Fireproof Fabric Amazes Chemists
(New York Herald, Wednesday.)

That flimsy inflammable cotton goods can be made fireproof was demonstrated yesterday before the Eighth International Congress of Applied Chemistry by Dr. William H. Perkin, of the University of Manchester, England, in the great hall of the College of the City of New York. Dr. Perkin exhibited a fireproof garment made thin by wear of four years. On the application of a lighted match no signs of combustion were evident.

The discovery of the material with which this result was achieved followed a series of experiments in which more than ten thousand burning tests were made, the lecturer said. The essence of the process consists in dipping the fabric to be fireproofed into a solution of a particular salt containing tin and then into a solution of ammonium sulphate. The result is the deposit of an oxide of tin in some intimate way on the fibre.

The search for a fireproof dress material was undertaken because of the large number of deaths caused by the use of "flannelette," a fabric much used in England, because of its cheapness, and which is covered by a layer of highly inflammable cotton wool. Fireproof fabrics are no novelty, but their non-inflammable quality is removed by washing.

Municipal Fish Markets
Opened in Germany

Berlin, Sept. 8.—There have been monster mass meetings in Germany the last week to protest against the high price of food, and to demand that the government relieve the situation before the winter. The meetings, which were organized by the Socialists, were orderly, and there was no occasion for government interference. The Socialists are expected to make a demand for the reduction of import duty on foods when the Reichstag convenes in November, and also permission on the importation of meats, which is now practically prohibited. The Berlin municipal sea fish market, which was inaugurated for the purpose of selling to the poor at cost prices, was reopened this week.

Despite Germany's prosperity this year many city governments are worried over the outlook for the winter. Hundreds of Germans cross the line near Karlsruhe daily and buy Argentine meats in the Swiss markets, where the price is 18 cents, as compared with 20 cents in Germany. The law limits the amount that can be carried free over the line to four pounds, but much is smuggled across, and it is estimated that a ton of this meat crosses the frontier daily in small packages, and the quantity is constantly increasing. Kiel has opened a municipal fish market, where sea food is sold at cost prices, and Ulm has contracted for large quantities of pork which are to be sold, without any profit

Blue and Red Y M C A
Armies in London

London, Sept. 8.—The Young Men's Christian Association has launched another whirlwind campaign in London. The one last January was for money, some $500,000, with which to erect a new building. The hustle now is for men. The campaigners are divided into two armies, the blue and the red. Their respective badges are the forget-me-not and the pimpernel.

These armies will compete by different methods to see which can secure the greatest number of men. The association aims to capture 3,000 new members a month. Each army will report the number of its captures nightly. The armies will be allowed to count only the recruits who have paid the entrance fee of five shillings ($1.25). Each day's victor will be announced to the public at a fixed time by blue or red flares at conspicuous places. The total progress will be recorded on a giant thermometer at the new Y. M. C. A. headquarters.

QUEER CASE THRIFT

(Saturday Evening Post)

The native thrift of the Vermonters was under discussion, and a story was told that was held to illustrate it perfectly.

There was a man in one of the interior Vermont towns who had an old horse, ringboned, spavined, with the heaves and every other horse ailment—a mere shadow of a horse. He used to drive the horse to town every day and was jered by the neighbors for using such a miserable beast.

One day he walked into the store at the corner. "Where's your horse, Jim?" a friend asked. "Sold him." "Sold him! How much did you get?" "Got a hundred dollars?" "Who in thunder did you sell that horse to for a hundred dollars?" "Why," replied the Vermont, as he exhibited a roll of bills, "I sold him to mother."

Why They Went

An American officer was by the kind permission of the British government, enabled to make a week's cruise on one of His Majesty's battleships. Among other things that impressed the American was the Sunday morning service. It was very well attended, every sailor not on duty being there. At the conclusion of the service the American chanced to ask one of the jacksies: "Are you obliged to attend these

Next To The Richest Woman In Europe With $3,000,000.

The richest woman in Europe, next to Frau Krupp von Bohlen, owes her fortune to the beet sugar industry. Madame Lebaudy, mother of Jacques, Emperor of Sahara, is worth at least $3,000,000. She holds her wealth in horror, and lives under an assumed name in order to avoid publicity. Her residence all the year round is a small flat in Versailles, where the domestic staff consists of one servant, who is assisted in the work by her mistress. Madame Lebaudy gives away pretty nearly the whole of her income, most of her donations being bestowed anonymously. It is an open secret, however, that for many years past she has made up the annual deficit of the leading French Royalist newspaper, which usually amounts to about £16,000.

WEON; SIDE OF THE FENCE.

(Kansas City Journal.)

An office seeker was pleading for votes at a picnic adjoining the Osawatimie Asylum grounds. "The trouble is you farmers are not getting enough for your products," he said. "You are entitled to get more." Then turning to a bunch of laboring men, from the town, he said. "Something must be done to bring down the cost of living to you. I propose to make life easier for you."

An insane man standing on the asylum grounds over the fence from where the spellbinder was holding forth took a hand in the conversation.

"You expect to bring down the cost of living to the laboring man in town by raising the prices of farm products?" he asked.

"Well, er thats the idea," replied the spellbinder.

"Better climb over this fence," said he crazy man. "You belong on this side."

Pupils Warned of School Dangers

With the opening of Chicago's public schools for the enrolment of new pupils the city Health department came to the fore with advice, "How to be Happy In School."

Extracts from the Health Department axioms are:—

Fresh air makes the mind bright and makes learning easy.

Don't shut out the sunshine, teacher. Flood the room with sunshine; it is God's best germ destroyer!

Never put pens or pencils in your mouth. The last mouth they were in may have been an infected mouth.

For the same reason never "swap" candy, chewing gum or apples. It's dirty and a dangerous thing to do.

Keep clean; soap is your good friend. Treat your stomach right. Eat very little candy and what little you do eat be sure that it is pure.

Don't run to school, especially after eating. Start early, so that you will not be obliged to run.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—According to a morning paper, a railroad enterprise involving an expenditure of $200,000,000 was launched yesterday by the interests of J. Pierpont Morgan Co., and fourteen railroads entering Chicago. The plan embraces a complete solution of the freight handling problem in Chicago, in that half of the bond issue will be set aside for passenger and freight terminals. The papers for the project are said to have been signed by all concerned. The issue first of $25,000,000 bonds, it is said will be made a once.
