

Mother and Child.

(Boston Advertiser.)

Referring to the care of only one child, I have found in a magazine this query of an earnest mother: "How far can a mother sacrifice herself without, in the end, sacrificing her family, too?"

To begin with, I think any mother who can regard as a sacrifice the giving up of what were her old social obligations to the care of her child or children, is making her first mistake. Why call it a sacrifice if you do give up outside interests? Why give up all outside associations if it is to seem a sacrifice? Is it well to give up everything to care for a child? Is it well for the child to do so?

These are questions which mothers who think are always asking. I do not think that it is necessary to go to an extreme in either direction. If one is to give her best to her child, and that is what a mother should strive to do, she must not taint the gift with a feeling of reluctance. A child responds very readily to the mental condition of its mother, and I believe truly can feel the effect of a possibly irksome feeling on the part of the mother in the care it is receiving.

Of course a child is a selfish little animal, demanding more and more as its understanding develops, and if a mother, under the impression that she is doing her duty, waits upon every whim and gives her entire time to the child, she will soon have a contract upon her hands most difficult to fill.

The mother should have times which the child should know to be his. Its bathing time in the morning with a little play time, and an hour before going to bed, should always be regarded as the right of the child. Supper at 5, with a jolly time following, and bed at 6 until a year old or even more, and 7 after two years. Have your children long for that period of fun and the going to bed will not be hard. Music, games, and later, reading and story telling, make going to bed a delight. After 7 your time is your own, for under this training no young child is out of bed. Make this evening play time a period of enjoyment for yourself. Be a child with your children.

Fortify now against the Grip—for it comes every season sure! Preventives—the little Candy Cold Cure Tablets—offer in this respect a most certain and dependable safeguard. Preventives, at the "sneeze stage" will, as well, also surely head off all common colds. But promptness is all-important. Keep Preventives in the pocket or purse, for instant use. Box of 48 for 25c. A Canine Marvel.

A contemporary relates an extraordinary story of the strength of a dog's jaws, which, as it is given with full details, we accept in good faith. The strength of a dog's jaws and teeth were never more exemplified than in the case of a Ross-shire gamekeeper, whose collie was unfortunate enough to be caught in a steel vermin trap. The gamekeeper, gun in hand, was soon on the scene, but in the short time the dog had become quite infuriated with pain. Having nothing suitable for muzzling the animal and fearing to place his foot upon the trap spring with the dog's jaws free; the gamekeeper placed the gun barrels in the dog's mouth and held them there while easing the spring. With a vicious snap the teeth closed on the cold

"I can truthfully say that I believe that, but for the use of your Emulsion I would long since have been in my grave. I was past work—could not walk up-hill without coughing very hard."

THIS, and much more was written by Mr. G. W. Howerton, Clark's Gap, W. Va. We would like to send you a full copy of his letter, or you might write him direct. His case was really marvelous, but is only one of the many proofs that is the most strengthening and re-vitalizing preparation in the world. Even in that most stubborn of all diseases (consumption) it does wonders, and in less serious troubles, such as anemia, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, or loss of flesh from any cause the effect is much quicker.

Do not fail. Get a bottle of SCOTT'S EMULSION—be sure it's SCOTT'S and try it.

Heroes of the Northwest.

There is a story told of a Royal Northwest Mounted policeman who perished in a blizzard while struggling through to a distant post. In his frozen fingers was found a slip of tattered paper on which he had pencilled his last message: "Lost; horse dead. Am trying to push ahead; have done my best." And this is typical of the indomitable pluck which has enabled a mere handful of men to carry British law and order from the Great Lakes to the frozen Arctic, where detachments are now posted along the coasts of Hudson Bay and Beaufort Sea westward to Herschell Island and the mouth of the Mackenzie river. Primarily, the mounted policeman keeps order, but in the far north he is also magistrate, doctor, coroner, explorer, revenue and customs officer, fire ranger, scout, boatman, constable, marine and soldier. When the mail carrier's dog sledge reaches the bounds of civilization the mounted policeman takes over the bags and carries them 500 miles farther north. It is all in the day's work to him, and the mounted policeman, as some one has said, will under take anything, from minding a baby to hanging a horse thief. Among the Indian tribes of the northern plains his word is law, and British law is unhesitatingly obeyed.

