A Baby.

I

A baby's feet, like sea-shells pink,
Might tempt, should Heaven see meet,
An angel's lip to kiss, we think,
A baby's feet.

Like rose-hued sea flowers toward the heat
They stretch and spread and wink
Their ten soft buds that part and meet,
A baby's feet.

No flower-bells that expand and shrink
Gleam half so heavenly sweet
As shine on life's untrodden brink
A baby's feet.

II

A baby's hands, like rose-buds furled,
Whence yet no leaf expands,
Ope if you touch though close upcurled,
A baby's hands.

Then, even as warriors grip their brands
When battle's bolt is hurled,
They close clinched hard like tightening bands.

No rosebuds yet by dawn imperaled,
Match, even in loveliest lands,
The sweetest flowers in all the world—
A baby's hands.

III

A baby's eye, ere speech begin,
Ere lips learn words or sighs,
Bless all things bright enough to win
A baby's eyes.

Love, while the sweet thing laughs and lies,
And sleep flows out and in,
Lies perfect in their paradise.

Their glance might cast out pain and sin,
Their speech make dumb the wise:
By mute glad godhead felt within
A baby's eyes.

When Is a Man Really "Broke"?

At one of the missions in a large city an ex-convict, who after leaving prison, raised himself to a position of dignity and affluence, delivered the following dictum to several members of the "Down and Out Club":

"A man," he said, "must be broke in more than pocket to be really broke." That may be a slangy way of stating a truth, but it is nevertheless a profound truth.

The only man who is really broke is he who is spiritually broke. Right in any one of our Canadian cities may be seen men—young men too—who are penniless and who live, like parasites, on others—associates, friends and relatives.

They positively refuse through pride to take a job, which, as they put it, is beneath their powers and dignity.

How silly! For any job that will temporarily put money in one's pocket, feed and clothe one, until one can get something better, means social and spiritual salvation.

Not only does pride go before a fall, but too often a silly pride keeps a man down after he has fallen.

The strong man—he who is not spiritually broke—accepts anything that will start him on the way to renewed independence.

Only when reason, good sense and moral energy abdicate the throne of a man's soul, can such an one be said, in the vulgar phrase, to be down and out—clean broke.

!Paid the Penalty.

The death sentence of Atonio Aroscha and Leon Seppelil, for the murder of Edward Green, was carried out in the jail at Andover at one minute past six Tuesday morning. The condemned men walked firmly to the scaffold and showed no lack of courage. Death was instantaneous. At the inquest at eight o'clock, a verdict was returned that the prisoners had died by process of law.

The prisoners were visited by Rev. Fr. Ryan, of Indian Point, at 9 o'clock Monday and he remained with them until the end. Until nearly 3 a. m. they were engaged in devotional exercises and then took about two hours sleep. On arising they received the Holy Communion, and were waiting for the executioner when he entered their cell at seven minutes to six. They were quiet, calm and composed and after their hands had been manacled behind them the procession started for the scaffold. Following the executioner were Sheriff Tibbitts and Father Ryan, the latter reciting the Litany of the Blessed Virgin. Aroscha and Seppelil, each in charge of one of the guards, came next.

The way to the scaffold was through the centre of the court house and was a trying ordeal for the condemned men. They mounted the steps which lead from the kitchen door to the platform with firm tread and were quickly placed in position on the drop by the executioner. But a minute or two sufficed to place the straps round their knees. Aroscha said, "Good-bye, boys," as he took his last look at the spectators gathered round before his head was enveloped in black cap. Seppelil also said something in Italian and then stood quietly awaiting his turn. When Radcliffe had adjusted the ropes round their necks he gave a signal to Father Ryan, who began the Lord's Prayer in English. As the closing words were reached the executioner released the catch and the drop fell.

