The cable, which extends from Dover to Cape Gris Nez, is the first of its kind laid in tidal waters. The tests so far made have given satisfactory results. WHITE MOTHER MOSCOW.'

Barbaric Splendor of the Russian Royal Palaces.

Though St. Petersburg is nominally the capital of Russia and serves its purpose in being 'a window through which the Russians can look into civilized Europe,' the true cap-Ital is 'White Mother Moscow,' as the mujik affectionately styles the vernable city. What the Acropolis was to Athens and the Capitol to Rome, the Kremlin is to Mossow, says the the 'Rosary Magazine.

It is a city within walls which measure churches, a convent, a monastery, three imperial galaces, the Senate House, the Synodical buildings and the Tower of 1van the Terrible.

Owing to the curious Russian custom of constantly renewing with whitewash, paint their buildings, the first glimpse of Moseffiorescence of bulbous cupolas, spires, pin-The nacles and pyramids colored bright blue or green or gilt with gold, astounds the traveler who associates age wth grayness and

> At the same time one cannot out fee attracted by the striking individuality of this city, which, scorning he conventions of modern Europe, glitters proudly in barbaric splendor. Within the Kremlin the Czars receive their crown 'from God and the Fatherland,' and here they come subsequently to speak and act in all the most decisive moments of their reigns. Hence it has caused some wonder that Nicholas 11. dld not go to Moscow to proclaim war with Japan.

> The Russian Court is said to be the richest in Europe, the miminum revenue of the Czar being estimated as $7,500,000. Besides the grade palace in the Kremlin, with its mag. nificant throne room, the Czar has twelve residences in or near St. Petersturg, including the Winter Palace, where six thousand people can be entertained, one of the most spacious and striking homes of European royalty, and the Hermitage, which contains one of the best art collections in the world.

At Peterhof there is a group of royal residences and parks, with gardens rivalling those at Versailles, and at Tsarkoe Selo, about twelve miles from St Petersburg, ther are several palaces, on one of which Catherine the Great lavished wealth, decorating the facade with figures of ornamentation which cost her subjects more than three million

The interiors of the palaces are still more magnificent; walls are encrusted with care lapis lazuli; chony floors are inlaid with floral designs in mother of pearl, ceilings are lined with amber, one room in the Kremlin is lined with the purest gold, and everywhere precious marbles and exquisite mosaics are to

The splender of the Russian jewels exceeds all powers of description; we know that Catherine the Great's coronation robe was so heavily ladened with gems that it took twelve chamberlains to support it. The Czar's throne which belonged to the Emperor of Constantinople, is of finest ivory studded with precious stones, and that of the Czarina contains 1,223 rubies and 876 diamonds, be sides pearls and turquoises.

Splendid fetes are given in the Winter Palace during the season, and one is almost weary of traversing the many gorgeous halls which lead to the state ballroom, where the towering white marble pillars are mirrored by the polished floor, where a soft light is diffused by lamps concealed by tropical plants and ferns rising in banks against the walls and where, mingling with the strains of the | call. orchestra one hears the warbling of birds hanging in gold cages under tall palm trees.

The present sovereigns have simple tastes, however. Even in the great Winter Palace the private rooms belonging to the Czar and Czarina are simple decorated and furnished in the English style, the hangings being of pretty cretonne and the furniture of light

It is interesting to know that of all her thousands of wedding gifts, the Czarina brought only three to Peterhof, and that two of these were presented by the Japanese soon to be at war with Russia. One is an enormous sea eagle, larger than life, in beautiful carved ivory. The other gift is of equal artistic value, being a threefold screen representing a foam flecked, stormy, sea, wonderfully worked in gray and green ish white silks. - Montreal Witness.

Vegetables Vs Tonics

A diet of vegetables is better than a course of tonics that come in bottles, and the egeterian menu may be a thing of infinits variety as well as delicious and satisfying

For instance, one may lunch heartily and healthfully on asparagus on toast a salad of peas and beets, onions egg, and lettuce, and a timbale of spaghetti.