Nothing in the way of a Cough is quite so annoying as a tickling, teasing, wheezing, bronchial Cough. The quickest relief comes perhaps from a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And besides, it is so thoroughly harmless that mothers give it with perfect safety even to the youngest babes. The tender leaves of a simple mountain shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its remarkable curative effect. A few days' test will tell. Sold by All Dealers.

Whims of Fashion.

(New York Times.)

From the long waisted, puffed and puffed gowns of the Louis XV epoch, which are to be revived for women's wear, according to the latest prediction of the Parisian modistes, veraciously reported in the Marconi wireless despatches, it will be an easy step to the huge crinoline and ruffs of an earlier epoch. Moralists who have lately been complaining that the woman has been more in evidence than her dress will find consolation in the knowledge that because of the huge size and queen shape of the gown it soon will be difficult for the eye of the observer to locate its inhabitant.

Already the sheath gown has been modified by an overskirt. When the gown itself expands the coiffure will grow upward. Perpendicular structures will supplant the low, spreading, bungalow effects of the present styles in hair. It will all be very interesting.

There is no more fascinating or bewildering study than the fashions in women's dress, dictated by hired men in Paris, exploited first by female persons every body knows about but nobody knows, and obediently adopted by the women of the whole world who can afford to be fashionable.

The revival of the directoire mode has been short lived, like the directoire itself. The styles of Louis XV. will not last longer. In art, in literature, architecture, furniture, that was a purely fantastic age. Before long we shall be back in the Tudor epoch. The men will have to do something with their attire. Plain black coats, trousers, and short hair do not match with these revived extravagances of habit.

You Know Such People.

It is astonishing how blind some people are in their business methods, how small in their personal and domestic affairs. To be economical and saving is to possess a virtue of the most coveted kind, but to be so narrow-minded as to be blind to splendid business chances is a losing play in a rational game. There are many people who will not spend a cent on anything unless they can follow it through a maze of travelings and can see it coming safely back to them laden with pecuniary pollen. There are others who believe in getting everything possible out of the other fellow but never, under any circumstances, giving an iota in return. You know of such persons, don't you? Sometimes you call them contemptibly mean, and if you don't say it, you think it. The next time these penny-wise and pound-foolish persons come across your path tell them this story:

One day as a farmer of extraordinary meanness was starting out for the town to do his weekly shopping—for even he had to buy something for the support of his family—his wife came out and asked him to buy her a darning needle.

"What's the matter with the one I bought you last winter?" asked the farmer.

"The eye's broken out," she replied.

"Bring the needle here," he said. "I'm not going to allow such extravagance. I'll have the needle mended."

The woman was wise in her generation, and made no protest. She brought out the broken needle.

The economical father made away into the town, and stopped first of all at the blacksmith's shop. He took out the needle and handed it to the blacksmith. "I want that mended," he said.

The blacksmith knew his customer, and keeping his face perfectly straight, said the eye would be mended in an hour's time.

The farmer rode away, and the blacksmith walked across the street and bought a new needle for a farthing. When the farmer called again, the blacksmith gave him the new needle.

The farmer looked at the smooth, polished surface of the steel, and remarked that it was a good job. "How much will it be?" said he.

"Twopence," said the blacksmith, and the farmer as he paid it remarked that he knew that the needle could be mended, but his wife would have gone to the expense of buying a new one if he hadn't interfered.

MADE-AT-HOME RHEUMATIC TREATMENT Some Simple Precautions Which Will Prevent a Recurrence of Attacks. A prominent citizen, who had for years suffered from rheumatism and rheumatic gout, has been giving his friends the benefit of his experience, and incidentally a copy of the prescription which was of material assistance in effecting a cure.

In the first place, he found that every time he partook freely of acid fruits his old trouble returned; and, secondly, he learned that it was absolutely essential to keep the kidneys active. To do this it was necessary to drink plenty of water. Occasionally he would dissolve a lithia tablet in the water to assist its action on the kidneys. The treatment is as follows: Procure from your druggist:— Fluid Extract Cascara..... 1/2 oz. Syrup Rhabarb..... 1 oz. Carriana Compound..... 1 oz. Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla 5 oz. Take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime. This is valuable information. It can be mixed at home. Saw, the prescription.
