

Scott's Emulsion

is the original—has been the standard for thirty-five years.

There are thousands of so-called "just as good" Emulsions, but they are not—they are simply imitations which are never as good as the original. They are like thin milk—SCOTT'S is thick like a heavy cream.

If you want it thin, do it yourself—with water—but don't buy it thin.

HER INOCULATION.

BY MINNIE J. REYNOLDS.

Aunt Philena Clark was going down to Boston to see the girls. Everybody in Essex Junction knew "the girls." They were the two nieces of Aunt Philena, who had been left orphans in infancy and whom she had brought up. The people of Essex Junction were neither stupid nor ignorant. They had read of the great worlds of Boston and New York and Burlington and Montpelier, though they did not see them very often. Essex Junction had sent a thin, but continuous stream of young people out to these great worlds, who had taken just as able a part there as if born there. So the Junction felt as good as anybody, and followed the careers of its exiles with friendly interest. It had rejoiced in the success of Aunt Philena's girls, and had admired their nice clothes and ready money when they came home to spend their summer vacations in Aunt Philena's little white cottage on Main Street. And they rejoiced now with neighborly good feeling, when the girls sent Aunt Philena money to come down to Boston and spend the winter with them. In forty years of married life and several of widowhood Aunt Philena had never seen so far before. She made her will before she went.

One of the nieces, Fanny, was a trained nurse in Boston. The other, Imogene, was social secretary to a number of rich women, who paid her to come in daily and keep their correspondence in order. Together with another "girl," who was a buyer for the lingerie department of a Boston department store, they had a very comfortable, well-furnished little apartment of their own, where a colored maid kept house for them very satisfactorily. It seemed the abode of wealth and luxury to Aunt Philena, who had never had a bathtub or a hired girl in her life, and she looked up to her nieces as captains of industry and examples of prosperity. When they took her to the theatre and stopped in on the way home at a brilliant, glittering drug store, for tall, slender cups of hot chocolate with whipped cream on top and little fancy crackers on a plate, Aunt Philena felt that for the first time she understood what people meant when they talked about dissipation. When they took her out to a fifty-cent table d'hôte dinner on Sunday, she felt that it was reckless.

She considered it her duty to remonstrate with the girls over this unnecessary extravagance. But when they laughed and kissed her, and told her that she cooked many a table d'hôte dinner for them when they wouldn't have got any other, the old lady succumbed and gave herself up to one round of pleasure. She felt that the girls were new and superior types of womanhood, and was disposed to accept their opinions on anything.

The first Sunday Aunt Philena had been too tired to go to church. But the next Sunday she was up bright and early, and at the proper hour, she and Imogene, the secretary, started for church. The church was in a theatre, which confused Aunt Philena to start with. The preacher was a lady, which was still more confusing. Aunt Philena had read of such things, however, and she kept her head and listened closely. The sermon seemed contradictory of all the theology she had ever heard, and it spoke of many unfamiliar things. "Karma," "aura" and "astral plane" were some of the terms which she could not make and sense of. But Aunt Philena was game. She looked a little solemn and puzzled as she came out of "church," but she made no comment, though Imogene looked at her quizzically, and cast a glance out of the corner of her eye at the lingerie buyer.

The next day Fanny came home from a case, and that night she asked Aunt Philena if she did not want to go to a lecture on hygiene down on Boylston Street. The lecturer was a man this time, who expounded a new system of health promotion. His theory was in favor of a hardening process from infancy up, and so far as Aunt Philena could make out he seemed to hold that all human ills resulted from the wearing of woolen undergarments.

Aunt Philena still said nothing. Her devotion to the "little girls" was unshaken. But when they got home and the full light of the sitting room showed her face plainly, they saw that she looked troubled.

"Now, aunty, what is it?" said Fanny; "didn't you like the lecture?" Aunt Philena said nothing.

"Maybe it was church yesterday," said Imogene, a little remorsefully; "I ought not to have taken her there the first time. Was it church, Aunt Philena?"

The old lady showed signs of perturbation. "Land sake!" said she. "No hell, no flannel petticoats, no anything!"

Christmas Cookery.

CHRISTMAS MINCEMEAT.

