SOME THUMBS ARE ALIKE.

(The Springfield Republican.)

But a short time ago a Chicago man was convicted of murder, committed while house breaking solely on thumb print evidence.
The veranda railing had wet paint, and the murderer left his thumb and finger prints when he vaulted the railing in his escape.
The judge declared that the exact correspondence between the markings of the thumb prints of the prisoner at the bar and those in the wet paint of the veranda railing, which has been carefully preserved, proved the guilt of the accused beyond the possibility of doubt. At that time, there was no case on record of the failure of thumb print identification, and the Chicago Judge's strong statement showed how confident the police and the courts were becoming that this method was beyond assault. The appeal to a high or court from the death sentence imposed will, it now appears, be much strengthened by a recent sensational development in England. At last, the thumb print system has broken down in at least one case. An accused person, having been identified as the criminal by the method, was able to establish a perfect alibi by the records of the British Army, at which he had been serving and his release was ordered by the court.
It is said that the correspondence in thumb prints was absolute, and the British criminologists and police authorities are somewhat shaken by the fact. One such case, fully authenticated, should make the execution of the death penalty impossible on thumb print evidence alone.

The Dominion Government will appoint no successor to Radcliffe, the public executioner. This means that sheriffs throughout the Dominion will be called on to mete out the death penalty themselves, or else pay out of their own pockets for a substitute.
Radcliffe was paid an annual salary of $800 for the work, this continuing until his death. During the past seven months a man named Ellis has been officiating, but always at the expense of the sheriff.

Smart Set, a monthly fiction magazine published by the Ess Ess Publishing Company, of which Colonel William d'Alton Mann and his daughter, Mrs Emma Mann Wray, were the owners, has been purchased by John Adams Thayer, formerly part owner of Everybody's Magazine.

BRITISH REFORMS.

The British government is making as rapid progress as can reasonably be expected with the social reforms to which they were committed, or which the people vigorously demanded. One of these was old age pensions; another was securing land for small holders—seven thousand families having already been provided for; still another was the eight-hour day for miners. The establishment of labor exchanges—the value of which was doubted even by labor men—has had a very satisfactory result. The Springfield Republican points out that in the past year some 45,000 vacancies were notified by employers to the exchanges and 37,000 of them were filled. From 70,000 to 100,000 persons were applicants for positions about all of the time. In order to enable workmen without money to reach distant places where they were in demand, the government exchanges have provided transportation, the cost of which has been repaid out of the workmen's wages. The Republican remarks that perhaps the most surprising development has been the fact that more skilled than unskilled workmen have found employment by means of the exchanges. It was believed that they would be of little use to anyone but the unskilled laborers, but the first year's experience has proved that it is with regard to the skilled men, whom the employers are often unable to reach, that the exchanges have been of the greatest service. Such a demonstration completely upsets the idea that skilled wage earners and even employers are in no need of such assistance as the British labor exchanges are now giving. The next step of the government will be to provide a system of insurance against invalidity and want of work. A proposal in the House of Commons for legislation binding the state to provide work for all persons was rejected by the House recently.
The government has announced, as a step to be taken shortly, a bill to provide for the payment of members of parliament. The sum of £300 is spoken of as likely to be the amount of indemnity.—St John Globe.

A SURPRISED FELLOW

Of his Cambridge days a dignitary of the Church of England tells this story. He always wore a white tie, and when he got his fellowship, full of pride, he went to call upon the master of the college. He rang the bell, the door was opened, and he was about to present his card when the footman, who had run his eye over him, said: 'You're too late, young man. I got the place yesterday!'—Chicago, News.

If the Reciprocity agreement does not pass the United States Senate as at present constituted it will certainly pass the special session, should it be called as President Taft has announced. The present Senate favors reciprocity by a majority of from 22 to 30. Fourteen new senators who will come in on March 5 all favor reciprocity, while several of the retiring senators are among those who now oppose reciprocity. There are five senators still to be elected, but from the figures given it is clear that reciprocity will find acceptance.—St John Globe.

