A Housewife At Eighty.

Marian Harland, whose name is associated with practical writings on cookery and domestic affairs, is eighty years old, but neither looks nor feels anything like her age. She is still a very active woman. She keeps house, writes books and newspaper articles, addresses club meetings, keeps up her social connections, and accomplishes more than the average woman not past middle age. Marian Harland in private life is Mrs. Mary Virginia Terhune. She has white hair and her face is lined—as is surely most suitable at eighty—but her mind is alert and she carries herself with ease and suppleness, albeit with dignity.

Mrs. Terhune says that the idea by which she has guided herself so as to accomplish what she wants to do is summed up in the motto, 'Something must be crowded out. Women are prone not to realize their limitations, and attempt too many things, diffusing their energies and over-taxing their nerve force without winning success in the end. Mrs. Terhune advises women to cultivate a sense of proportion; let each decide for herself what are important things in her own life, and then reconcile herself to eliminating the less important.

Marian Harland has remained cheerful and optimistic through her long life. While she does a great deal of work, work, beginning early in the day, she also knows when to rest. Housekeepers often feel the monotony of planning meals and ordering the household affairs day by day. But Marion Harland, who has been keeping house and writing messages to housekeepers for several decades holds that housekeeping may be of unfailing interest, and that when a housewife plans a wholesome economical meal for her family she is doing her share for the betterment of humanity.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo Ohio.

Sold by all druggists. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Sardines Very Plentiful This Year

(Portland Argus) It is very evident that the local fishermen this fall will not duplicate their luck of a year ago when something like 30,000 hogsheads of sardine herring caught in Casco Bay were shipped from here by steamer and rail to the packers at Lubec and Eastport bringing very remunerative prices. The catch of herring at the eastward has been so heavy of late that all uneasiness in the domestic sardine trade has passed away. The fishing and packing for the last few weeks has been so far above the average at this time of year that the shortage in domestic stock of a month and six weeks ago has been more than made up. Prices of canned sardines have come down steadily week by week for the last five weeks, and indications are that they will go lower yet. Sardines that are selling now at about $2.40 per case brought $3.25 a year ago, and the prices then were on the upward grade. Eastport and Lubec are making big shipments daily, one of the St. John steamers which touched here a few days ago on her way to Boston having on board over 16,000 cases. Several thousand hogsheads of sardine herring are received at Eastport every week, the fishermen being paid $6 per hogshead, and these figures will be maintained until the close of the season. The fishermen are finding herring in several places in Casco Bay at the present time, the only purchaser for the same being the sardine factory at South Portland. None of any account have been shipped away from here this fall, but the fishing steamer Princess, which arrived here on Sunday from Gloucester, will take down several hundred barrels this week to the factory at Rockland.

Newfoundland And Reciprocity

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 23.—The suggestion that Newfoundland might seek a reciprocity treaty with the United States does not seem likely in view of officials at the present time, to be received with especial interest in Newfoundland, although, at the time when the Canadian agreement was first arranged, the colony would have welcomed similar arrangement:

Clarence Sprague Wins St. John Championship

(Telegraph.)

On the local golf links yesterday the final of the St. John Club championship was played off between Clarence Sprague and H. N. Stetson. The first half of the match was very closely contested, Mr. Sprague being only 2 up at the end of eighteen holes. He then, however, won six holes in succession and halved another, leaving him eight up with eleven to play. Mr. Stetson made a fine rally and took the next four holes. Mr. Sprague then won "Hip-top" with a grand three, halved the next hole and won "Half-way," thus gaining the match by six up and four to play. Mr. Stetson made a very plucky fight, his long game being particularly good. Mr. Sprague's long game was erratic, but his approaching and putting were very sound.

The final tie in the Weldon cup, postponed unavoidably on several occasions, was also played. In this through steady golf Andrew Jack defeated J. M. Magee.

The Cathedral Restoration

The work on the restoration of the Cathedral is progressing most satisfactorily. The roofs of the chancel and the two vestries are almost completed, and the men are now engaged on the outside work of the main building. It is expected that within a short time the congregation will be able to resume services in the church, occupying the space formerly occupied by the organ and choir, which will give a seating capacity for about four hundred. This part of the edifice will be closed in from the main building and in the latter restoration work will be continued during the winter.—Gleaner.

The Farm Colony For Tramps

(The 'Independent,' New York.)

It is only 1911, and the year is only a little more than half gone. Since 1865 the tramp, who has been a nuisance and a danger in every civilized land since Menes assumed the administration of united Egypt, has been in the United States a pest of the big and virulent sort—quite in keeping with American self-esteem, American graft, American brag. American trusts and the American boss. For forty-five years sensible people have been agreed that this nuisance ought to be abated, and well-informed people have known how it could be. Not waiting for the rounding out of a full half century of discussion and dawdling, the New York Legislature has enacted and Governor Dix has signed a measure to inaugurate the one method of accomplishing this end which experience has shown to be feasible. So far as known, the new law has nothing but experience, common sense and righteous purposes back of it. It embodies substantially the scheme urged by the late Edmund Kelly, as put into shape by Robert W. Hebbard, secretary of the State Board of Charities, and looked after at Albany by Assemblyman Chanler. So, in a single generation a great commonwealth gets to the point of attacking a big task in the obviously right way, which has all along been known to be the right way! As American political evolution goes, this is 'going some.'

The law establishes a State farm colony 'for the detention, humane discipline, instruction and reformation' of male adults committed as tramps or vagrants from any part of the State. A board of seven managers will be appointed by the Governor, and they will appoint a superintendent. It is expected that abandoned farm lands owned by the State will be utilized for the experiment.

The word 'reformation' is put into the description of the function of the colony to please those tender-hearted moralists of both sexes who rejoice over one 'bum' who professes repentance, more than over ninety-nine self-supporting workmen who carry their pay envelopes home to their wives. The records of five continents for six thousand years may be searched in vain for a properly and authenticated case of reformed tramp. But the farm colonies of Germany are an adequate and businesslike proof that tramps can be kept from tramping. They can be rounded up, kept off the roads, off the park benches, out of the dives and police cells and out of the polling places on election days; they can also be compelled to wash and to comb, and to do enough work to diminish appreciably the burden of their maintenance. Maintained they are and must be, so long as the community is unprepared to deal with them according to Oliver Wendell Holme's prescription for the choice of ancestors. Farm colonies do not pay in the commercial sense; but if the cost which unrestricted vagrancy saddles upon a community be fully reckoned up, they pay well.

The philosophy of this subject is simple and is perfectly understood by all who make an unprejudiced study of it. The amount and differentiation of vagrancy is determined, like that division of labor which Adam Smith described, by the extent of the market. Every State and every town in it gets the amount and quality of vagrancy that it stands ready to pay for. Nobody but the professional agitator and the unformed confounds the vagrant with the working man out of a job. The unemployed workman looks upon unemployment as a crushing misfortune. The tramp looks upon work as an undurable infliction. The Chanler law discriminates at this point. The unemployed are not to be sent to the farm colony. Its tender mercies are extended only to the true vagrant. Its adequacy to eliminate this variety of the human species will be demonstrated if it is put into operation and conducted in good faith, and with reasonable administrative ability.