This, like the Christmas pudding and the Christmas cake, is better made early, providing always you use a good recipe. When baking powder is used instead of eggs for the raising of the pudding or the cake, then it must be used almost as soon as made. Ingredients: Half a pound of beef suet, and the same of raisins, with three-quarters of a pound of currants, also of apples, three ounces of mixed peel, one ounce of mixed spices, the juice and rind of two lemons, half a pound of sugar, a wineglass of brandy, a little salt, and three cloves pounded. All the ingredients that need it, such as the suet, the raisins, and the apples, may be chopped separately; this will reduce the labor when all the things are mixed together. Let the mixture stand half a day, stirring it occasionally, and after that put it into a stone jar or jars tied down securely, and keep in a cool place.

ROAST FOWL WITH CHESTNUT STUFFING.

Remove the skins from a quart of Spanish chestnuts, pour boiling water over, and remove the brown skin. Put the nuts in fresh water with a little salt, and boil tender. While hot mash them through a wire sieve, and then season with pepper and salt, and moisten with butter. Put the stuffing into the breast; truss it for roasting. Dredge it with salt, pepper, and flour, and baste well with dripping. A quarter of an hour before serving, rub the breast well with butter, dredge with flour, so that it is frothed and a good brown when it comes to table. Serve with brown gravy, and garnish with rashers.

Plum Pudding.

You simply must have the good old plum pudding on the dinner table on Christmas Day. Here is a receipt for "one of the best." Ingredients: One pound each of suet, moist sugar, currants, and raisins, a quarter of a pound of candied peel, half a pound of bread crumbs, half a pound of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one grated nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of cloves, two teaspoonfuls of allspice, eight eggs, and half a cupful of brandy. Chop the suet finely, stone the raisins, clean the currants, and cut the peel into thin chips. Put the flour into the mixing-bowl with the salt, add spices, sugar, raisins, peel, bread-crumbs, and currants. Beat the eggs, add the brandy to them, pour into the dry ingredients. Stir for twenty minutes, until the ingredients are perfectly mixed. Butter a mould, fill it, tie a floured cloth tightly over it, and boil from four to six hours. Serve with a sauce made as follows: Beat to a cream two tablespoonfuls of butter with two-thirds of a cupful of powdered sugar. Add to this the unbeaten whites of two eggs; beat to a cream flavor with vanilla or nutmeg.

LA GRIPPE

Arrested, and Consumption Cured

Mr. G. D. Colwell, of Walkerville, Ont., was stricken down with La Grippe in 1906 and it left him in very bad condition. He says: "I was all run down and bordering on Consumption. I could not sleep at nights, had awful sweats, and coughed nearly the whole time. This is how I was when I began to take Psychine, in a low nervous state; but from the first bottle I began to improve. It did marvels for me and brought me back to health in no time, making a new man of me. It fortifies the body against the attacks of La Grippe and is a sure preventative. I always take Psychine if I feel a cold coming on and it puts me right in no time."

Rural Phones

Solve These

Every-Day Problems

Problem I. Bad Roads:—

The old way was to curse nature and idly await sun's return.
The new way is to telephone for what you want, and smile because you get the information in a thousand part of the time.

Problem II. Weather Forecasts:—

The old way was to work on belated information, and to excuse the losses with "That's what the farmer has to put up with."
The new way is to telephone every morning to the weather man and overcome much of the needless hustle and bustle of the old way.

Problem III. Prices Current:—

The old way was to ask a neighbor or trust to the newspapers.
The new way is to get information in the nick of time over the phone, thus knowing when to sell and when to hold.

MONTREAL TORONTO WINNIPEG VANCOUVER REGINA

Problem IV. Emergencies:—

The old way was to waste half a morning looking for the doctor. Effort in this direction often procured as its only result the information: "doctor is out."

The new way is to call up the doctor on the phone, and know instantly what can be done pending the medical man's arrival.

Problem V. Help:—

The old way was to allow men to go on boys' errands—waste half a morning waiting for Smith's only to find that his harrow was already loaned.
The new way is to make the phone your errand boy—buy, borrow, beg by means of the "silent partner."

