

Began With Two Cents.

Speaking of finance, I notice in the papers the death of John Packard of California, leaving an estate of $20,000,000. It is not, however, the millions that attract my notice so much as the renewal of the lesson that the child is the father of the man. Talking with an old friend on this subject, he said: John Packard and I were village companions, and we often had a lively game of ball. One day when the sport was over and the ball which happened to be John's, was restored to the owner, one of the lads said, 'John, I'll give you two cents,' and the immediate reply was, 'Done you shall have it.' Another boy then said, 'John, what made you sell your ball so cheap?' and John replied, 'See what you can do with two cents!' Money even in cents was rare then, and what struck me in the old man's story was the idea the boy had of its use. Most of our modern boys would spend it for cigarette, but here was a boy who knew that even two cents was a factor in success. With this idea as a rule, and in such an open field as California, John Packard piled up his millions. I do not honor him merely for his wealth, for men just as good have failed. I only mention this as showing the importance of learning even in youth the value of little things; and so when I read of John's wonderful success, how readily it recalls the old man's story, and the exclamation, 'See what you can do with two cents!'

Eye Strain Headaches.

Manitoba lady tells how headaches disappear with the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food.

Women who use their eyes much for reading or fine needlework are sure to find eye-strain and nervous, sick headaches among the first symptoms when the nervous system gets run down.

As a positive cure for headaches, not mere relief but cure, Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food stands without a rival because it gets at the cause of the trouble and builds up the nervous system to health and strength.

Mr. Geo. Fuller, Lakeland, Man., writes: 'Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of nervous headache, from which I was a great sufferer, and I am no longer troubled with twitchings of the nerves in the arms and legs. The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box. 50 cents at all dealers or Elmsman, Bates & Co., Toronto.'

A Well-Chosen Frock.

The skirt is a plain circular, with the opening at the left side, and the edge is finished with a piping of satin that matches exactly the color of the broadcloth. The top curves very slightly over the hips up to a point in the back after the newest of the so-called Empire designs. It is finished with a piping of silk, and in addition there is a soft narrow girdle, also of the silk, which may be used for variets. Accompanying this skirt there is a bodice of the same material, made with a little square yoke—for yokes, where they exist, are of meagre proportions now-a-days—of some exquisitely fine applique of a creamy tint, and three bretelle-shaped pieces from the waist, over the shoulders, and down again to the waist in the back.

Each of these pieces is piped with silk as the skirt is, and one is braided all over with silk soutache, the next is decorated with a succession of button moulds, silk-covered, while the third is plain. The sleeve has a band covered with the all-over braiding at the wrist. Two long silk tassels dangle from the two lower button-moulds on each side. Then for more dressy occasions there is an elaborate waist of chiffon, matching the gown color, and another of ecru net and lace, and each of these combinations is so widely different from the other in general appearance that one would hardly recognize the fact that the same skirt figured in each.

When the steak is ready for the broiler smear over both sides with a thin coating of flour and butter. This keeps the juices in the meat and makes also a crispy crust on the outside. Another point is to heat well the gridiron and rub it over with mutton suet before the meat is put on it. If by chance, the blaze should grow too smoky from the fat, a little salt thrown on the fire will make it clear again.

Chicken cooked after the following recipe closely resembles prairie chicken; Large fowls are slowly steamed until tender. In a deep skillet place a heaping tablespoonful of butter, several slices of bacon, half a dozen peppercorns and a half a dozen whole cloves. Roll the pieces of chicken in salted flour and fry until brown. At the last moment add a cupful of cream, allow it to heat and serve at once.

BLOOD

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor. There is nothing else to live on or by. When strength is full and spirits high we are being refreshed—bone, muscle and brain, in body and mind—with continual flow of rich blood. This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take

The New Farmer.

(New York Independent.)

