KIRKLAND

We have had very rainy, cold weather recently.

Murray Carter lost a very fine four year old Black colt, the veterinary surgeon came a few hours before it died. They think it had pneumonia.

Sunday Sept 24 was observed as children's day in the Presbyterian church.

James Buchanan Jr., of Boston, has been visiting his Aunt Mrs. Catherine Slater.

Mrs. Fannie Ivory is very ill at present. She was brought from Houlton in an ambulance and taken to her son's residence near Bear Trap point, Eel River Lake.

Several persons from this place and vicinity attended the exhibition in Woodstock.

After Effects Of Fever

How to Build Up Health and Strength After Wasting Diseases

When the system is run down following attacks of fever, la grippe, or other wasting diseases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are of special value. They make new, rich blood, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, and in this way restore the patient to active health and strength. In proof of this we give the case of Mrs. James Randall, Silverstream, Sask., who says:—"I feel that if there is anyone who ought to testify to the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills it is myself. About four years ago I was taken down with typhoid fever which left me in a very weak state and my stomach so impaired that even a drink of milk would cause me pain. To make matters worse the change of life followed, and although I was under the care of one of our best doctors, I was steadily growing worse. Before I was sick I had often read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but thought no more about them. But now when I was sick and helpless and almost hopeless, and with no benefit coming from medical treatment, I kept thinking of the Pills and finally decided to try them. I did so and I am thankful to be able to say that they restored me to health and strength, and enabled me to pass through that trying period, from which so many poor women emerge with shattered health. I hope that many other poor sufferers may read this statement and take fresh courage from it, as I am sure that what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me, they will do for others. I may add that I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the home, and feel that they are better than a doctor."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—The design of the new Canadian gold coins which are to be issued within a few weeks will bear King George's head on one side and the Canadian coat of arms on the other. The designs of the fives and the tens are almost identical. Suggestions that the coins should show a heaver, a maple leaf or some other characteristic Canadian emblem, which would give them a popular name, have not been adopted. It is expected, however, that the five-dollar piece will be known as a "George," and the ten as a "double George." The dies are on the way from England and coining will be commenced as soon as they are received.

Yes

ALL teas may look alike to you—but the difference in Red Rose Tea is in the taste and the smell. Another marked difference is the agreeable strength that puts real quality in the cup with less tea in the pot. Will you try it.

Auto Falls Into The River Seine

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Eleven persons were drowned and ten others injured by the overturning of an auto 'bus into the Seine yesterday afternoon. The accident occurred about 4.30 o'clock, the busiest time of the day. The 'bus, with 25 passengers, was coming from the Jardine des Plantes in the direction of the opera. It was half way over the Post De L'Archeveche, leading from the left bank of the river to the island immediately behind the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

In trying to avoid a collision with another omnibus coming in the opposite direction, the chauffeur gave his steering wheel a sharp turn. The heavy vehicle skidded violently, shot on to the side-walk, crashed through the heavy iron railing as if it were a pipe stem and dropped into the river below. The passengers were carried down, with the exception of two or three who, standing on the rear platform, realized their danger and jumped in the nick of time.

To Extend Government Ownership

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—According to the Daily Consular and Trades Reports, issued by the Bureau of Manufactures, Department of Commerce and Labor, the government of New Zealand is preparing for the utilization of the water power of the country. The report for Tuesday, Sept. 12, says: "Development of the water power resources of New Zealand will probably be initiated soon. At the last session of the parliament the Minister of Finance was empowered to raise $2,433,250 for the establishment of electric power works and the utilization of water power."

"The rather slow utilization of water power in a country where it is so plentiful is due chiefly to popular objection to private exploitation, and the desire that all water power shall be owned, controlled and developed by the government itself. The Dominion government and also the various municipal bodies that might undertake such development have, perhaps, been more cautious in assuming the financial risks involved than private companies would have been; consequently, until the action of the Dominion Parliament last year in making provisions for the expenditure of $2,433,250, little serious action has been taken, except as to the surveying of popular sites."

"It is estimated that within five years' time there will be 4,200 electric stoves and heaters used in Wellington, 3,200 in Auckland 3,100 in Christchurch, and 3,200 in Dunedin."

The report states that the introduction of electric stoves and heaters will be a boon to the working classes as the present outlay in chimneys in the Dominion is probably $19,466,000 and is being added to at the rate of $243,325 per annum. Most of this comes out of the pockets of the working classes. With the introduction of the electric stove and heater, chimneys will, of course, be unnecessary.

Working people in the United States would gladly welcome the introduction of the electric stove and heater under

Don't Get Share Of Political Play

DENVER, Colorado, Sept. 20.—"Let the women do the work," is the sad refrain of Colorado suffragettes who are nursing their wrath against those in charge of the banquet to President Taft on the occasion of his visit here on October 3. Basing their requests on the grounds that this is an equal suffrage state and that the votes of women were largely responsible for the success of the three republican candidates, who broke the solid democratic administration in the state elections last fall, prominent women politicians asked for places at the banquet board. They were proffered coupons entitling them to seats in the gallery and the privilege of watching the men eat. Feminine cajolery and feminine tears availed nothing. "Not enough room for the men, to say nothing of the women," was the impregnable defense of the banquet committee and now the suffragettes are planning legislation which will give woman her share in the "play of politics as well as in the work."

