I am prepared to restore old pieces of Mahogany Furniture, no matter how badly broken up. These old pieces when repaired are quite valuable and far superior to anything of modern make. Being

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.
Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.
Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.
The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr.
Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.
The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

Fortunes of an Umbrella.

(M. A. P.)

"Many of my opponents," said Joseph Chamberlain is one of his tariff reform speeches, "are as ignorant of my proposition as was a certain farmer, many years ago, of the umbrella.

"This farmer had made a journey of some twenty miles on foot to a small town. As he was about to set off for home again a hard rain came up, and his host loaned him an umbrella—a novelty at the time—opening it himself so as to save his friend all possible trouble.

"A week later the farmer brought the umbrella back. The weather was bright and fine, but he held the contrivance open over his head.

"This instrument," he grumbled, "is more nuisance than it's worth. There wasn't a doorway, in the village that I could get it through, and I had to tether it all week in a field."

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-ons never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes, by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid.

Real Fun For Hallowe'en.

Every boy feels that he has a special right on Hallowe'en night to go out and have some fun. Somehow or other the fun is very apt to be at expense of other people. It may seem very amusing to take gates off their hinges and hide them; but this is cruel fun, for it makes work for the older people who have to put them back again.

Ringling doorbells is another standing joke that may turn out badly. Some boys once stood a board up against the front door, rang the bell and ran across the street to see what would happen. A woman came to the door with a lighted lamp in her hand, and the board fell against her, smashing the lamp, and setting her on fire, so that she was terribly burned. There are plenty of ways of having fun without injuring anybody, and a good plan is to get up a Hallowe'en party.
Let every boy hunt up the queerest old clothes he can find and dress in them, so that the others will not know him. If he has not a mask he can rub his face with burnt cork, or paint himself to look like an Indian, doing anything that will make it hard for the other boys to recognize him.—THE DELINE-ATOR for October.

The Coming Shortage in Iron.

The greatest danger to the world's industries at the present day is the threatened scarcity of iron, says S. Phillip, a writer in the September issue of the German Review Nord und Sud. The exhaustion of the world's iron ore fields, he contends, is far nearer than is generally realized, and he adds that the much talked of failure of the coal supply in the near future would be far less important than a dearth of iron.

The writer estimates the world's demand for iron during the next ten years at 60,000,- 000 tons a year, which means from 150,000,- 000 to 180,000,000 tons of ore. Ore containing less than 20 per cent. of pure iron is not regarded as worth smelting. It is therefore only the fields yielding more than 20 per cent. of the metal that enter the calculation.
The largest of these, that of Kiruncavara-Luossavara in Sweden, contain, according to the latest estimates, from 600,000,000 to 800,000,000 tons of ore, which would be sufficient to cover the world's needs for barely five years.

There are of course numerous other sources of supply, but of late it has become increasingly plain that the probable yield of these has been greatly overestimated.

Man and His Diet.

English newspapers are commencing on the discovery that the consumption of snails as food is increasing in London.

And John Bull, who eats pork without nausea, professes a curious repugnance to the tender, succulent, cleanly snail, which is nature on wholesome vine leaves.

We are creatures of habit in nothing more than in the food we eat. Two or three decades ago when frogs were introduced at dinners in this country many people felt a sense of repulsion.

For a century "frog eaters" was a term of derision which the English applied to the French. Yet there is no reason why the frog should not be eaten. It is clean and it is pleasant to the taste.

In both England and America the frog has made its way as an edible and lived down the ancient prejudice.

Horse meat, which is a common food staple in Paris, has not yet become a recognized article of diet in America, altho, it is said, a quantity of horse meat is eaten under various aliases.

But why shouldn't the flesh of a horse be as wholesome as the flesh of a steer or a hog? Lieutenant Shackelton's party in the South Polar region ate their ponies as fast as they died, and thrived on the diet.

While we will gag at snails in this country we eat shrimps with gusto, and the shrimp is nothing but a species of the sea vermin.
We shudder at thought of the Chinese dining on the delicate meat of the mouse; but we do not disdain the strong cheese, which are simply masses of living animals.

We loath the meat of the shark, which is a scavenger of the seas, but we relish nothing better than good pigs flesh.

Some tribes of Indians enjoy a mess of dog meat. Perhaps the same strong-stomached tribes would refuse to eat the indigestible pastries and confections with which white men stuff themselves.

There are dishes served at the best hotels at which even cannibals might balk if they knew what they were and what the effect would be on digestion. The cannibals, at least, do not give themselves gout or dyspepsia.

A philosopher has expressed his admiration of the prehistoric hero who first dared to eat an oyster. But why not equally admire the first person who ate fruit or meat, not knowing whether it would poison him?

There is room for more heroes who will risk their lives to extend the human diet.

What civilized man that dines in restaurants is not weary of the everlasting round of roast beef, steak, lamb with peas, Hungarian goulash and beef a la mode?

Praise, therefore, to the dauntless French those epicurean heroes who have given us frogs, snails and horse meat.

Drastic Treatment for Kleptomanics

Russian courts have developed a novel mode of treating cases of kleptomania. The leading storekeepers of St. Petersburg had been missing valuable articles and detectives traced them to a hotel whither they had been taken by Mme. Kresterz, who proved to have family property worth $250,000.
Among the woman's papers, was a certificate declaring that she was subject to fits of kleptomania. The case was accepted as genuine and the Court ordered Mme. Kresterz to pay three times the price of the goods she had taken. The storekeepers each get twice the price of the things they lost and the remainer goes to the municipal orphanage.
The plan might be adopted with advantage in this country. There is always hesitation in sending to jail a woman who develops a weakness for taking other people's property; there need be no hesitation in inflicting a penalty such as Russian courts have prescribed in like cases.

Tradition of an Old English Church.

At the church of St. Michael de Rupe, perched on the summit of Brentor, the Bishop of Exeter recently dedicated a new peal of bells. Tradition has it, says the Standard of Empire, that the church owes its erection to that elevated position—1130 ft. above the sea—to the vow of a merchant overtaken by a terrible storm while voyaging in England, that he would build a church on the first spot of land sighted. This happened to be the lofty crest of Brentor, and, accordingly, the church was built there. For some centuries the church has served as a landmark over a wide area, and services are regularly held in it.

A Crum of Comfort.

It was April first. Little Genevive was suffering from a painful abscess. The doctor had lanced it that morning, and she had cried for an hour. Now her mother was putting on the hot poultice which was so hard to bear. The little girl could not help crying.
"Mam! she said between her sobs, "who is that behind you?" The mother instinctively looked around, though she assured the child that there was no one there. "April fool!" was the reply, in a small tearful voice.