We have prepared a Booklet describing fully a rural phone system. Hadn't you better instruct us to send you this interesting bit of information, seeing it costs you nothing.

The Christmas (December) ROD and GUN

In wealth of matter and variety of subjects, everyone interesting to sportsmen, the Christmas (December) number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont., is notable. An appropriate Christmas tinge is given to the first two stories and adds something to the interest both will evoke. Hunting, fishing and exploring papers, widely different in character and displaying in a remarkable way the wonderful resources of the Dominion in these several respects fill a number no sportsman can afford to miss. The study of the wild waterfowl on the Pacific Coast by Bonycastle Dale will appeal to all lovers of bird life while the stories of days with the deer, mountain sheep, bear, wolves and a fox will recall many pleasant experiences. Bird shooters will revel in the papers dealing with duck and woodcock, while one on Grouse Shooting in the Motherland is included by reason of its exceptionally strong descriptive force, giving Canadian sportsmen a pleasant change and enabling them to enjoy a different view point to that generally taken by them. Mountain climbing in East and West, a mysterious Indian story, fishing, from tuna and salmon to trout, and many other items fill a number which should be included by all interested in the great our doors, in their Christmas reading. They cannot fail to find interest and pleasure in its perusal.

The Latest Wonder.

The newest wonder is Brennan's gyroscope railroad car, which runs on a single rail, can run on tight rope, go up and down hill, turn corners swiftly and safely, all on the principle of the spinning top, which does not fall down as long as it goes on spinning. Two heavy gyroscopes rotating in vacuums in Brennan's car keep the car upright, and will not let it fall over. The principle was tried out two years ago in a model in Berlin. Its working was publicly shown last week in England with a twenty-two-ton car, which carried forty persons, running on two wheels up and down a straight, single-rail track and round a circle track 220 yards long. Enormous speed—150 miles an hour—is predicated for railroad cars of this type, as well as great economy of power. It sounds fantastic and incredible, but the deeper one reads 'into its story the more serious and astonishing it appears. Louis Brennan, the inventor, has been at work for thirty years on the idea. He is the author of a successful torpedo, which bears his name.—Harper's Weekly.

No Double Boxes

(Boston Record.)

Telephone girls sometimes glory in their mistakes if there is a joke in consequence. The story is told by a telephone operator in one of the Boston exchanges about a man who asked her for the number of a local theatre.

He got the wrong number, and, without asking to whom he was speaking, he said, "Can I get a box for two tonight?"

A startled voice answered him at the other end of the line, "We don't have boxes for two."

"Isn't this the — theatre," he called crossly.

"Why, no," was the answer, "this is an undertaking shop."

He cancelled his order for "a box for two."

Men Who Cheat Themselves.

I have known employees actually to work harder in scheming, shirking, trying to keep from working hard in the performance of their duties, says Orison Swett Marden, in "Success Magazine," than they would have worked if they had tried to do their best, and had given the largest, the most liberal service possible to their employers. The hardest work in the world is that which is grudgingly done.

The youth who is always haggling over the question of how many dollars and cents he will sell his services for little realizes how he is cheating himself by not looking at the larger salary he can pay himself in increasing his skill, in expanding his experience, and in making himself a better, stronger, more useful man.

Earache, Toothache!

To Cure the Pain in Ten Seconds and Get Instant Relief,
Nothing Equals

NERVILINE

Fifty years ago Nerviline was used from coast to coast and in thousands of houses this trusty liniment served the entire family, cured all their minor ills, and kept the doctor's bills small. To-day Nerviline still holds first rank in Canada among pain-relieving remedies—scarcely a home you can find that doesn't use it.

From Port Hope, Ont., Mr. W. T. Greenaway of the Guide newspaper staff writes: "For 20 years we have used Nerviline in our home, and not for the world would we be without it. As a remedy for all pain, earache, toothache, cramps, headache, and disordered stomach, I know of no preparation so useful and quick to relieve as Nerviline."

Let every mother give Nerviline a trial; it's good for children, good for old folks—you can rub it on as a liniment or take it internally.

Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse anything but Nerviline. 25c per bottle, five for $1.00, all dealers, or The Catarrhzone Co., Kingston, Ont.
