A REVIVAL OF MOHAIR

In planning the summer wardrobe a mohair coat and skirt suit may with advantage have a place. Evidently there is to be a revival of mohair which for summer suits will do some considerable extent replace linen, over which it possesses the obvious advantages of being non-crushable, not needing frequent washing and being somewhat lighter in weight than the weave of linen usually made into coat suits.

When the mohair is lined it becomes warmer than linen, but many of the new coats are unlined, with a four inch facing around all edges of some brilliant contrasting color, or something in broad stripes. This is a rather clever trick of the designers. It minimizes the weight and heat, and provides an effective finish to the inside.

A suit of white mohair cannot carry these color facings, because they show through no matter how faint the color chosen. White satin is chosen, however, for the white coats. It is cut on the bias, folded in lightly at each edge and slip-stitched.

The mohairs show new and attractive weaves. They present little in common with the glazed plain surfaces of other days. There is a heavy diagonal twill, which makes the material look like peau de soie. There are also new mohairs with herring bone stripes in a slightly rougher weave. This kind will be especially good for top coats. It is being made up into the same kind of coat that we once had in porgee and rajah. It is unlined, and has a sailor collar or long revers of striped silk or black satin.

When England was placed under an Interdict the Pope stopped all births, marriages, and deaths for a year.

A figure of speech is a way of talking or writing by which you say what you don't mean and yet mean what you say. Example: 'He blows his own trumpet. You don't mean that he has a trumpet, but you do mean that he blows it, i.e. he boasts'

A PRIZE CORONATION HYMN.
(Dugli, in the Westminster Gazette.)
Oh! King of Kings, from whom all Kings have power,
Look on our King, crowned in our sight today;
Stand thou beside him, this and every hour,
Give him the grace for which his people pray.
King of all Kings, Father of all things living,
Receive this day our praise and our thanksgiving.
Master and Lord, behold Thy people kneeling,
Here at Thy feet we have no place nor state,
God on this earth, His glory once revealed,
Made Kingship holy and made meekness great.
Receive, oh! Saviour, this our prayer most lowly,
And save our King and make his people holy.

Spirit of God! Thou quickener of nations,
Speak to our hearts and bid them wake anew,
That we, forthgoing to our different stations,
May find that work which each alone can do.
Hallow our hopes and bless each right endeavor,
Defend our King and bless our land forever.

DICKENS' LITERARY GAINS.
(Truth)

The papers have been printing a great deal of pure nonsense on the subject of Dickens' literary gains. We are told among other things that the emoluments from his books were totally inadequate, owing to the non-existence of copyright, No writer of his time was so highly paid as Dickens.

It was calculated by one who knew all about his affairs that he made about £10,000 out of each of the books which he wrote after 1846. The price paid down for Edwin Drood was £7,500. Author and publisher were to share equally in the profit of sales of over 25,000 copies and 50,000 were sold of each of the opening numbers. The payments for the early sheets for America and for the Tauchnitz edition must have brought the author about £2,000 besides.

Dickens is stated to have died leaving earnings that often accrue to a respectable solicitor. This is rubbish also. Dickens left £36,000 in round figures, and this did not include a considerable sum of money that he had settled some years before his death. His readings (1858-69) had brought in about £36,500.

It is forgotten that Dickens began life without one penny and that every farthing he spent or gave away or left was earned by himself, only excepting £2,000 which was bequeathed to him by a friend about two years before his own death. Dickens lived liberally some people said extravagantly for about thirty four years he brought up and started in life a large and very expensive family and he gave away a great deal of money to needy relatives.
