Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.
In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

In The Office.
As the Stenographer maintained her cold and haughty demeanor the country sales manager handed her a card inscribed, "Keep smiling." The stenographer glanced at it and handed it back.

"It's the only way to do," urged the country sales manager. "It's the way I always do."

"Yes you do!" said the stenographer scornfully.
"Sure," said the country sales manager. "Every time and all the time. I'm like sunshine in the house."

"Your some kind of a shine," said the stenographer.
I'm Radiant Robert," persisted the country sales manager. "When I pass by the brass signs at the door they look dull. Haven't I chased away gloom for you many's the time?"

"I'd as soon you'd chase yourself just now," said the stenographer. "This is my busy time of day."

"Smile, then," pleaded the country sales manager.
"Honest, I will when your's gone," said the stenographer. "I can't while you're around. You give me the fantods. I didn't notice that you were smiling very hard when you came out of Mr. Picket's room this morning."

"I was just resting my face a moment," said the country sales manager.
"I wish you'd rest part of it now," said the stenographer.

"I'm resting my eyes on you," declared the country sales manager.
"It's your mouth I wish you'd rest," retorted the stenographer. "It needs rest and quiet. Change of scene might be good for it, too. I wish you'd try it. I hear you've been loosing money playing poker again."

"Not enough to amount to anything," said the country sales manager. "Not enough to keep me from smiling. You ask the fellow who told you if I didn't keep smiling."

"Funny, wasn't it?"
"It did seem kind of funny. It was the best kind of a joke, really. I had three aces and a pair of nines and the other fellow—"

"I don't want to hear about it," said the stenographer, tartly.
"That's all right, but I was smiling," said the country sales manager.

"I saw a fat party slip on the sidewalk on the street at noon," remarked the stenographer. "He smiled, too, but I think he sat down to hard for it to be genuine."

"He was a sport, nevertheless," the country sales manager maintained. "I guess he belonged to my society. 'Keep smiling is our motto. Hide the aching heart behind a smile. Here you've been jabbing me for half an hour—ever since I spoke to you, and—"

"It seems like hours to me," interrupted the stenographer.
"You've been throwing the hooks into me and dragging them thru my feelings," pursued the country sales manager. "Still I've been smiling. I smile still. To give you an instance: I was sitting in the streetcar coming down town this morning and a girl trod on my foot."

"Why don't you say your corn?"
"I will if you want me to. That girl must have weighed all of a hundred and thirty pounds and you get a hundred and thirty pounds pressure on the foot—"

"Corn."
"Acher. How will that do for a compromise? Anyway, she was one of the most beautiful creatures I ever saw in my life and she was so sorry she hurt me that tears almost food in her eyes."

"It's nothing to have them standing. They ought to have run."
"How could they when she was standing herself? Anyway, as I said. She was passing fair."

"To the conductor?"
"Child!" said the country sales manager, reproachfully.
"I'm glad she did step on your corn," said the stenographer. "I guess she belonged to my society. We always step on the corn of selfish brutes who keep their seats while we're standing. I suppose you smiled?"

"I did not," confessed the country sales manager.—Chicago News.

Everybody Lucky.

(London Spare Moments.)
An old farmer of the county of Durham, called at a roadside public house where he was well known. The landlady asked him to buy a ticket for a lottery they had on there.

"Well," he said, "I have naught in my pocket, or I might."
"Oh, that's a'roost, John," she says, "take he ticket, and pay for it any time."

Some time later John called again, and the landlady asked him if he knew who had won the lottery.
"No," he said, "who won?"

"Well, I hardly durst tell you, but oor Sam won. Wasn't he lucky."
"Aye," said John, "he was lucky. 'And who was second then?"

"I durst hardly tell you. Who would you think now?"
"I couldn't say," said John.
"Well, it was oor Sally. Wasn't she lucky?"

"Aye, she was lucky," said John. "And who was third," he asked.
"Well," she said, "you would never guess, and I might as well tell. I was third. Wasn't I lucky?"

"You were," he said. "Did I ever pay you for that ticket, Missus?"
"No, John, you didn't," she said, fawning upon him.
"Well," said John, "isn't I lucky."

He Did, at Once.
(The Tatler.)
A pompous traveller put up for the night at a small provincial hotel, and before retiring left explicit instructions to be called in time for an early train. He was very earnest about the matter and threatened the proprietor with all manner of punishment if that duty were neglected. Early in the morning the guest was disturbed by a lively knocking upon the door. "Well?" he demanded sleepily. "I've got an important message for you," replied the boy outside. The guest was up in an instant, and opened the door and received from the boy a large envelope. He tore it open hastily, and inside found a slip of paper on which was written in large letters, "Why don't you get up?"

Croup positively stopped in 20 minutes, with Dr. Shoop's Croup Remedy. One test alone will surely prove this truth. No vomiting, no distress. A safe and pleasing syrup—50c. Sold by All Dealers.

Lost Energy
Restored by Psychine.

Mr. Geo. Pratt, of Clarkson, Ont., says: "Four years ago my son Wilbert was so run down, thin and emaciated, that we thought he was going into a decline and feared he would never pull through the severe cold of the winter months. The boy had no appetite and seemed to have lost all energy and interest in life. He was altogether in terribly bad shape. His condition caused us the gravest anxiety."

"Fortunately I procured PSYCHINE for him and this soon gave him a new lease of life. It is really remarkable how rapidly this splendid medicine brought about a change. After taking one or two bottles he was hardly recognizable as the same youth. PSYCHINE effected a speedy cure and he was soon able to work about on the farm again. Today he is a robust young fellow, and if anything, stronger than his brothers. Nothing in the way of hard work seems to affect him. I cannot speak too highly of PSYCHINE. It certainly saved our boy and made a man of him."

Prevents the children taking cold, wards off that terrible malady La Grippe and completely fortifies them against disease. It should always be used for colds, a grippé, weariness, loss of appetite, etc. Send to Dr. T. A. SLOCUM, Limited, Spadina Ave., Toronto. Sold by all druggists and dealers, 50c and $1.00.
