"Over Night"

Friday, Sept. 27th at the Hayden-Gibson Theatre "Over Night," one of William A. Brady's attractions, will be the offering.

"Over Night" is one of the big laughing successes of last season in New York, and enjoyed a long and prosperous run, covering a period of nine months, part of the time being played at the Hacket Theatre and the balance at Mr. Brady's "The Playhouse". This season "Over Night" was produced at the Princess Theatre, Chicago, and it scored such a "hit" that it was continued there for more than three months, having only recently closed a run that was a record breaker. It was written by Philip H. Bartholomae, a young playwright who had not before been heard of, but who became famous, as it were 'over night.' The New York and Chicago critics were unanimous in allotting much praise to Mr. Bartholomae's work, and they one and all declared it to be the best comedy of the season. As might be inferred from its title, the action of the play is confined to a single night's happenings, and the scenes for the most part are laid on board the Hudson River steamer "The Hendrick Hudson," which latter fact occasions "Over Night" to be referred to as a "fast-going steamboat comedy." The complications of the play arise over the mishaps and misfortunes that come to two newly married couples on their honeymoon trip en route to Albany, and while the subject is a delicate one, Mr. Bartholomae has succeeded, so it is said, in making an uproariously funny play, without the slightest suggestiveness. Mr. Brady promises a good production of the play, and a first class company. It is promised that "Over Night" will surely prove to be the biggest laughing success of the season.

NAVAL DISCIPLINE.

Punishments That Are Meted Out to British Sailors.

For infraction of regulations some curious punishments are meted out in the English navy. It is an every day occurrence, says the London Tit-Bits, to see half a dozen sailors lined up on deck facing the paint work, holding their hammocks on their shoulders. At first the hammock isn't heavy, but after an hour or so it drags on one's shoulders like lead. Besides, it is not at all entertaining to stare fixedly at a square foot of painted woodwork for an hour or more at a time.

Another punishment that Jack despises is bailing with a spoon. He is placed upon the deck, with two large wooden buckets, one filled with water and the other empty. With a spoon he must dip all the water from one bucket and transfer it to the other, being meanwhile the butt of his comrades' jests and jeers.

Sometimes a delinquent is made to walk slowly backward and forward along the deck, nursing in his arms a six inch projectile, weighing a little over 100 pounds. Once a sailor who laughed at the stammering speech of his commander was made to stand upon the forebridge in full view of the ship's crew and laugh for an hour and a half.

Spitting upon the deck of a man-of-war is strictly prohibited. Cuspidors are placed at intervals along the deck, and these must be used. Upon some ships when a sailor is caught spitting upon the deck a small tub is strapped to his chest, and he is made to wear it. Any one who chooses may use this walking receptacle. The offender thus punished rarely repeats his offense.

BALZAC'S BACK DOOR.

It Was Convenient When Creditors Became Too Insistent.

In the year 1848 or thereabout, being worried by duns in Paris, Balzac took lodgings in Passy, then a village in the environs, at a house in the Rue Basse. There is little remarkable about the front of the house. It is just a plain, white, two storied French dwelling of a hundred years ago or of today for that matter.

But at the back is a garden, and at the bottom of the garden is a doorway leading into one of the oldest lanes in the world, from the look of it. Truly, this ruelle, with its crumbling walls of stone and plaster, its ivy and its shade of overhanging trees, is as happily devoid of suggestions of modern "improvements" as anything to be found within the suburbs of Paris.

By means of this byway Balzac, when insistent voices from within the house reached his ears as he worked in his little pavilion at the end of the garden, could avoid the unpleasantness of an interview with any holder of the overdue bills which throughout his life were the only tangible results of his experiments as a printer and type-founder.

It needs but little imagination to see him hurry off down the lane, hatless and in slippers, to await events, while he dreams of exploiting the jewels of the Golconda or the silver mines of the new world.

Nature's Carvings.

There is a rock profile to be seen on Mount Wilson, California, which is more striking than the famous formation in the White mountains, although the former is said by some to be the most perfect of all of "nature's carvings." The features are strong and full of expression and the contour of the head of correct proportions, the forehead lofty, the eyebrows jutting, and the aquiline nose is exceedingly vigorous. The mouth is hard and set, but complete in detail, and even the line from the nostril to the corner of the mouth and the rugged modeling of the cheek are distinctly marked. The chin and jaw are correctly sculptured, and even the line of the high collar and old fashioned coat may be seen on this remarkable bowlder.

An Improvement.

"Mrs. Newrich has put a beautifully carved sundial in her Italian garden." "Yes?" "And she has arranged to have it electrically lighted at night so she can tell the time all hours."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

She Hit Back.

He—Women have no real judgment in serious matters. She—Yes, and men count on that when they ask women to marry them.—Baltimore American.

Disgrace is immortal and living even when one thinks it dead.—Plautus.

"Why don't you rub your furniture with a little crude oil?" "Laws! Maria wouldn't let me use anything that wasn't strictly refined."—Baltimore American.

She—Do you suppose those big hoop-skirts will ever come in again? He—Well, not in this flat they won't, dear.—Yonkers Statesman.
