Presentation To D. W. Kyle.

On Thursday evening at an informal meeting of the members of the Masonic Society, D. W. Kyle was presented with a Knight Templars charm by his brother members. Mrs. J. W. Boyer

During Monday night the death occurred of Mrs. James W. Boyer at her residence, Victoria. About four weeks ago she fell and broke her leg and the shock of this depleted her general health and her death of heart failure was undoubtedly hastened by the accident. She had, however, been fairly well up to less than two hours previous to her death. She was 78 years of age.

Mrs. Boyer was held in high esteem for many good qualities of mind and heart. She married the late Mr. Boyer about the year 1860. Two sons and three daughters were born to them of whom three survive Fred Boyer, Mrs. J. B. Bowser and Mrs. H. C. Cochrane, all of Victoria. The late S. R. Boyer for years in business at East Florenceville was a son.

The funeral was held Wednesday from the residence; Rev. E. C. Jenkins conducted the service.

Over Night

One of the most difficult scenes to picture on the stage is that of a steamboat, but it is said that in "Over Night", which is to be seen at The Hayden-Gibson Theatre Friday Sept. 27 all obstacles have been overcome and a most realistic reproduction of one has been made. In this case the boat is supposed to be the "Hendrick Hudson" of the Albany Day Line, playing between New York City and the capital of the Empire State. The scene represents both the exterior and the interior of the steamer, and is a massive affair taking up the full stage. One side of it represents the dining saloon, and it also shows a portion of the social hall. So pleased with this scene were the owners of the line that they have presented many small articles, taken directly from the boat, to Mr. Brady for use on the stage. Among these are life preservers, and a full set of table utensils.

Found Much Coal, But no Gold in Baffin Land

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 16—After great hardships in the frozen north, Captain J. Bartlett of the steamer Neptune of this port, who headed a old hunting expedition to Baffin Land, returned to this harbor reporting the loss of one of his ships and the discovery of extensive coal deposits, but no gold.

The sealing steamer Algerine of the expedition was lost in Pond's Inlet. After she was crushed in the ice, the ship's company walked forty miles over the floes to land and found a cache left by Captain Bernier. For two weeks they subsisted on four crackers each day, while they worked their way at Button Point, seventy degrees north latitude where they were picked up by the Neptune. They were unable to penetrate far into the interior owing to ice and unfavorable weather conditions.

The Neptune brought two tons of ivory, sixty bear skins, one musk ox and a live polar bear, which is the property of Mr. Peel, a wealthy New York sportsman who was a member of the expedition.

She carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was supported by his brother, Charles Gallagher.

After the wedding the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents where a tempting wedding breakfast was served. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. After breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher left on a honeymoon trip to Boston, New York and Niagara. On their return they will go to Bath where they will reside.