A tomato omelet is a dainty morsel Spin-this season, more than ten heavy meat dish, es, and a bowl of chopped nuts, stradded pineapple, banana and cream is more like ambroise than all the plum puddings and flaky pastry on the oldtime house-wife's panto make the vegetable southe have ready bout half a pound of any carefully made and well-flavored vegetable puree spinach, cabbage, Brussels sprout, carrot, turnip tomato, or celery. Then put one gill of water and an ounce of butter into a pan with a pinch of sait. Directly this comes to the boil st'r in an ounce of flour, stirring it well with a wooden spoon for two or three minutes, put in the puree, and just remove the par for a little, add the yolks of two eggs, one at a time and one whole egg beaten to a stiff freth. Have ready a papered souffle dish, fal it three-quarters of the way up bake it in a het oven for ten minutes, and serve at once first removing the paper and wiping the dish Serve at once, for if kept waiting the souffice will fail and become tough.

A tomato omelet is a delicious dish and simply made. Peel and mince four tomatoes Mix one tablespoon of flour with a little milk till it is quite smooth, add three beaten egge to it, a little salt, and a dust of cayenne, my reason to any intending purthe tomatoes, and a half of aminced sha:lot. Fry the omelet in the usual way, and serve

To concoct summer pancakes have ready chopped. Fry a small chopped onion in butter, work a teaspoonful of flour with the teacupful of spinach. Season to taste, and make all very hot together. Make a number of thin pancakes, spread each with a layer of spinach, and roll up. Butter a round baking tin, place in the pancakes, pour over a mixture of three eggs to a lint of milk, tak ing care that there is just enough to cover the panckes. Place in a moderate oven, and bake for about twenty minutes. Turn on to a hot dish and serve. - G.obe and Commercial Advertiser.

The Origin of the Bluebird.

Manabozho, the Sun God, was sleeping his winter's sleep on the big island just above the thunder-dam that men call Niagara. Four moons had waned, but still he slept. The frost draperies of his couch were gone; his white blanket was burned in holes; he turned over a little. Then the ice on the river cracked like near thunder. When he turned again it began to slip over the big beaver-dam of Niagara, but still he did not awake.

The great Er-Beaver in his pond flapped his tail, and the waves rolled away to the shore and set the ice heaving, cracking and groaping; but Manahezho slept.

Then the Ice-demons pounded the shore of the island with their clubs. They pushed back the whole river-flood till the channel was dry, then let it rush down like the end of all things, and all together shouted: 'Manabozho! Manabozho Manabozho!'

But still he slept calmly on. Then came a soft, sweet voice more gentle than the mating turtle of Miami. It was in the air, but it was nowhere, and yet it was in the trees, in the water and it was in Manabozho, too. He felt it and it awoke him. He sat up and looked about. His white blanket was gone; only a few tatters of it were to be seen in shady places, and the shreds of the fringe with its beads, for i had taken root and was growing into little flowers, with heady eyes. The small voice kept crying, 'Awake, the spring

Manabozho said: 'Little voice, where are you? Come here.'

But the little voice being everywhere was nowhere and could not come at the hero's

So he said: Little voice, you are nowhere because you have no place to live in; I will make you a house.'

So Manabozho took a curl of Birch bark and made a little wigwam, and because the voice came from the skies he painted the wigwam with blue mud, and to show that it came from Sun-land he painted a red sun on it. On the floor he spread a scrap of his own white blanket, then for a fire he breathed into it a spark of life, and said: 'Here little voice is your wigwam.' The little voice entered and took possession, but Manabozho had breathed the spark of life into it. The smoke vent wings began to move and to flap and the little wigwam turned into a beautiful Bluebird with a red sun on its breast and a shirt of white. Away it flew, but every spring it comes the Bluebird of the Spring. The voice still dwells in it, and we feel that It has lost nothing of its power when we hetr it cry: 'Awake, the Spring is coming .-Ernest Thompson Seton, in the 'Century.'
