SUCH A GENTLE BURRO!
 Any Father Would Have brought it for His Children.

It was such a gentle burro that any father would have bought it for his children had gentleness been all that was expected of a burro.

It was only $7.50, the father was told, and—it was darkly hinted by the children—the owner was awfully poor and might take less.

By degrees the children worked the father up to a point where he half promised to think about it; insisted that he promised to think about it; convinced him that he had promised to look at it; and finally told him flatly that he promised to buy it. Did he remember?

The father didn't remember, but he knew that he might as well buy it, and he did. The saddle and bridle cost as much as the burro, a fact he realized with astonishment.

What do you feed burros? the mother asked.

I know! I know! said the children in chorus. The man who sold him said to give him corn chops and oats and hay.

That night the burro ate the corn chops and oats and hay and finding nothing else, lunched off a coffee sack, a pile of kindling wood, and a piece of his harness which had been left too near him.

After this, being lonesome, he raised his voice and told folks about it. They understood a mile across town that he was lonesome.

Merciful heavens! said the father leaping from bed, what was that?

It was the burro, explained the mother sleepily; he did that while you were at the office.

In the morning the burro was liberated for a stroll about the yard. He celebrated by eating a skirt that had been newly cleaned with gasoline and hung out to dry.

Then he charged about and drove the cock indoors. After a bit feeling hungry he found a large pile of newspapers and ate them, top ped off with some cedars that were growing in reach and went into his stall, where he was shut up for the night.

During the night he unlatched the door, ate a sheet, a couple of pairs of stockings, and some other things off the line and then climbed up on the back porch, where he sang sweetly.

And next morning the father came down and put a rope about the neck of the burro. The children looked at his face, and if they thought he was an Ixum-giver they did not put the thought in to words.

They heard him that night tell their mother;

I was lucky. I found a peddler who gave me $2 for him.

Poor fellow, said the mother; why did you take his money?—Dallas News.

Neighbor—Why does your new baby cry so much?

Little Brother—Say, if all your teeth were out, your hair off, and your legs so weak that you couldn't stand on them. I rather fancy you'd feel like crying yourself.

The Hat

and the Guarantee

The arguments that might be advanced, as to the superior quality of the Buckley Hat, are all summed up in the broad, conditionless, all-embracing Buckley guarantee.

For it will be readily seen that no hat manufacturer could afford to attach to his product such a guarantee as this, unless he had fullest confidence in the wearing qualities of his hats.

English quality, in American styles, the Buckley Hats have long been recognized as the highest type of gentlemen's headwear.

If you have yet to learn the "why" of Buckley popularity, you'll be doing yourself a good turn in asking your hatter to let you get acquainted with Buckley comfort, Buckley durability, and Buckley style.

Ask him to show you the many new shapes; and when you've selected the one you like, see that the Buckley guarantee slip appears under the leather sweat-band.

Then you'll have the satisfaction of knowing that—fair weather or foul, easy wear or wrecking travel—that hat has no excuse to offer you—it must last you four full months—if it doesn't, you get a new one free of cost from the hat store at which you purchased the first one.

Even accident doesn't invalidate the guarantee, for there's a clause in it that says:

"We also agree to exchange this hat, if same is damaged by accident during the said four months."

The Buckley is UNION MADE—and sells for $2.50.

BUCKLEY HATS

FIGHTING INSECT PESTS.

Very often throughout the country regions the more advanced horticulturist finds it difficult to convince the oldest inhabitant of the advantage of spraying his fruit trees for insect pests. The assertion that nature has a remedy for every harmful pest is most frequently urged by those who evidently believe thoroughly in letting well enough alone. While there is no doubt good ground for the belief in the efficacy of nature's methods, very often her progress is slow, and while the necessary cure is finding its way to that place where proper food may be obtained, the harm that is in the meantime being wrought is often irreparable. With a recognition of the provision that nature has made, and also with a like recognition of the slower processes by which similar ends may be achieved, the American Government has adopted the policy of importing friendly insects to aid in the destruction of the rogue species that play such disastrous havoc in orchards and among the shade trees of the country. Among the more successful importations made have been those of certain insects, enemies of the gypsy and brown-tail moths, that have been fetched from Europe by Dr L C Howard, the American Government Entomologist-in-Chief and bred in large quantities in a laboratory near Roston. One of these, a predatory beetle, has proved a most satisfactory enemy to the gypsy moth, and although it has been in service only four seasons, has reduced the number of moths in several localities in which it was placed most materially. It increases rapidly, as does another insect, a small fly that lays its eggs in the bodies of both the gypsy and brown-tail moths. This insect Dr Howard thinks more valuable from a descriptive point of view than the bee fly. It has already destroyed larger numbers of the brown tail caterpillars and has also shown a fondness for other foliage eating insects. Apparently these imported insects have no bad habits. What they will turn their attention to when all the brown tail and gypsy moths are destroyed, is not made evident in Dr Howard's report. They must live, and the memory of the imported English sparrow is kept vividly before an harassed public by the vivacious little birds themselves.—St John Globe.