'Sea Tramps'

Sea tramps are far too numerous in the port of Montreal this season in the judgment of an official a reporter met this morning. Do you know what a 'sea tramp' is? He is twin brother to the land variety, but his field of operations is the sea. His favorite haunt is the cattle ship. He is always ready to travel to any port in the wide world, and he seldom grumbles about conditions aboard for almost anything is better than his shore state. As for working steadily, he is no improvement on the land tramp. Work he will not except when sheer necessity compels him to do so for a time. The wanderlust is in his blood, and no one spot can claim him long. On a cattle steamer he receives no wages, but he is travelling to some place and is happy in consequence. At the end of the trip he quits the ship to do odd jobs ashore, just sufficient to keep soul and body together. But soon he is off again to some other quarter, drifting from port to port the world over his whole life through. Montreal has its full quota of these shifting irresponsible characters.

Fine Little Foxes

Among my tender vines I spy
A little fox named—By and Bye.
Then set upon him quick, I say,
The swift young hunter—Right Away.
Around each tender vine I plant,
I find the little fox—I can't.
Then, fast as ever hunter ran,
Chase him with bold and brave—I can.
No Use in trying—lags and whines
This fox among my tender vines.
Then drive him low, and drive him high
With this good hunter named—I'll Try.
Among the vines in my small lot
Creeps in the young fox—I Forgot.
Then hunt him out and to his pen
With—I Will Not Forget Again.
A little fox is hidden there
Among my vines, named—I Don't Care.
Then let I'm Sorry—hunter true—
Chase him afar from vines and you.

HON. RICHARD McBRIDE

The Premier of the Pacific Province as Described by O'Connor

T. P. O'Connor, M.P., thus describes Hon. Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia:
As my first impression there came the idea that there was something singularly appropriate in the man and the country he rules. Mr. McBride is massive. I should say he is over six feet high; he has shoulders so broad that even a professional athlete might envy them; a chest of great breadth and depth, and a physique altogether that is striking and imposing—I might say dominating. From any crowd of men, however big, this figure would stand forth in conspicuous and haunting relief; you would find it difficult to keep your eyes off him. And the face and head are as striking as the splendidly and broadly proportioned body. The face is massive but short and round. It is typically Irish in its features, but instead of the typically rubicund complexion of the men and women of the Emerald Isle, it has the pallor—healthy but pallid all the same—of those who live in the severer climate of the New World. The head is again massive and, surmounted by a mane of thick, snow-white hair, it makes even more striking the personal appearance. There is at first a curious resemblance to the head of Sir Wilfrid Laurier—the same complexion, the same massiveness of head, the same mane of white hair, but the resemblance is not as great when you examine the two men more closely. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has the long thin face of the typical Frenchman—indeed the Dominion Premier always looks to me as if he had walked out of portrait of the noblesse of France in the days before the Revolution. Mr. McBride has the short face, the massive head, and the thick hair of the Celt of the West. Analyzing still further the face and features of the figure of the great British Columbian, you see curious contradictions with the impression of athletic massiveness. The mouth is small, the deep-set eyes are soft brown, the feet and hands are small—there are delicacy, sensitiveness, a certain artistic element in this big massive man as well as strength. And, above all, the dominating impression is of strength that is at the same time the simplicity, the gentility, and the comradeship of that true democratic sentiment you find in these new countries, where men all start from small beginnings before they reach to wealth and power.

It is one of the secrets of Mr. McBride's unique hold over his people that he belongs to them in every nerve of his being. He was born in British Columbia, and though he went to the law school at Halifax, in Nova Scotia, to get his professional training, he has lived almost every hour of his life in his own province and among his own people. And he is never out of touch with them or with their outlook on things. Any day you can see him in Victoria, moving easily among the people, saluting every man he meets, for he knows them all; or seated in the vestibule in the beautiful Canadian Pacific Hotel over a cup of tea, talking easily and familiarly to everyone who comes to join his circle. He is the ruler with something of the cad in his methods and manners.

MORE ABOUT MEANNESS

In the ranks of those who have reduced meanness to a fine art, women are to be found as well as men.

A lady, with an income of several hundreds a year, exercised so stringent an oversight in her household, that only one match was allowed to the servant for lighting the kitchen fire in the morning. Personal application was necessary before a second could be obtained.

Another lady, a wealthy member of society, was also persistently inclined.

One day she flashed into her milliner's, bringing with her a hat that had been altered a month previously, and had been worn since. She loudly demanded the attention of the manager, and inquired why it was that a different shade of trimming material had been used to that ordered.

It was a game of bluff, with the object of getting something for nothing.

Enterprising in her impudence was the young lady who walked into a banking office, examined the pens on the counter, and asked the cashier if he could let her have a clean one.

The cashier at once procured for her a new pen and nib. To his amazement, instead of dipping it in the inkwell, she proceeded to skewer her hat with it; then walked off with the pen and said: "Thanks!"