The change is overwhelming. The farmer of to day is a new sort of man; a creator instead of a destroyer. It has dawned upon him, with astounding emphasis, that he can obliterate all the forests of a continent inside a hundred years; can exhaust the oil wells and the coal mines; can not only make a garden into a desert; can even use up the nitrogen of the air. The new agriculture teaches him that he has all this to reverse and that reverse it he can. The future farmer will sub-irrigate his land, and defy drought as well as floods. He will become a scientific forester, and every farm will produce wood and lumber as well as wheat and apples. A single acre will produce what ten acres yield now. Women will work out of doors as heartily as men; in fact, they will be the horticulturists and the truck gardeners. There will be a closer relation between the producer and the consumer, ignoring a horde of middlemen who frequently waste more than is destroyed by ignorant help and insect foes combined. Under the alliance with the school the farm will be valued not only for its gross weight of products, but for its poems and its education. As our schools become places for applying as well as acquiring knowledge, our farm homes will become integral parts of the garden school and the school firm. The alliance between the home and the school will become very close. A valley full of farms is already the nearest to Paradise that we have, but the future will ten-fold its wealth and one hundred-fold its delights.

Tale of a Nail.

(From the Chicago News.)

It has been discovered that a happy miller's family living in the vicinity of the battlefield of Waterloo have derived a regular income since 1815 from the sale of a rusty iron nail. It was not many years after the battle that an eccentric Englishman on the strength of an eye-witness's evidence discovered that Napoleon's hat had been hanging on that nail, the Emperor having rested a while at the mill during the battle.

An offer for the old nail was immediately accepted by the previously guileless miller, who after the deal replaced it by another old nail and painted an inscription round it on the wall pointing out its historical value.

One nail after another has gone to enrich collections as priceless Napoleonic relics.

The Man At The Throttle.

(Denver Republican.)

The nation is ready to proceed to business. There is work to be done on every hand. The nation is expanding. It has vast undeveloped resources. The great West, North, South and Central, is undergoing an industrial transformation.

Every acre that is brought under cultivation is added wealth to the country at large. The earth has been producing abundantly. Railroad extensions are necessary. They have been delayed too long already. Mills and factories must go to full time.

Steamships must be ready to bring back the many thousands that went to Europe a year ago. Money will be freer now. Investment will be active. Prosperity is assured because the nation itself is sound to the core.

Mr. Taft has given to the business world the keynote to his administration.

She—I believe there are times when every man deceives his wife.

He—Sure. How else could he ever get her to marry him in the first place?—Philadelphia Record.

No More.

("To all men there comes a time when these words are more than words.")
We remember the time when our troubles were light;
Tenderly soothed ere we lapsed a "good-night."
In the slumber of childhood we quietly lay,
Recalling our sorrows at break of day—
No more.

Time went on, and we wandered afield,
Finding life with its lights and shadows revealed.
The years still passed, and then we found
Old comrades we sought were by earthly ties bound,
No more.

One by one all had vanished from sight,
As the fisherman's bark disappears in the night.
We gazed from the shore with straining eyes;
But softly, yet clearly the night wind sighs—
"No more."

But when in the dawn again we stand,
Together, upon a distant strand,
Our hopes and our dreams shall be real at last,
The memories arise of a dead, dead past—
No more.
—Charles Stockwell.

Some Undesirable Citizens.

Often in humor and facetiae there are grains of truth, and the humor only helps to make truth palatable.

The following "hits" even if obvious to all, may by repetition have some effect in calling the attention of unthinking men to certain social and moral defects in their daily conduct. There is nothing more in it than a list of undesirable citizens:

The man who is always grunting and growling and never says a pleasant word about anything or anybody.

The man who sneaks off to his favorite club or loafing place and only associates with his wife and children when he has to.

The man who thinks that rudeness is a sign of independence.

The man who stirs up class hatred among his fellow citizens.

The man who pushes others aside in order to get there first.

The man who is always running down the churches and throwing suspicion upon their members.

The man who kicks every little dog that crosses his path.

The man who never looks at the moral side of a question.

The man who is always promising and never performing.

The man who never has a bit of time for anything except to make money.

The man who stands on the corner and gawks at the women as they pass by.

The man who does a piece of work and does not do it the best he can.

The man who is silent when a righteous cause is challenged.

The man who never pays a street car fare unless it is demanded of him.

The man who buys 10-cent cigars for himself and round steak for the family.

The man who puts all the blame on the school teacher if his child is wayward and ignorant.

Two foreigners were watching their first game of baseball the other day.

"Vot vas a dancherous game, yah," said the German.

"Eet must be, monsieur," replied the Frenchman. "Why, even ze catcher wears a muzzle to keep him from biting ze people."—Wasp.
