TWENTY sticks of dynamite, fifty pounds of black powder, a quantity of cartridges and a box of matches, carried almost unprotected in a wooded box, were found among the baggage unloaded from one of the cars of the train to Boston from St. John Friday last. The box had been in the baggage car all the way from Bristol, N. B., with four hundred passengers on board. Experts on explosives say there was sufficient powder and dynamite in the box to blow the North Station to pieces. The discovery of the box caused excitement at the station. The police were notified and Michele Senia of Bristol, N. B., was arrested and held on a charge of transporting dynamite without having it marked "Dynamite." Senia was unable to account clearly for having the explosive in his possession. He had been working in the neighborhood of Bristol for some time on one of the railroads, when he determined to leave for Italy.
