PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers.
Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.
If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a cure, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.
Rubise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.
We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Another "Mary Ann" Problem.
A London paper, which is far enough away to be safe, started a Mary Ann problem thus: In the United States the Mexican dollar has exchange value of ninety cents.
In Mexico the American dollar has the same value. On the frontier of the United States where Texas joins Mexico there are two saloons, one on either side of the frontier.
A man buys a ten-cent drink of whiskey at the American saloon and pays for it with an American dollar, receiving a Mexican dollar as change. With this he crosses the border goes into the Mexican saloons, hands over the Mexican dollar for a ten-cent drink and receives an American dollar as change.
It is evident that the limit of his purchasing power is the length of time he can stand.
He finally wakes up with a bad headache and the American dollar with which he started.
Who paid for the whisky?—[American Grocer.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves.
When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result.
For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help.
Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by All Dealers.

Had Seen The Light.

One of our popular New England lecturers tells this amusing story: A street boy of diminutive stature was trying to sell some very young kittens to passers-by. One day he accosted the late Rev. Phillips Brooks asking him to purchase and recommending them as good Episcopal-ian kittens. Dr. Brooks laughingly refused, thinking them too small to be taken from their mother. A few days later a Presbyterian minister who had witnessed this episode was asked by the same boy to buy the same kittens. This time the lad announced that they were faithful Presbyterians.

"Didn't you tell Dr. Brooks last week that they were Episcopal kittens?" the minister asked sternly.

"Yessir," replied the boy quickly, "but they's had their eyes opened since then, sir."—Everybody's.

Pain anywhere stopped in 20 minutes sure with one of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets.
The formula is on the 25-cent box. Ask Genesis of the Umbrella.

Chicago News.
Umbrellas and parasols were used by the Eastern nations many centuries before the Christian era. The oldest chinaware shows pictures of ladies and mandarins shaded by parasols of patterns similar to those now in use. So little known, however, were those articles to Europeans that a dictionary published not more than 150 years ago defines the word "umbrella" thus: "A portable penthouse to carry in a persons hand to screen him from violent rain or heat." The first umbrella ever seen in the streets of London was carried by the philanthropist James Hanway, who died in 1786.

For many years after the introduction of umbrellas a man could not be seen carrying one with out being hooted for his effeminacy, particularly when passing a hackney-coach stand. The drivers of these vehicles regarded the umbrella in the light of a rival. For a long time the coffee-house and inns were accustomed to keep a single umbrella of great magnitude for the purpose of shielding customers from the rain as they passed from the door to their carriages.

It was not until about the year 1800 that the use of the umbrella became so general throughout Europe and America that a man could carry one without attracting the attention of passerby to a disagreeable extent. In Spain and Italy the article was first domesticated and France adopted it next.

The Guardian Angel.

Henry A. Ashmead.
Alone tho I seem to stand, Far out of sight of land, Foes round on every hand.
Taunting and jeering,
Under his sheltering wing, (Sent by the Heavenly King) Ne'er will my faith grow dim While he is steering.
Loud tho the thund-r crash, Vivid the lightning flash, Swiftly the current dash, Hell's forces assemble;
Is not my guardian near?
Bidding me feel no fear
And while his voice I hear Why should I tremble?

Clad in his robes of white, Grasping his sword of might,
Holding his buckler bright,
With which to guard me Unseen by mortal sight, Spirit of wondrous light Why should I fear the night When thou art near me!

Then when my race is run,
And work on earth is done,
He to my side will come To set me free.
Sent from on High to guide,
He will not leave my side, Until on the other side, Safely I'll be.

Pictures Sent By Wireless.

(From Technical World.) Another remarkable performance has been accomplished; one which in the interests of commerce will exercise a far-reaching influence upon every phase of industry from the one cent newspaper to the rapid detection of crime. This is the transmission by etheric agency of photographs, pictures of all descriptions, hand-writing, and designs—in short anything of an illustrative character.

This invention, which has been brought to a stage of commercial practicability, has been evolved by a young Danish engineer, who has already many epochmarking discoveries to his credit, Mr. Hans Knudsen, now resident in London. Both the transmitter and receiver are mounted upon small hollow rectangular pedestals similar in appearance to the sounding box of a phonograph and measuring only some two feet square.
These contain the coil, clock-work driving mechanism, coherer and other electrical details and connections. The lid of the boxes carry two small tables on which the plates are clamped, and which travel synchronously in two horizontal directions, longitudinally and laterally. In this particular installation pictures up to five inches in length by four inches in breadth can be handled, but there is no limit to its accomplishments in this connection since it is merely a matter of increasing the dimensions of the table to accommodate the size of the picture to be dealt with.