MANY MILLIONS REQUIRED.

By a vote of 123 to 81 the United States House of Representatives has voted three million dollars for the fortifying of the Panama Canal. Twelve millions altogether will be required, at the present computation, but the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has declared that the total cost will be $60, 000,000 and that the annual maintenance will cost $26,000,000. President Taft has strong views on the subject. At the beginning there was a feeling that Eusop would strenuously object, but while there has been criticism of the policy no strong opposition was made by the great powers. Throughout the United States, there was some opposition from those who favored the neutralization of the Canals but the militarist propaganda was too strong for them. No man can tell what the ultimate expenditure will be. The New York World says: The War Department is now preparing plans for a garrison of 6,000 troops to man the fortifications. This means that the next demand will be for a large increase in the size of the army. It is the same with military expenditures everywhere; the more is spent on military preparations the more governments are called on to expend in future outlay. The first gun mounted on the Isthmus will cost some tens of thousands. It will entail the waste of many tens of millions.—St John Globe

KING GEORGE ECONOMICAL.

London, Jan 23.—Tradesmen who have the privilege of supplying the wants of royal ty are envied by their less favored competitors, and doubtless the coat of arms with the words "Purveyor to his Majesty the King," which appears on their shop fronts, is a tangible asset.

But King George's purveyors are already regretting the good old times, for the present sovereign is of an economical turn of mind and perquisites are not what they were.

The late King Edward's expenditure was on a more lavish scale than that of his successor and his scrutiny of the accounts much less strict.

King George's tailors bills are probably half of what King Edward's used to be in the year.

The late King rarely wore the same suit of clothes more than half a dozen times and often only one or twice while King George frequently wears a suit three or four dozen times before it is removed from the royal wardrobe.

The King does not order more than a dozen ordinary morning or walking suits in the year and to these may be added about another half dozen suits for fishing shooting and riding.

The cost of the King's uniforms of course amounts to a considerable sum but it is not treated as part of the King's personal expend-ture and is paid by the keeper of the privy purse.

King George is a better customer to his bootmaker than to his tailor. He keeps a couple of dozen pairs of lace and button boots and shoes in use for ordinary wear and directly a pair shows the least sign of wear it is replaced by a new pair. The King also keeps a very large assortment of boots for sporting purposes.

King George's bills for cigars and cigarettes are comparatively light. He is not so heavy a smoker as the late King and he rarely exceeds three cigars a day with a few cigarette.

Wedding and baptismal gifts are heavy items in the personal expenditure of royalty.
The King and Queen give away a great deal of money privately which the public never hears of and these money gifts are among the largest items in the personal expenditure of the sovereign.

CAN BUILD A BRIDGE OVER ST JOHN RIVER

AUGUSTA, Me., March 1.—The bill to charter the St John River Toll Bridge Company was passed by the Maine House of Representatives on Tuesday afternoon, with the name of the company changed to Fort Kent & Clair Toll Bridge Company. This change of name was requested last week at a hearing before the committee on ways and bridges when Senator Dana L Theriault, of Fort Kent, explained that it was desired to make the bill conform in all particulars to one adopted by the New Brunswick Assembly.
The incorporators named in the bill are Wiliam H Cunliffe, Frank W Mullett, A G Fen-laon, David C Burpee, J Raymond Burpee and William D Burpee, and the capitalization is fixed at $50,000 stock and not exceeding $50,000 bonds. The corporation would become a public service company charged with the erection and maintenance of a bridge across the St John River between Fort Kent Maine and Clair N B and authorized to collect the following tolls: Foot passenger 5 cents; horse and rider, 8 cents vehicle drawn by one beast 15 cents with 5 cents for each additional beast; one person free with vehicle, and 5 cents for each additional person; sheep and swine, 2 cents, and larger animals 3 cents. No rates are stated for automobiles.

Shiloh's Cure quickly stops coughs, cures colds, heals the throat and lungs. . . . 25 cents.