Death was instantaneous from dislocation of the neck. In the fall the strap which pinioned Aroscha's knees became loose and his limbs twitched after he fell, but death had already taken place. Dr. R. W. L. Earle of Perth, the physician in attendance reported that the pulse of both men beat for about twenty minutes, which is about the usual time in such cases. Those who witnessed the execution from the scaffold were Sheriff Tibbitts, Wm. Johnson and Jacob Kilburn, the guards, William Armstrong Deputy Sheriff of Carleton County, George Dionne and Alexander Stevenson of Perth. Father Ryan and Dr. Earle were also present, besides the representatives of the press. Several residents of Perth and Andover witnessed the final scene from the windows of the court house, which overlooked the scaffold.

Early in the night quite a crowd assembled outside the court house in anticipation of getting a glimpse of the execution. Many arrived in teams from across the border, and at first it was feared there might be some trouble. The arrest of one of the unwelcome visitors who was found crouching under a verandah, had a salutary effect and the crowd melted away some hours before the execution. There were not more than a few people outside the jail when the final scene was enacted.

After remaining suspended for half an hour the bodies were taken down and placed in the caskets.

Dr. Welling, the coroner, summoned a jury for eight o'clock. The evidence of Johnston, one of the guards, who saw the execution, was taken and Dr. Earle was examined as to the cause of their death, which he said was due to the dislocation of the spinal column in each case. A formal verdict was returned. Those on the jury were: M. S. Sutton (foreman), Bruce Ritchie, J. H. Weaver, Guy G. Porter, Geo. Dionne, H. Dickinson and M. M. Armstrong.

As soon as the inquest was concluded the caskets were taken in a double team to Indian Point, where Father Ryan celebrated solemn High Mass. Interment was made in the Catholic burial ground.

An obstinate cough can often be relieved by four or five drops of kerosene on a lump of sugar. The taste is not bad—the smell is the worst part.

Alternate gargling every hour with a teaspoonful of salt in a glass of hot water and a teaspoonful of powdered borax dissolved in the same way will relieve a sore throat very quickly.

Spirit of camphor used when one is first threatened with a cold will nearly always break it up. The proportions are ten drops of spirits of camphor to ten teaspoonfuls of water, a teaspoonful to be taken every twenty minutes. A trifle of sugar may be added to make this dose more palatable.

A cloth or handkerchief saturated with spirits of camphor and laid on the pillow where the fumes can be inhaled will allow you to sleep comfortably if you are suffering with a cough and the suffocated feeling incident to a cold. It is particularly soothing in a bronchial cold. Rubbed well into the chest it relieves the lungs. Many a case of pneumonia could be averted by the liberal use of camphor.

Lemon juice has much to do with good health, particularly when the liver is not active. The juice of half a lemon in a small glass of water each morning before breakfast will tone up the system wonderfully.

A bad headache can often be relieved, if not cured, by the juice of a lemon in a cup of very hot water. In about an hour, if the headache is not gone, take half a teaspoonful of bi-carbonate of soda in a cup of water and this will completely rout any headache that comes from a disordered stomach.

Hats for Midsummer.

The first warm days suggest the coming Summer, and Summer calls up visions of travel, country tours in the auto, lazy days on the water and at the water's edge. Warm weather hats suggest the purpose for which they are worn. Thus we see the soft manilla crushed to a becoming shape, it's only trimming a gay scarf of polka-dot or Roman-stripe silk, hinting at golf as readily as the always popular sailor does of boating, fishing and kindred recreations. The quaint scoop-shaped bonnet is as becoming as it is smart. A pretty hat for motor tours is almost covered with gauzy chiffon veils, which are a necessary protection for the hair and complexion. When the hat is to be covered with the veil the trimming is of the simplest and a convenient shape must be considered.

Two hats for dress are refreshingly new and summery, one being massed with flowers, the other, the daintiest type of lingerie hat, made of fine lace and mull.

And last, but possibly the most important is the hat for traveling and the stylish new veil. The trimming of ribbon and wings lies close to the hat, and the satin-bordered veil is draped entirely over the hat with a point falling directly in front.—THE DELINEATOR for June.
