From The Miramichi Lumber Camps.

Before leaving the nearer Miramichi territory I had the privilege of giving five talks on Sunday the 22nd inst, at as many camps, with those bosses and crews I had formed pleasant acquaintance. There was not much time for extras as I wished to get to Biggar Ridge church before the funeral service for Mrs. Asa Brooks, of Northfield would be over. Truly it is a privilege to address such quietly listening groups of men, and to share in their friendship. Many bibles, testaments and hymnbooks have been left behind in the camps. Another copy of the frontiersman was purchased by my social and thoughtful friend, Joe Adair of Carlisle. Joe likes to read and seems as ready and capable seemingly at anything his duty calls upon him to do. The nine o'clock camp time for going to bed I was not allowed to observe at John Irving's, where I was reading the frontiersman. "You can't stop now. You are too near the end," and so about 80 or more pages still remaining had to be read ending at about twenty-five minutes to eleven. Crawford's and Adair's and Irving's camps being so near together there was a grouping of the men in part for services.

My friend, John McCormic, suffered from a jam which lamed him quite a bit, but he was too much of a woodsman to make much ado and was pushing along the work. He was about to provide additional hovel room.

Woody Jones, of Carlisle, whose friendly words cheered me in my way got a finger severely jammed so sleep was impossible, but he acted as counter getting Joe Adair to drive his team.

It was interesting on Saturday last to hear John Hoggard explain part of that comprehensive and solemn chapter, Matt. 24th.

One of the most thoroughly interesting and also longest religious talks yet had was at J. Barter's at Sparkle, where after meeting was closed biblical truths were discussed till far into the night.

A pleasant word with friend Rainsford Grey at his hostelry as I passed. He was keenly interested in the mission.

Arriving at Biggar Ridge church, I found it crowded. It was a sad scene. Mrs. Brooks was widely connected. Relatives and friends far and wide were present. The text used by Rev. Saunders Young was "Your life is hid with Christ in God etc."

Mrs. Brooks leaves a husband and five children, two boys and three girls, the two eldest are boys, the eldest in his sixteenth year. There is a refinement and attractiveness about the children that is a beautiful memorial to the teaching and influence of their departed mother, more valuable by far than one of stone or marble. The eldest boy returns with his father to the woods. The other children go for a time to live with their mother's sister, Mrs. E. Brooks while father and uncle are in the woods.

It gave me much pleasure to find my friend, Michael Welsh so much improved. He seemed quite cheery, sat up part of the time while he talked.

A word with a friend Asa Bell revealed that he had enjoyed a very pleasant birthday reunion for the celebration of his seventy ninth birthday.

Tuesday evening I reached J. Wallace's. He boards his men at his house in large proportion, the smaller number being camped about six miles from the house at the end of the two turn road. Mr. Wallace has a good road, though long and his twelve teams are quickly transporting the logs to the landings. Mrs. W. has a very busy winter indeed and is ably assisted by Miss Burlock.

It is fascinating to a stranger to travel for the first time up the valley of the Gambia. The hills valleys and scenery generally are truly picturesque, and suggestive.

After a trip of about twenty one miles or more on Wednesday, I reached Josiah Hill let's camp on the Nashwaak. This is a large camp well built and comfortable. Hauling off has begun and the crew is much smaller than it was, the number reduced to thirty five. Five teams moved 513 logs yesterday to stream. More teams are expected and the hauling off is expected to go on rapidly. How fine the winter for logging. It will have its in Woodsmen's memory as that so remarkable fine winter of 1910 and 11.

One thing I omitted to mention was the roofing of gulches on the Wallace road. There quite extensive roofs have been erected which protect the road nicely in those places.