Above the travelling table carrying the picture to be dispatched stretches a fine strip of pliable steel suitably supported at either end by adjustable screws. From the center of this spring depends an inverted steel cone finely balanced, from the downward pointing apex of which projects a light lever carrying a very fine steel point which travels over the surface of the picture on the travelling table. Above the base of this steel cone, and separated there from by a space no greater than the thickness of a piece of paper is an electrical contact.

Now, owing to the cone and its needle being depended from the steel spring it is always vibrating but not sufficiently so as to strike the electrical contact above. This is only accomplished when the needle in passing over a raised portion of the picture which is specially prepared for the purpose is lifted to an appreciable extent. Then the contact is formed, the electrical connection is established and the impulse passes through the coil and the spark balls to the aerial and is dispatched on its passage through the air to be received by an instrument which is simply a practical reversal of the sender.

Plea For Sanitary Markets.

D. O. L. Howard, a celebrated entomologist, has been carrying on an investigation of the fly as a disseminator of disease germs; and his results are startling.

In one city sheets of fly paper were placed in every section in stores, market stands, and private houses.

These were collected every ten days and new sheets put in their place.

The papers were taken to the laboratory, the flies counted and the record filed.

The largest number of flies caught in any section of the city in 48 hours was 2600.

The number of bacteria found in a single fly varied from 550 to 6,800,000.

This is appalling, and certainly confirms the conclusion that the common house fly is an active agent in disseminating disease germs.

Now if the householders could see the swarms of flies which flock uncovered cuts and carcasses in the ordinary meat markets, it would not be long till the demand for sanitary markets would be loud and persistent.

When people learn that it is not only decent and desirable, but absolutely essential to the preservation of life and health, that food products be kept free from the contamination of flies and the dust and filth of the street, they will refuse to patronize markets which are not provided with facilities to protect food supplies against disease-breeding germs.

Science has said that flies must go and sanitary markets would help to eliminate these disseminators of disease germs.

The market man who has the foresight to provide a sanitary market will be in a position to command the custom of discriminating purchasers. In this work of compelling the creation of a sanitary market, public sentiment may be powerfully influenced by the action of women's clubs, composed as they are of those most vitally interested in wholesome and sanitary condition of food supplies.

Lived by the Clock.

One of the most prominent characteristics of Sir Robert Hartt, who has come home after forty years administrative work in China, in his extreme punctuality. He has always lived by the clock, for he says that was the only way in which he could get through his work. To his guests he would say, "Your early tea will be brought to you when you ring. Please ring once only, holding the button pressed while you count three Then, will it be convenient for you to tiffin at twelve sharp? If not I will tiffin myself and order for you at any time you like. I ride from three to five, there is always a mount for you if you wish it. Dinner at 7.30 sharp, and I must ask you to always excuse me at eleven." Needless to say, everything in his office went like clockwork. At 10 a. m. a line was drawn across the books, and late-coming clerks had to sign their names below, while at 4 p. m. the books were again opened, and every clerk had to sign again. No chance of slipping away before the proper time. For thirty years, it is interesting to notice, Sir Robert drank his tea sitting in the same big dining room chair which was always covered with a rug so no one else should use it.

Getting Even With Dickens.

When Charles Dickens was in Washington he met one morning on the steps of the Capitol a young Congressman from Tennessee whom the great novelist had offended by his bluntness. That morning Dickens was in great good humor. "I have," said he,
"found an almost exact counterpart of Little Nell." "Little Nell who?" queried the Tennessean. Dickens looked him over from head to foot and from foot to head before he answered. "My Little Nell." "Oh!" said the Tennessean. "I didn't know you had your daughter with you." "I am speaking of the Little Nell of my story, "The Old Curiosity Shop" sir." returned Dickens, flushing. "Oh!" said the imperturbable Tennessean, "you write novels, do you?
Don't you consider that a rather trifling occupation for a grown-up man?"—The Argonaut.

A clergyman was about to leave his church one evening when he encountered an old lady examining the carving on the front door.
Finding her desirous of seeing the beauties of the church, he volunteered to show her over, and the flustered old lady, much gratified at this unexpected offer of a personally conducted tour, shyly accepted it. By and by they came to a handsome tablet on the right of the pulpit.

"That," explained the good man, "is a memorial tablet erected to the memory of the late vicar."

"There now! Ain't it beautiful?" exclaimed the admiring old lady, still flustered and anxious to please. "And I'm sure, sir, I 'ope it wont be long afore we see one erected to you on t'other side."
