A serious accident happened on Friday morning the 3th inst. at B. F. Smith's mill, when Charlie Chapman had the fingers of his right hand severed by the lath machine. Charlie took a great interest in machinery and had been of late seizing opportunities to learn to saw laths. He was cleaning away some material from the saw when the accident happened. Two of the mill-men kindly accompanied the injured young man to the home of Dr. D. W. Ross and one afterwards went with him to his home where the wound was attended to by Dr. Ross and Dr. Somerville. This accident is a great blow to the family, but Charlie is bearing his affliction well, and his cheerfulness and patience promise hopefully for his future. Some of his friends have been advising him to secure an education, by means of which to successfully counteract his misfortune. He had previously done well at school and thus has the way nicely paved for taking advantage of such advice. Man after man can be referred to who had his way to prominence directed by similar accidents, and who resolutely headed for the hill of success undaunted and undismayed.
