PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—conveys blood pressure away from pain centers.
Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.
If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.
Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.
We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Existence After Death.

Discussing the question, "Is there Existence After Death?" in Harper's Bazaar, the Hon. John Bigelow, speaking with the authority of over ninety years of experience, argues thus:
The results of the science of the Rationalist at best are but hypothesis, the possible fragments of truth, but in no sense absolute truth. They are vessels of which any man may drink, but none of them are like Joseph's cup, "with which he divineth." We infer that the sun that disappears this evening, will reappear the following morning but that is not the conclusion, but only an inference of science.

The inference that the sun that disappears this evening, will reappear to-morrow is faith, without which the scientist is as blind as the beast that perisheth, for neither can demonstrate the truth of what is not.
That can be rendered even probable only by faith, which, as the Apostle Paul, with scientific accuracy, said to the Hebrews, "is the assurance of things hoped for; the proving of things not seen. For therein the elders had witness borne to them. By faith we understand that the worlds have been framed by the Word of God, so that what is seen hath not been made out of things which do appear.

But faith is not material, but spiritual, and what advantageth it a man to know what has been, without the faculty of trusting at discretion upon the consecutive relations of events and their probable consequence.
In what respect, then, ought our faith in sunshine to-morrow to differ from our faith in their continuity of life after parting with its earthly garments? We cannot demonstrate neither can we deny either, while for both there is every probability and for neither any demonstrable probability.

A Penny Novelette Boiled Down.

As he rode slowly over the trail the crack of a rifle was heard. . . Bill Dalton lay dead with a ball through his temple.

II
The next morning Bill Dalton arose and though somewhat pained by the wound through his head, set forth to find his comrades. As he reached the canyon his horse shied and lost his footing. Horse and rider went toppling down two thousand feet to instant death.

III
Bruised and wounded, he got up three hours later, and in a moment of desperation rode off twenty miles to the cave where his brother desperadoes lived. As he entered, a low "Hist!" came from the deepest corner of the cave. There was an instant's pause, the flash of a bowie, and Bill Dalton bit the dust, never more to rise.

IV
Somewhat enfeebled, but strengthened by the fresh morning air. Bill Dalton left the cave next day. Ill-luck attended him. Riding all alone through the mountains, he was startled by a horrible sound. Looking up he saw an avalanche! It came on with terrible speed. It reached him, pushed him into a chasm two miles below, and buried him under a thousand tons of rock and stones.
Poor Dalton was dead!

V
The next afternoon he was arrested in a frontier mining town while in the act of robbing a bank, but it turned out that good old Bill was engaged to the banker's daughters, and had only come home to claim his bride.
Wedding bells. Happy ever after.

Flies and Typhoid.

Among the experts there seems to be little dispute that flies are a most important factor in the transmission particularly of typhoid germs. Many of them consider that flies cause more typhoid fever epidemics than polluted water or milk. The secretary of the Colorado state board of health, Hugh L.
Taylor, gives a case of where a milk supply undoubtedly became infected with typhoid bacilli through flies which had access both to the milk and a privy vault used by a person having the fever. Secretary J. H. Townsend of the Connecticut state board of health considers it significant that typhoid fever is more prevalent at seasons when flies are most numerous, and urges the importance of so disposing of sewage as to keep it away from flies. Dr. Henry D. Holton of Brattleboro, secretary of the Vermont state board of health, gives this case:—"For several years one or more persons living on a large farm, which received its water supply from mountain springs, had typhoid fever in the autumn—new farm hands generally being the sufferers. No pollution of the water supply was discovered, but investigation showed that the farm privy was unscreened and swarming with flies, which had free access to the house and its food supplies.

After the old closet was abandoned for more modern arrangements, and the house supplied with screens, no cases of typhoid occurred in the neighborhood."

Rev. Dr. Phillips Begins New Work.

Rev. C. T. Phillips, D. D., of Jacksonville, last week took up the duties of traveling evangelist for the home mission board of the Baptist church in New Brunswick.
He will make his home in Jacksonville, but will travel through the province under the directions of the board. His first visits will be to Knowlesville and Biggar Ridge, Carleton county. After that he will go to Andover, and on June 20 he will preach a dedicatory sermon in Rowena where the congregation have recently renovated their church.

Animals and Music.

Every one is familiar with the dog which will raise his nose in the air and howl in distress whenever the young lady of the family sings. It was recently discovered by an experiment at the New York Zoological Garden that uncivilized dogs or wolves, are also displeased with music. A gramophone was taken about the galleries and selections, vocal and instrumental, were played upon it before the cages of the lions and tigers, elephants and camels, birds and monkeys, as well as the wolves. The wolves did not like it, but the tigers and lions were delighted.
One lion rose on his hind legs and kept time with his front paws. The camels crowded round the instrument and listened with rapt attention. They even stuck their noses in the horn to discover where the music came from. The elephants kept time to the harmony by flapping their ears, and would now and then trumpet their applause. The orangutan listened in ecstasy, although a blue-nosed baboon was manifestly offended, and scolded all the time. A blue-coated macaw in the bird-house danced a cake-walk to the "Wearing of the Green."

How They Got Information.

An illustration of the superior cunning of the Germans was given by Major Baden-Powell the other day. Speaking of the imminent invasion, he observed that he had recently had some conversation with an officer in "a certain foreign army." He asked this officer if it were true that the war office of his country was informed of every detail about England. The other replied with a grave face that it was perfectly true; that they had details of all the eastern countries, that every hamlet was marked, that the names of the chief land-owners and officials were known, nay, even the names of the village postmasters. "And how," asked Major Baden-Powell, "did you get this information?" "Why," replied his informant, "we laid out ten and sixpence and bought a county directory."

Wanted Them to be Sorry.

To the leader of a band in Omaha, jocularly spoken of in that locality as "the worst in seven different states," there once came a man with a request that the band play at a cousin's funeral.
"Is it a military funeral?" asked the leader.
"Not at all," was the reply. "My cousin was no military man—in fact, he was never even interested in matters military. Nevertheless, it was his express wish that your band should play at his funeral." The leader was surprised and flattered.
"Is that so?" he asked.
"Yes," responded the other. "He said he wanted everybody in Omaha to be sorry that he died."