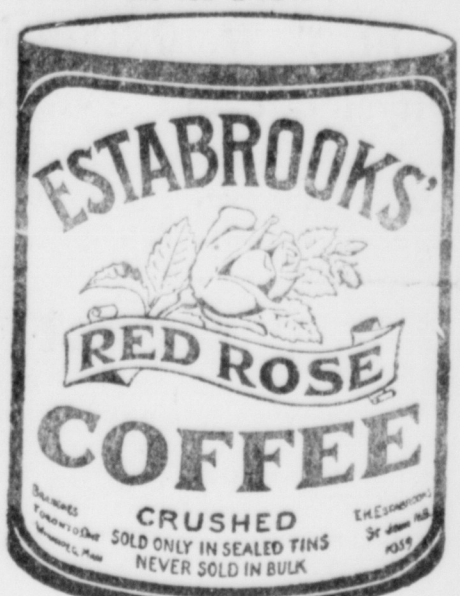

Severe frost on Tuesday and Wednesday this week. Came through from Justice Manzer's Camp on Nashwaak yesterday nineteen miles to Fredericksburg. A good deal of heavy travelling. John McLaughlan a well to do farmer very obligingly went with me to show me the road to Alec Fraser's big Camp in the Tay. About 45 men there. They cut over 2000000 ft 16 teams at Manzer's. Think the same number at Fraser's. M. Fraser has a fine little pair of steppers to speedily get round with. Lumbago laid suddenly her severe hand upon him yesterday, but application of British troops liniment seemed to encourage him to alleviate the pain. Mr. Fraser is a sociable man. Five singers at his camp. He bought a Bible Testament and two Hymn books for the camp.

At Mr. Manzer's where we had good meetings, Henry London of Windsor, gives strong impulse to the singing. He understands much about music, and is an enthusiastic singer. It does one good to note the attention he gives to expression. I noticed it especially in the way he so reverently and reluctantly as it were sang "Lo in the grave He lay, Jesus my Saviour and the ringing glad emphasis with which he sang, Up from the grave He arose at with tones of triumph he sounded it forth. He teaches willing listeners among the men of the camp. He kindly took home William Kimball on Monday. Mr. Kimball was a very sick man. Pneumonia was pronounced. The heavy storm made it so the doctor could not reach him on Tuesday; but he phoned what treatment to give. Mr. London returned to camp on Wednesday. Some of the roads here are drifted as perhaps was never before surpassed, so it seems according to remarks heard.

George Rodgers, of this place has come home ill from the woods, and has been suffering intense pain during parts of several days. It is to be hoped that alleviation may speedily be possible.

A few days ago I had a very pleasant visit at the home of my old friend Thomas Somers ville, at Biggar Ridge. I was then on my way out from a group of camps. Mr. Somers and his worthy partner and family seem as if they can't be too kind to a guest. Mr. Somerville has had much experience in lumbering and can give many interesting reminiscences. He recalled the cold Friday. He was working that day with an ox team, and the load ran through a gulch upon which the wind swept with relentless severity. Though his health is impaired, he is much better than he was last summer, when at haying time he could not work.

At Howard Brook, I called on Miss Mary Long, who is living in a little home of her own and is about 80 years of age. She is truly an interesting person with whom to converse. She has lived a strenuous life. She was practically mother to her brother "Andy" whom she brought up and to whom she was bound by ties of intense affection. His removal by death left a blank in her life no imagination can more than faintly picture. She is tender of heart towards her Saviour. She has a large picture of "The Last Supper" in her home. She points to or looks at Him with a tender warmth of reverence and adoring love that touches the heart with whole some paths. Her trust in God is beautiful and childlike. She feels lonely, but her trust is a noble off set to this. She has a unique way of looking at the future life. There are a naturalness, a simplicity and a ruggedness about her views that arrest attention. Her utterance is free, her description graphic and her illustrations true to life and nature. I have heard many sermons and read many, but the living sermon I that day enjoyed left my mind a deep impression. Miss Long has a very independent spirit. She spoke gratefully of the kindness of her nephews and her interest in their welfare lies as a burden in her warm heart.

Newspaper Office Destroyed by fire

TRURO, N. S. Feb. 7.—The News Publishing Company building was completely destroyed at 7 o'clock this morning by fire. The building is a total loss. The fire is supposed to have started in a Monoline machine. The insurance covered the loss. The company will endeavor to start its paper at once in temporary quarters. The insurance is scheduled among a number of companies. Fire fighters saved adjoining buildings only after hard work. At ten o'clock the fire was held by tons of paper stored in the building.
