Frederick H. Hale

The sad news was flashed over the wires Saturday that Frederick Harding Hale, who represented Carleton County in the federal parliament for many years, had died in Vancouver, B. C., on Friday evening after a brief illness from heart disease. Mr. Hale was 68 years of age, having been born in the parish of Northampton, Carleton County, December 8, 1844. His father was Martin Hale, a native of Ireland, who immigrated to this country when a boy, and settling in Northampton became a prosperous farmer and lumberman, and died at the age of 63 years. His mother was a Miss Dickson, a descendant of United Empire Loyalists, who came to New Brunswick in 1783.

Mr. Hale was educated in public and private schools, and at an early age began work in the lumber camps on the Aroostook River. At the age of 23 he engaged in business for himself, hauling logs for W. H. Murray of St. John and A. F. Randolph of Fredericton. After some years he entered into partnership with George Stickney for the purpose of engaging in the manufacture of lumber at Grafton, N. B.; and later he became a member of the firm of Hale and Craig, Woodstock, where he carried on a successful business for some years. Selling out to his partner, he transferred his business interests to Fredericton, becoming a member of the firm of Hale and Murchie, and carrying on an extensive lumber business on the St. John River.

In 1887 Mr. Hale entered Dominion politics as a candidate for Carleton county, and easily carried the county that year in the Liberal interests. Disagreeing with his party on the reciprocity question, he attached himself to the Conservative party and was their candidate in 1896, defeating N. R. Colter by 416 votes. In 1900 he was again elected, defeating F. B. Carvell by 259 votes. In 1902 he removed to Vancouver and was unable to regularly attend to the sessions of the House of that year. A month before the election of Nov 3rd, 1904, his party called him to Woodstock, and he entered the contest with F. B. Carvell, but was defeated by a majority of 274 votes.

He immediately returned to the west where he was successful in business and died a millionaire.

The burial will be in Vancouver. The deceased was married three times. His first wife was a Miss Magee, of Brighton, Carleton county. His second wife a Miss Boyer, of Victoria, Carleton county, and his widow was formerly a Miss Angelina Faulkner, of Kings County.

One brother, J. J. Hale, of Grafton, N. B., and one sister, Mrs. Zaphen Phillips, of Upper Woodstock, N. B. and five children survive. The children all of whom are in the west, are Mrs. Dr. Saunders, Eveline, now married, and Archie, Arthur and George P. Hale.

The following telegram was sent from Woodstock Monday night.

George E. Balmain, Victoria, B. C.—The Conservative party in Carleton county wish you, as their president, to tender their sympathy, furnish flowers and represent them at the funeral.

The Reflections of X

While it is beyond question that many men have been failures in life from the lack of good advice, or the want of wisdom to follow it, it is equally true that many a man's efforts have fallen short of splendid achievement through an inability to ignore the advice of his friends. And particularly is this true in the case of the man who attempts anything out of the common course. Such a man will be invariably advised by those who have his interests at heart that his aims are infeasible, or, worse still, unworthy. The reasons for this is plain. The man who undertakes any high enterprise must of necessity be of far vision and this quality is sure not to be the endowment of a number of his friends, perhaps of none of them. It is, therefore not strange that that which actuates and inspires him should seem visionary and chimerical to them—it is out of their perspective. Many of the friends of Columbus counselled him not to assay his voyage of discovery. To them the Pillars of Hercules were the ne plus ultra of their western vision.

Similar examples abound in the realms of art literature, religion science, invention and reform; there have been scores of famous artists who were advised to become priests there have been scores of great devines who were urged to be merchants or soldiers, and so on to the end of the list. The individual who can give really useful advice for the achievements of noble deeds is as rare as he who can accomplish them, and moreover he is usually the man who does accomplish them.

A Business Deal.

It has been rumored for some time that an option had been secured by two former Chatham men, on the Miller foundry business, and the visit here last week of F. H. McNaught, of Woodstock, who has been manager of the Dunbar Foundry for some time, was for the purpose of closing the deal.

It is understood that a company consisting of F. H. McNaught, J. W. McLennan, Woodstock, a Millerton man and two Chatham men will compose the new company, the name of which will be the Maritime Foundry and Machine Works, Limited.

The business of the Woodstock foundry will be taken over, and the present Chatham plant will be greatly enlarged.

With the excellent wharf privilege and the advantage of having the new railway line running through the property, splendid shipping facilities are afforded the year round, and the prospects are bright for an enlarged industry in the centre of the town.—Chatham Commercial.

White Slave Dealer Sent to Prison

Binghamton, N. Y., June 14.—Deliberating less than three minutes, the jury attending the United States court rendered a verdict of guilty in the case of Matte Blice, who was charged with importing Blanche Lalumier from Canada into New York State for "white slave purposes." Jude Ray sentenced him to eight years in the federal prison at Atlanta and imposed a fine of $3,000. Much mystery surrounds the personality of Blice. He was examined while under arrest by six witnesses who knew the facts in the case, but could not agree whether he was the notorious Edward Donato, who figured in the Morner murder case near Albany. The connection with the white slave case did not come until after he had been arrested on suspicion of being Donato.

The following councillors were in town yesterday, to attend the County Council. Messrs M. Thompson Wm Gallagher, Kent; Rennie Tracy, C. R.
