure was undiscovered until morning, when the Poles left behind gave their fellow-countrymen away. As the importation of each man had cost the Scott's about $20, they did not intend that the men should get far away. And they didn't. Chief of G. T. P. Police A. R. Foster was at Perth at the time and was soon notified. In the capacity of provincial constable he, with Constable McCrae, began a search for the fugitives from work and succeeded in finding them about four miles up the Tobique gulch. They admitted their intention to walk back to Montreal but a little urging started them back to the railway—all except one. He evaded his captors and may still be on the high road to the city.

The Convict's Daughter.

One of the best melodramatic productions on tour this season, "The Convict's Daughter" will be the attraction at the Hayden Gibson Theatre, on Friday, Aug. 7th. It is not one of those worn out, weather-beaten plays, but entirely original and up-to-date in every detail, and its success is already established. A competent and expensive company is required to give an adequate interpretation of the various characters. The great sensational scene is a prison yard, where convicts are at work rebuilding a wall beside a railroad. In this scene a locomotive and twenty freight cars cross the stage. As the train passes the wall, one of the convicts, standing on the top stones, leaps for liberty to the roof of the car. A guard fires, but misses and the prisoner is soon free. The convict is a "Weary Willie, who finally becomes wealthy and happy; his innocence being proven by the confession of the dying murderer, who leaves all his property to him. His daughter marries the man who she loves and whom she has waited for for many years, and all ends happily.

FRANK GOARD, the young Englishman, who was taken to the Provincial Hospital some time ago, and afterwards discharged, was again taken to that institution last week by Constable James Woolverton.

Miss "Petticoats" Coming.

With froufrou of furbelows and ripples of laughter "Miss Petticoats" is on her way to the New Opera House, where she will be presented by a clever company on Aug. 13th, for one night only, and the whole town is on the "qui vive" to see and hear the adventures of this wonderful girl, who, born of French and American parentage on the New England coast, has a most remarkable career. Her name was given her by her fond grandfather, with whom she lived on board of an old whaler, because the mother, when dying, had called her "Mon petit coeur," and left her to old Capt. Stewart, a sturdy sea captain, who lived in the cabin of the "Harpoon," and here little Agatha Renier, daughter of a French nobleman, grew to womanhood. Her brilliant evolution from this quaint home, through the vicissitudes of the smart set of New Bedford, and her final graduation into aristocratic circles of Paris as a leader of society, furnished some very lively reading in the novel of "Miss Petticoats," and it was brought out as a play about five years ago at the great Boston Theatre, where it was greeted nightly by enthusiastic audiences, who pronounced it a powerful and thrilling play. From the shores of picturesque New Bedford to the saloon of the Countess Fernay is a long stretch, and takes a highly interesting contrast. The villainies and jealousies always awakened by a beautiful woman beset Agatha from the beginning when she saved the life of a rich old lady by "clinging like a scarlet vine" to the horses' heads, until she returned in triumph, and with the same irresistible strength of will, inherited from her Puritan mother, doomed all her former enemies, and brings the remarkable drama to a climax by giving up her own strong will for "love's sweet sake." Some very funny incidents and a vein of happy wit runs through the play. The four-in-hand dance in the superb ball-room of the Countess in Paris by the four sailors from the shores of New England forms one of the most laughable situations and brings down the house.

Light and Olive Oil.

Science as well as long experience has taught that light is the worst enemy of Olive Oil (all experts agree to it.) It ruins all its beneficial qualities by causing rapid deterioration and rancidity. Glass containers therefore are most improper for such use, and people must avoid Olive Oils packed in bottles. Ancient Greeks and Romans always keep their Olive Oil in earthen jars, and the custom is still in existence to-day among their descendants. The jugs has the inestimable advantage of protecting the exquisite Castina Olive Oil from the ruinous effects of light, and in addition, it being porous, absorbs the invisible particles of humidity mechanically retained in the oil, and not only renders it exceedingly palatable but preserves in a much improved way its beneficial properties. We note that E. W. Mair has secured the Agency for this celebrated "Lyvols Olive Oil."
