NEWS FROM THE COUNTY.

Bristol.

The flour mill is full of new grain. Farmers expecting a good turnout must make some effort to dry grain at home. Telephone in connection. Carding promptly and satisfactorily done.

East Florenceville.

A most delightful evening was spent at the home of Mrs. Ada McAnn, at East Florenceville, on Tuesday, Oct. 12.

At 8.30 a number of her friends arrived, and, although much surprised, she warmly welcomed them and showed them into the spacious parlors.

All felt rather guilty at first, as the evening was wet, and considerable mud was carried in on the Brussels carpets. However being assured by Mrs. McAnn that the mud was immaterial, as she and her mother intended leaving in a few days for the "Sunny South," the crowd proceeded to enjoy themselves. Some old-fashioned games were indulged in for a time, but, finding that our friend, Mr. P. R. Semple was rather strict in a game of kingdoms the game was abandoned. About this time the gas lights went out for lack of carbide, and although causing considerable laughter, was soon in working order again.

About 10.30 all repaired to the large dining room, where a delicious luncheon was served. B. G. Rideout proved an efficient waiter, while Mr. Kirkpatrick sat demurely by, stirring his coffee with his right hand. Toasts were the order of the evening and were heartily responded to by A. D. McCain, D. T. Day and W. E. Kirkpatrick.

B. F. Smith then came forward, and after giving a most eloquent and appropriate address, presented Mrs. McAnn with a travelling companion, and silk parasol with silver handle.

At 11.30 the merry crowd dispersed, after extending to Mrs. McAnn and her mother, their best wishes in their new home in the far South. All agreed that it was the most successful and enjoyable evening of the season.

Ferrer's Death to be Avenged.

London, Oct. 18—That the execution of a revolutionary leader in Spain should have caused the worst riots in Paris since the Commune, the general strike in Rome, demonstrations in numerous cities in many countries and an extraordinary outburst of feeling in South America is a social phenomenon demanding more than passing attention. There has been no rioting in Spain itself by way of a public demonstration beyond the usual daily bomb explosion at Barcelona, but this apparent calm may be altogether deceptive.

A partial explanation of this international psychic mystery lies in the fact that the periodic outbreak of mob spirit in Paris was due. It wanted only an excuse for letting itself loose. The demonstration in Rome was less spontaneous; the occasion was simply seized by the Socialist leaders there and elsewhere to record the international solidarity of the radical cause, and they certainly succeeded in making in the aggregate a formidable showing.

It is the first time in Europe that an Anarchist has gained a considerable amount of public sympathy. Spain made a bad tactical blunder in shooting Ferrer. It is not true that his trial was private. There were present 200 reporters and 250 spectators, but the proceedings fell far short of Anglo-Saxon ideas of judicial procedure.

No witnesses were called, but the prosecution made free use of what may be described as affidavits. These applied not only to the specific charge of inciting the Barcelona riots, but covered events in Ferrer's life extending back for several years. The judges really took up the problem of deciding whether Ferrer was a good or bad man. Having decided that he was bad they condemned him to death.

This travesty of justice in the present crisis of Spain's political fate was worse than folly, and it will bring far reaching consequences. Even the pope foresaw the danger involved to the church and endeavored to intervene, but unsuccessfully.

The position of the church has been rapidly growing precarious for several years past, and responsibility for the present blunder will be laid solely on the clerical party. The first blow in revenge will fall unhappily upon the young king. If the ingenuity of the combined anarchist clique of Europe can compass his destruction, his life today is in greater danger than that of the Czar. The leaders of the domestic and foreign anarchists declare openly their determination to Clothes are only covering after all, but gracious what a difference the style of them makes! The modern man is fastidious and must be in the fashion. The style of his Coat is of even more importance than the material of which it is made. We are specialists in "styling," and present more ideas in dress to our patrons than any other tailoring establishment in town. And our suit creations are universally admired.

Valluna, the leader of the Spanish anarchists, who was banished six years ago, said today:

"Ferrer's death will be avenged on Alfonso personally. We hold him responsible, although he is only the tool of the Spanish priesthood. Ferrer was an educationalist. He founded 109 schools for scientific education in Catalonia. This excited the enmity of the priesthood, and Alfonso gave them their revenge."

"Spaniards will never forgive him, and we are simply waiting our opportunity. The men and means are ready. The Queen has nothing to fear from us. I give the monarchy in Spain one more year of life. Then we will have a republic."

At Yorktown.

(Wasp).

They were commemorating the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown with the usual fiery speeches. At the close of the regular program the chairman announced with a wink to those near him:

"We are happy to have with us on this auspicious occasion a representative of King Edward if not of King George. Ladies and gentlemen, I beg to present to you Major Arthur Forester, of the First Royal Dragoons who will now say a few words."

The major looked a little surprised as he strolled to the front of the platform, polished his eyeglasses, and began with a drawl:

"It has long been a wonder to me how Cornwallis, with the pluck of the British army, held Yorktown against a miserable force of militia for only a few weeks. But ladies and gentlemen, I've seen your town today, and my wonder is now that he cared to hold such a forlorn looking spot for even one day."

"Shake!" broke in the chairman. "The drinks are on me."
