Laymen's Missionary Convention

On November the 20th., 21st. and 22nd., a great Laymen's Missionary Convention is to be held in St. John at which delegates from all over the Province of New Brunswick will attend. Among the speakers will be Sir Andrew Fraser.

Sir Andrew's father, Rev. A. G. Fraser, D. D., was an eminent minister of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, while his mother was the daughter of another clergyman of the same denomination, Rev. J. Shaw. Such being his parentage it is easy enough to understand his taking an active and intelligent interest in church work. He was educated at the Edinburgh Academy and Edinburgh University, obtaining at the latter the degree of M. A. in course, and that of LL. D. honorarily. In his 23rd. year, he in 1871, entered the Indian Civil Service, and remained actively engaged therein until 1905, when he returned to Scotland, taking up his residence at Auchinleish, in Perthshire.

His activities in the Indian Service covered a wide sphere. He was a member of the historical Hemp Drugs Commission, which investigated the grave evils resulting from the general use of numerous vile drugs, and whose report resulted in the enactment of drastic remedial laws of the greatest importance. For two years he was Land Revenue officer, an appointment which brought him directly into touch with all the local governing bodies in the country, and also with those holding Government concessions. The Government revenues increased materially during his administration, and incidentally many injustices and petty hardships imposed upon the poorer classes of natives disappeared. In recognition of these services he was created C. S. I. For some time he held the important office of President of the Police Commission, using his influence to keep down the illicit sale and use of opium and other harmful drugs, and making a determined effort to stop child murder and kindred heathenish practices, which in a few remote places had contrived to survive in spite of the law. From 1903 till 1908, he had the honor of holding one of the most dignified and influential appointments under the Government of India, that of Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and the year he received his commission to this office he was created K. C. S. I.

Sheep Found

The Associated Press correspondent recently saw in Fort Fairfield a flock of peculiar-looking animals. Asking some of the oldest inhabitants what the animals were, he found they were called sheep. The presence of those almost prehistoric animals was considered so remarkable that a telegram notifying the Associated Press of the discovery was at once sent. Photographs of the odd-looking brutes have now been made, and a long write-up on sheep is expected soon in one of the Boston dailies.—Fort Fairfield Review.

the shooting and the revolver was discharged in an effort to drive McCluskey away, the verdict should be acquittal. If he used unreasonable and unnecessary force and it was not justified, then the verdict should be manslaughter as the prisoner was doing a wrongful act.

The jury retired at 3.30, were absent an hour, and through their foreman, Charles Wilkinson, they said: "We find the prisoner guilty of manslaughter, and make a strong recommendation for mercy."

His Honor Judge White remanded the prisoner until next Tuesday, when he will pass sentence. He thanked the jury for their attendance and the attention they have given the case. He explained to them that circumstances compelled him to adjourn the court until next Tuesday, and told them that if any of them felt that they could not attend at that date, he had made arrangements with the sheriff, whereby on application to him, they could obtain their release.

At no time during the trial did the prisoner show any sign of nervousness. He listened intently to the evidence of the witnesses, and while on the stand testifying for his life he sat erect, told his story clearly, and answered all questions quickly and without a tremor in his voice. He heard the verdict of the jury, but one could see no change in his face, and as he walked from the court room he had a nod for friends whom he chanced to see in the crowd.

What a Farmer Who Knows Says
When our factory was first established most of the stockholders favored the pooling system, and it was adopted. This system of paying for milk, however, did not prove satisfactory, and pay by test was substituted and for years has given the best of satisfaction. We believe that we get a better quality of milk and every man gets what he deserves. If I send a rich milk to the factory it will make more cheese and I should get more money. If any neighbor sends rich milk and I send poor he is really giving me some of his share of the proceeds if they are divided according to weight. We pay by fat plus two, so if a man sends skim milk he gets a skim milk price.

We test every two weeks. Our maker, Mr. Howard Holmes, has been with us four years. He holds diplomas for both butter and cheese making and is therefore thoroughly competent to make the test. With an incompetent maker, the test might not be satisfactory. The patrons also have improved their facilities of caring for the milk. Some have ice houses and many have milk houses. The nearest factory is seven miles off, so we have no trouble with patrons who have low testing cows leaving the factory.

tea is the result of care and experience in blending—must be the combination of fine flavor, smooth strength and richness. Because all these elements are so generously included in Red Rose Tea it well merits the term "good tea."

THE CARICATURE

Its Influence on the Public Mind

A correspondent makes a timely suggestion as to the influence of caricature in turning boys from the farm. It cannot be questioned that false representations of any class have an effect on the public mind. People accept the distorted personality in order to enjoy the joke. Those who create caricatures and make jokes have consequently a wide influence. If we leave out the important element of mirth they spread abroad in a too serious world they have a bad influence, for they give false views of classes of people and of institutions. The farmer, the Irishman, the Dutchman, the Jew, the mother-in-law, the old maid, the suffragette, the small boy, all have afforded and still afford themes for the caricaturist and the joke-maker. These draw false pictures to excite mirth, and the more clever their work the more lasting are its impressions. The farmer of the melodrama, the cartoon, and the joke column has no real existence. The language of the farmer and of his family is quite as grammatical as that of the average city home. There is no farming type, and just as much individuality and diversity among farmers as among any other class. The virtues, the graces, the accomplishments, and the mental acquisitions are quite as prominent among the rural as among the urban population. The stage Irishman and the stage Dutchman are equally non-existent, but people accept them for the jokes that can be made at their expense. They are raw material for the joke-writer and cartoonist. When a joke with the semblance of novelty comes forth it is distorted by many professionals and applied to each and every class with which the humorist takes liberties. The Jew is now a favorite peg on which jokes are hung, and he is quite as false a picture as any of the other creations. The character attributed to him is entirely misleading. While most Jews have keen commercial faculties, they are also freely charitable, generous, and devoted to sane enjoyment of all the healthy pleasures of life. The mother-in-law, the old maid, and the suffragette of the humorists have no existence. They are purely imaginary creations accepted for the amusement they afford. The childish joy inspired by Punch and Judy on their mimic stage must be supplied in later life by creations quite as unreal, but clothed with a deceptive semblance of actual life.
