British Lash For The White
 Slave

London, Nov. 30.—If punitive legislation can suppress the white slave traffic, the British Parliament is passing an act which should succeed. Men convicted of carrying on the traffic are liable to be flogged on the second offence. The Lord Chancellor was in favor of inflicting this punishment for the first offence. Lord Lytton proposed branding on the forehead with a hot iron, but the House of Lords shrank from this extreme. Lord Chief Justice Alverstone suggesting that possibly the procurer might reform and the mark would ruin him. The Archbishop of Canterbury favored flogging. He was willing to take the risk of one innocent man being convicted occasionally in order to mete out deterrent punishment to the guilty ones. This inflicting of flogging is a retrograde step in British criminal jurisprudence, for although the power of the last exists in certain cases it is rarely used and is jealously criticized. White Slave dealers, however, are put outside the pale of humanity by general consent.

Republicans in the Congress of the United States will not touch the tariff at the present session. President Taft announces that this important subject will be left to the Democrats to deal with. President-elect Wilson, who strongly favors revision, has promised to grapple with tariff evils at the first available opportunity; and, therefore, a special session of Congress will be held as soon as he takes office.

Preparation for war breeds War.

Baltimore Sun: "Armed peace" makes war always possible. The anger of the unarmed man will cool off before he has time to get a weapon. The man with a pistol in his pocket shoots before he has time to think of the consequences.

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 6.—Eighty-two Portuguese fishermen lost their lives during a recent storm on the coast of Portugal. Four days ago a fleet of 100 small fishing vessels, whose crews totalled 192 men, was caught in the gale. Up to the present only 110 of the men have returned, and it is almost certain the remainder went down with their craft. The survivors suffered severe privations. They were without food or water for three days, while the seas were very heavy and cold winds prevailed. Four of the fishermen became insane jumped overboard and were drowned. Six bodies have been washed ashore on the northern coast.

Plan Rising in Russian Poland.

London, Dec. 6.—A Vienna despatch to the "Daily Mail" says that, as a result of the war scare, the peasants in the districts bordering on the Russian frontier are blindly realizing on everything they possess, turning it into coin. They are laying in large stocks of supplies, which they bury in their back yards against Russian invasion. One day this week no fewer than 20,000 pigs were brought to Vienna from Austrian Poland to be sold. Preparations are being made for a general rising in Russian Poland should war break out, and large supplies of arms are being bought and hidden. Revolutionaries are being given theoretical military training in secret schools and are being drilled at night in the forests outside the town.
