

GAS DISTENDED HIS STOMACH

Caused Palpitation, and Prevented Sleep—When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of "Nerviline."

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveler of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would awaken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the traveling man; keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

For general household use Nerviline has no equal; it will cure the aches and ailments of the entire family—refuse anything but Nerviline, 25c. per bottle, five for $1.00, all dealers or the Catarrhzone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Princess Mary of Wales (the new king's only daughter) celebrated her thirteenth birthday on April 25. A publication which gives prominence to court affairs says: Every year the likeness to her mother becomes more marked, while in some points she also resembles the Queen Mother. There is no trace in her of the Guelphic type of countenance, though it may show later in the eyes, as in her father. At present she promises to be exceedingly pretty, probably the prettiest princess of the royal family in a century. She has been brought up very simply and sensibly, and has had her full share of games and romps with her brothers.—St. John Globe.

The Latest Belts.

Belts this season are soft in effect. They are shown in soft silks, satins, metal mesh and metallic-finished fabrics and they tightly girdle the figure. Stiffer belts are also shown on Russian-blouse suits and on semi-fitting princess gowns, and are held loosely into place through applied straps. Many of the belts have buckles of the same material with either a touch of hand embroidery to make them more attractive or they are braided. A belt of soft, dark blue silk, for instance will have the buckle covered with the silk decorated with a design braided in narrow dark blue soutache and fine gold braid.—From Woman's Home Companion for May.

Rudyard Kipling has this week published a poem on 'The Dead King,' the argument of which is summed up in the line 'Our King asks nothing of any man more than our King himself has done.' The concluding stanza is as follows:—

'We accepted his toil as our right, none spared, none excused him.
When he was bowed by his burden his rest was refused him.
We troubled his age with our weakness, the blacker our shame,
When he heard that his people had need of him, straightway he came
To us. As he received so he gave, nothing grudging, naught denying.
Not in the last gasp of his breath when he strove for us, dying.
For our sakes without question he put from him all that he had cherished.
Simply as any that served him he served, and he perished.
All that kings covet was his, and he flung it aside for us.
Simply as any that died, in his service he died for us.'

The poet, in an envoi, bids him 'who in the realm to-day has choice of the easy road, or the hard to tread' and 'would sell his soul to remain in the sun' to depart 'nor look on our dead.'—World Wide.

John Stuart Mill on Immortality.

"With respect to the immortality of the soul, I see no reason to believe that it persists, nor sufficient ground for complete assurance that it survives; but if it does there is every reason to think that it continues in another state, such as it has made itself here, and no further affected by the change than it would be by any equally great event during its sojourn on earth, were such possible; consequently in all we do here we are working in our hereafter as well as in our 'now.'"

William and Lawrence were in the habit of saving a part of their dessert from the evening dinner for consumption the next morning, and in accordance with this custom two small cakes had been placed in the cracker jar for them. William, being the first up on the following morning, and being hungry, went to the jar. He found only one cake, and a large piece had been bitten out of that. Full of wrath, he went upstairs and roused his brother.

"Say?" he demanded. "I want to know who took that big bite out of my cake?" "I did," sleepily answered Lawrence. "What did you do that for?"

Well when I tasted it. I found it was your cake, and so I ate the 'other one.'—Youth's Companion.

While in India Lord Kitchener visited an out-of-the-way district where a new fort had been erected. He was astonished to find that it was commanded by a hill close by. "I congratulate you, colonel," said Kitchener to the officer who had selected the site. "What a capital fort; Er—when do you begin to remove the hill?"—Boston Transcript.

$1,000 for a Coat of Paint

It seems hard to believe, yet that is the sum of money that a coat of Martin-Senour Paint 100% Pure added to the selling price of a certain house.

For several seasons, a shabby weather-beaten house had been offered for sale. A little girl who had been for a piano lesson told her mother on her return that her teacher was not at all nice to her. "Why what did he do?" said the mother. "He asked me right in the middle of my lesson how many turnips there were in a bushel!" When the child went for her next lesson, she was accompanied by her mother, who said to her teacher, "Why did you ask Nellie how many turnips there were in a bushel?" "I never asked her such a question," replied the surprised teacher. But he added, after a moment's reflection, "I did ask her how many beats there were in a measure."—World Wide.
