If any one had suggested ten years ago that Southern planters might come to regard corn as a profitable rival of cotton he would have been ridiculed. Yet it has come to pass that the corn-crop of Louisiana, which was twenty-five million bushels in 1899, grew to fifty-one millions in 1909, and the crop for this year is estimated at between sixty and one hundred million bushels. The cotton crop, on the other hand, has decreased from seven hundred thousand bales in 1899 or two hundred and seventy thousand in 1909, and corn yields about three times as much an acre as cotton.—The Youth's Companion

The Census Bureau's mortality reports show that tuberculosis still leads all other diseases in the number of deaths it causes in the United States; but the margin over pneumonia is now exceedingly small. The area covered by the reports includes more than half the United States. In this area there was an increase in the number of deaths from pneumonia last year, over the year before, of more than nine in every hundred thousands. The total was over seventy thousand, and is within seven of the number of deaths from consumption.—The Youth's Companion

RED CABBAGE PICKLE

This is nice to have on hand for a winter salad or as a relish to serve with fried oysters. Cut the cabbage in fine shreds, spread out on a large platter and sprinkle with plenty of salt. Allow to stand for three days, then drain. Heat enough vinegar to cover it well. Add an ounce of whole cloves, all spice, mace and peppercorns. Put into jars and pour the vinegar over the cabbage. Seal up in small glass jars as the most convenient way of handling.

TO CLARIFY FAT.

When fat has been used three times for frying, clarify by cooking it with several slices of raw potato. When potato is browned to a crisp, cool fat a little, strain through cotton or several thicknesses of cheesecloth, cool and cover ready for use.

Highway of Peace.

It was the unanimous opinion of the delegates to the recent Interparliamentary Conference at Brussels that all great straits and inter-oceanic canals should be free to commerce, unhampered by any act of war. One of the German delegates submitted the outline of a treaty intended to produce that desirable condition.

Special reference was made to the Straits of Magellan, but the plan would include such waterways as the Bosphorus, the straits of Gibraltar and Dover, and the North seas, as well as the Suez and the Panama canals.

The United States has always insisted that the straits connecting oceans and bounding nations are international highways, open to all ships in time of peace. The Interparliamentary Conference seeks to keep them open in time of war, so that there may be no blockading or other interruption to peaceful business.

Fortification of such waterways is not inconsistent with their neutralization. The Suez Canal has been neutral since 1887, and no workable act may be done within its waters or within three miles of either entrance. It is the general understanding that the Panama Canal will also be open to the commerce of the world, and that such fortification as may be erected will be for the protection of the highway from the depredations of isthmian revolutionists as much as for its preservation against other hostile attacks.

The demand for neutral highways for commerce is an interesting illustration of the growth of the commercial spirit. Men used to go to war for trade. They now demand peace for the same reason.—The Youth's Companion.

A DAILY THOUGHT

So long as we love, we serve. So long as we are loved by others I would almost say we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

DID MRS LOWELL PARDON HIM?
"Simplicity" is a relative term when applied to one's manner of living. There are those to whom it means dinners of not more than four courses, and to others it may signify a bowl of bread and milk on the kitchen table. An amusing story of James Russell Lowell and an English peer, which is reprinted in the Louisville Times, is apropos of this reflection.

One day Lowell met in Boston an English peer, who had been a great friend of his in London, and he invited the peer out to Cambridge to dinner. About this he had some misgivings, for he lived very simple, keep only one servant. He went so far as to say, as the horse car jangled Cambridge ward:

"You know, Lord Blank, we are very simple people, Mrs Lowell and I."

"Oh said the earl, 'I love simplicity.' This remark fortified and Lowell. It kept up his fortitude even when Mrs Lowell informed him, when he got home that there was nothing for dinner but creamed fish. But his spirits must have sunk a little when at table, he essayed to help the simplicity loving peer to the only dish, and the latter said, politely:

"If Mrs Lowell will pardon me, I think I will omit the fish course."

These are hard times for trees of all sorts. An obscure and destructive disease now threatens the chestnuts with extinction. Fortunately the peanut is still safe—since it does not grow on a tree.—The Youth's Companion.

Commander Peary's famous ship, the "Roosevelt," seems as unable to remain in retirement as the man for whom it was named. From the arctic it may now go to the tropics, to be used as a wrecking-vessel in raising the hull of the "Maine."

One of the most interesting uses for the aeroplane is that suggested by General Brun, the French minister of war. He proposes to establish an aerial messenger service across the Sahara. The great desert would make a spacious aviation field, but the operator whose machine was obliged to alight in the midst of it would find himself in a sorry plight for water.—The Youth's Companion.

Not many government employes have a less impressive-sounding title than that of "waste-basket examiner." In the Treasury Department there are two women who are so described. The contents of the waste-baskets in the department pass through their hands. Every bit of paper is carefully examined, and all is sorted according to quality. Last year the department realized nine teen thousand dollars from the sales of its waste paper.—The Youth's Companion.

An association of reputable business men in New York is keeping a close watch on the advertising of various firms for the purpose of stopping misrepresentation of goods and the consequent fraud upon the public. They are devoting their attention to furs at present, and the merchant who attempts to sell dyed rabbit skin for any other fur will find himself in trouble. New York fortunately has a law which makes it a misdemeanor to make any false statement about goods offered for sale. I covers "fake" bankrupt and fire sales, as well as misbranding. The rigid enforcement of such a law in all the states would be gladly welcomed by thousands of families.—Youth's Companion.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for a list of testimonials. Address F J CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Mr Balfour began the political campaign on Wednesday in Edinburgh. There are many among his supporters who are dissatisfied with his lack of vigor and are clamoring for a fighting programme. They wanted him to pour red hot shot into the liberal ranks in the shape of an undertaking to repeal the land taxes when the Conservatives came into power and an explicit declaration in favor of tariff reform. Mr Balfour failed to satisfy them in either particular. Even his treatment of the question of the payment of members of Parliament is considered disappointing by those of his followers who wanted a lead. The Unionists are hopelessly split over this matter.

Calia Ward Howe died at Middleton

Middleton, R. I. Oct. 17.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe died at her summer home today. Mrs Howe was taken ill with a chill a few days ago.

[The famous writer and philanthropist was born in New York on May 17, 1819, and was the daughter of Samuel and Julia Rush ward. She was privately educated, and in 1843 married Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe who died in 1876. With him she conducted The Boston Commonwealth an anti-slavery paper, prior to the civil war. After the slavery question was settled she became active in woman's suffrage, prison reform and the cause of peace. She was a Unitarian preacher, lecturer and writer. Her Battle Hymn of the Republic is widely known, and she was the author of many other works. Mrs Howe visited St John a few years ago, attending a meeting of the Association for the Advancement of women. At that time she preached in the Unitarian church and was compelled to address an overflow meeting in the Institut, so great was the demand to hear her. Maud Howe Elliott and Laura E Richards are daughters of Mrs Howe.
