One Kind of a Native Son.
Mr. Justus Harland, of the United States Supreme Court, is a loyal Kentuckian. When he was celebrating his birthday recently, and had all of his strapping boys around him, a guest said to James S. Harlan, the Interstate Commerce Commissioner; "I suppose all you Harlan boys were born in Kentucky?" "No madam," replied Harlan, "I regret to say that my brother Dick and myself were not born in our native state. We were born in Evansville, Indiana."

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause in congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else equally. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—concocted blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, but surely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure. If it's painful periods with women, same cause. If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That's surely a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure. Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense. We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Device For the Lazy.
(Providence Tribune.)

According to a "popular" magazine, it is now unnecessary for weary hotel guests to climb out of bed and call to the telephone central when they wish to learn the time. The publication in question explains why the whole laborious business is eliminated by a new device which may be attached to the bedpost or placed under the pillow.

It consists of a small telephone receiver connected with a "master clock situation" in the hotel. The guest awakens but is averse to rising. He presses the telephone receiver to his ear and pushes a button. A set of gongs will then strike the hour, the quarter and the number of minutes after the hour.

One of our foremost instructors has said that a great deal of research and a good many discoveries amount to nothing and there is reason to believe that he is right.

To enter a three story house which has open windows or doors a person can procure a ladder, climb to the roof, cut a hole in it and let himself down by a rope, isn't there an easier way.

The sleepy hotel guest may experiment with a bed telephone if he likes, but he could save himself trouble by buying a 98c. watch and two or three matches, in case he awakens in the dark.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere, a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the sneeze stage, to head of all colds. Box of 48—25c.

The Future of Marine Propulsion.
(Engineering Magazine.)

When the producer and gas engine are added to the list, the probable outcome of the keen competition for the field cannot be predicted. The whole subject of marine propulsion is in such a state of flux that anything may survive. It is possible that the steam engine may take a new lease of life for high speed ships and come back to its own once more. While all sorts of schemes are put forward, one test should invariably be applied; that is, that is the probability of derangement or breakdown. That probability is increased more than in proportion to boiler and the propeller. It is just like multiplying a number of efficiencies together—the ultimate efficiency as well as the ultimate reliability, is less than that of any single link. Consequently, the all-turbine or the all-steam engine machine is to be preferred on board ship to any combination for effecting economy unless the gain more than offsets the loss from probable repairs. One of the most useful devices for marine work would be a thoroughly reliable noiseless gear of high enough efficiency to make it worth using with a very high speed turbine. If it could be designed for variable speed as well as reversing, the steam turbine would soon replace the steam engine in all classes of ships.

End of Season Preserves.
(From Rural New Yorker.)

Crab Apple Preserves.—Core, but do not pool bright red crabs. Cook in a small amount of water till almost tender, and then add an equal amount of sugar. After the sugar is added cook very slowly in an earthenware crock till a rich dark color, and the juice will be like jelly.

FOR economy
in the table
expenses increase the amount of Quaker Oats; eat it
at least twice a day.
It does more than other foods and costs only a fraction as much.

Grape Preserves.—Pulp the grapes and cook the inside till tender enough to free from the seeds by passing through a colander. Add the skins and cook slowly till done, then add an equal amount of sugar. A small teaspoon of ground cloves to six quarts of preserve improves the flavor for some.

Tomato Preserves.—Select small yellow fruit free from imperfections. Prick each tomato once or twice with a fine needle, this is not as hard nor as tedious as it sounds and cook without stirring for a few minutes. Begin with only a pint or so of water—just sufficient to keep from burning—and when thoroughly hot turn over the fruit a syrup you have had boiling on the stove made in this proportion—half a pound of sugar to half a pint of boiling water. Have your sugar all melted before pouring over the fruit, and for each quart of tomatoes allow the half pound of sugar. Slice one lemon for each two quarts of fruit and cook all slowly about two or three hours on the back of the stove. If made right this will be a rich golden color and be delicious. Large red or yellow tomatoes can be used, but are not as pretty as the small ones.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

A Way the Guides Have.

Among guides there are classes as in every other walk of life. But in no walk of life is there so much professional jealousy, so much proneness to mutual boasting or mutual throat-cutting. This is a good thing in a way for the amateur hunter (for when guides fall out tenderfeet some by deer), one man being eager to show the amateur what kind of woodsman he is, compared with that other "front-door" guide. On the other hand, a tenderfoot, until he understands the humors of the guide element, is often mystified as to who is a guide and who is not. The man upon whom he has pinned his faith may not "make good"—bad luck oftener than bad guiding—and his rivals will not fail to draw the tenderfoot aside and say; "Well, what did ye expect? Next time," etc., etc.

There are cliques among guides. After a couple of hunting trips the amateur will discover that a certain guide is, among certain other guides, a "real old-timer," or the kind of guide who will "show ye deer if any man kin!" Among the woodsmen of the opposite clique the amateur must expect to hear that his guide is a "front door brave," a "hunter of mighty talks," or a newcomer in these parts who "couldn't tell a skunk from a deer beyond smelling distance!"—From "A Tenderfoot Goes A-Hunting," by Stephen Chalmers.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective Cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

The Hunter and the Wind.

In hunting against the wind in open forests more game is passed than many hunters would suppose. The animals see the man, note that he will pass them, and hide by getting as near to the ground as possible. If they scent him after he has passed, they evidently realize that the danger is over, though some, mostly the younger, inexperienced animals, then sneak off. Where game is very wild it is often in such localities as I have mentioned only possible to approach them with the wind outdistancing the latter, because a big game animal at rest depends on it's nose to save it from danger in the direction from which the wind comes, and on it's eyes to watch the side from which it can get no other warning.—From "Tracks and Tracking," by Josef Brunner.

An Old-Time Sherlock.
(Glasgow Medical Journal.)

One night many years ago Dr. Whitelaw was walking along with the messenger when he was set upon and knocked down in a lonely part of the road. His pockets were rifled and he was left lying on the road with a fracture of the fibula. One of the articles stolen was a clinical thermometer with which he had that evening taken the temperature of a patient suffering from enteric fever. He remembered the temperature registered, also that he had not shaken down the mercury before putting the thermometer back in his pocket, and he communicated these facts to police. Some time afterward a thermometer registering the identical temperature was discovered in a pawnshop in Glasgow, and by this means the police were enabled to track the doctor's assailants and to arrest them in one of the Glasgow theatres.

AN OPINION.—"What impressed the writer (in the Educational Review) was the admirable system that prevails in the management and in every department of work; that kindly personality and tact, the influence of which is so grateful to young people; the genial sympathy in the relations between teacher and pupil, and the interest which each one seemed to feel in the work of the day. AN EDUCATION UNDER SUCH CONDITIONS IS INDEED A GREAT ASSET."