PLASTER MILL AT HILLSBORO BURNED.

Moncton N B March 16—A large plaster mill belonging to the Albert Manufacturing Company, Hillsboro, was destroyed by fire this morning, and between 100 and 120 persons have been thrown out of employment. The fire was discovered by the watchman, Chas Steves, shortly before six o'clock and an alarm was given, a large number turning out to render whatever assistance was possible in fighting the flames. The building is of wood and was burned down by eight o'clock. There was some fine machinery in the mill, which was ruined. The mill had been closed for six weeks for repairs and was to have been started again to day.

Shiloh's Cure

The late Eli Perkins, said a magazine editor, had an apt way of driving home his points with little stories.

"Perkins once offered me a sketch, at a bargain price. I accepted the sketch eagerly and I asked for more at the same figure.

But Perkins laughing scurly shook his head.

He said I reminded him of a tramp to whom a genial old lady gave a nickel, saying:

Here, my good man, take this nickel and drink my health in a glass of beer.

Thank you ma'am said the tramp But you look so infirm, hadn't I better drink two beers?—New York Tribune

BLACK AND WHITE FROCKS

The vogue of black and white has given rise to many charmingly simple and yet dignified frocks. One such is a little coat and skirt in a supple summer silk showing a very narrow black stripe on a white ground, and the only relief is in the little revers and sash of black satin. A collar of real Irish, beginning just in front of the shoulders, falls in a deep, sailor in the back and gives a note of elegance to the frock. The softly folded narrow girdle of black is tied in a square flat bow at the back, and falls below in two long loops one above the other, rather than in the usual sash ends.

There are hosts of these little striped models in all kinds of materials, and in various colorings, though white and black is the scheme most often repeated. An extremely pretty white and black stripe one piece frock in some soft cotton material was trimmed in similar material, whose white ground was sprinkled with large wafer dots of black, and there was a touch of vivid green on the bodice.

A pretty and unusual method of dealing with black and white checked material is seen in a frock of checked nixon combined with a good deal of black satin. The satin is disposed in bolero effect on the bodice, with deep flat collar, and it is continued down on the skirt like a straight tunic, but separated in panels between which the checked finion of the skirt is revealed. The neck is finished with a flat collar of fine embroidered muslin.

MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES. MAIN BUILDING FOR PATIENTS.

A national institution that accepts patients from all parts of Canada. Here is one of hundreds of letters being received daily:—

John D. McNaughton, New Liskeard, Ont.: A young man not belonging here, and suffering from, it is believed, consumption, is being kept by one of the hotels here. He has no means and has been refused admission to our hospital. The conditions where he is offer him no chance. Could he be admitted to your Free Hospital for Consumptives? If not, could you inform me where he can be sent, and what steps are necessary to secure prompt admittance?

NOT A SINGLE PATIENT HAS EVER BEEN REFUSED ADMISSION TO THE MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL BECAUSE OF HIS OR HER INABILITY TO PAY.

Since the hospital was opened in April, 1902, one thousand five hundred and twenty-four patients have been treated in this one institution, representing people from every province in the Dominion.

For the week ending November 20th, 1909, one hundred and twenty-five patients were in residence. Ninety-six of these are not paying a copper for their maintenance—absolutely free. The other twenty-nine paid from $2.00 to $4.90 a week. No one pays more than $4.90.

Suitable cases are admitted promptly on completion of application papers.

A GRATEFUL PATIENT

Norah P. Canham: Enclosed you will find receipt for my ticket from Gravenhurst, hoping that you will be able to oblige me with the fare. I was at your Sanatorium ten months, and I was sent away from there as an apparent cure. I am now working in the city, and I am feeling fine. I was most thankful for the care I got from the doctors and staff, and I must say that I spent the time of my life while I was there.

TAKING THE CURE IN WINTER AT MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

The Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives is dependent on the good-will and gifts of the Canadian public. Money is urgently needed at the present time to make it possible to care for the large and increasing number of patients that are entering the institution.

Will you help?

BIG INCREASE IN IMMIGRATION

London, March 17—The Canadian immigration officers at the headquarters in London estimate that the emigration to Canada from the United Kingdom so far this year is fifty per cent. more than in the corresponding period of 1910. All the steerage berths on vessels bound to Canada are looked up to the middle of May.
