CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

Sermon From Shakespeare

(Copr. 1909 by Bradley-Garretts Co., Ltd.)

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. Henry IV., Part II., Act. III., Sc. I.

Crown as used in this sentence is the symbol of royalty and authority. The words were uttered by Henry VI. as he was nearing the close of his life. It had been prophesied by Richard II., when he was forced to resign his kingdom, that Henry would have no secure seat on the throne, that, before the crown he sought should lie in peace,

"Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons, Shall ill become the flower of England's face."

These prophetic words had been fulfilled to the letter. Henry's kingdom had been continually rent by civil strife; the very men who had drawn the sword in his behalf had risen in arms against him. So suspicious had he grown that he even suspected his son, afterwards Henry V., of having designs on his life. He had thought how sweet a thing it would be to wear a crown; he had found it "polished perturbation! golden care!"

Henry is not the only king who has experienced this. One-third of Shakespeare's dramas deal with the stories of kings. They make tragic reading. Through wickedness, weakness, or tyranny, the kings of Shakespeare's dramas held but an insecure seat on their thrones. King John and Henry IV had usurped the throne, had come to it by "by-paths and crooked ways," to use Henry's own words, and they were continually battling with enemies or trembling lest rebellion should break out; Richard II., like Charles I. of more recent history, was a weakling, a licentious spendthrift, so false to his trust that his enemies had no difficulty in making head against him; Richard III. and Macbeth were tyrannous monsters, who had waded through blood to their thrones, and they were able to maintain their power only by slaughter.

In all these instances the heads that wore the crowns had uneasy nights; every sound or shadow suggested an assassin.

When Prince Henry was at the bedside of his dying father soliloquizing on the crown he remarked: "O polish'd perturbation! golden care! That keeps the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night! sleep with it now! Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet

As he, whose brow with homely biggen (nightcap) bound, SnORES out the watch of night."

This meditation did not keep Henry from placing the crown on his own head in anticipation of his kingship, nor did it induce him to lead a life of sloth and inactivity. Crowns have their cares, but power and rule are pleasing to the human spirit, and for a crown many would gladly risk life itself. Who would want to be that snoring clown? One year of life such as Henry V. lived after he became king is worth an eternity of existence such as is suggested by the expression "snore out the watch of night." A plague on such deeply sweet sleep!

There is supreme pleasure in the struggle for authority; the striver believes that within the circle of the crown he is aiming at is Elysium. He learns otherwise. Increased honors give increased responsibilities. His elevation to a lofty position makes him a more prominent mark for the missiles of his enemies. Dean Swift very truly wrote that, "Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent. If a man rise to prominence in the political world a thousand assassins of character lie in wait for him; the mistakes of his life are dragged to the light of day; his actions and words are misrepresented. He is taxed for the privilege of wearing a crown, but he would be a poor creature if he shirked office and responsibility, because they brought watchful days and restless nights. It is the same with wealth. The successful man is usually a much abused man. If he husbands his thousands in order to make millions he is designated a tyrant capitalist or a miserly money-grabber. If he squanders his riches in luxurious living he is termed a glided fool. His crown of wealth is going to bring him more cares than joys, more enemies than trustworthy friends.

The eminent man may suffer from censure, but he has joys that the ordinary mortals wot not of. He may not sleep so soundly, or eat with such relish as the hedgers and ditchers of the earth. His responsibilities may shatter his health and shorten his life, but what of that? Life should be measured not by years but by work done. Length of years may mean mere existence, and man was not born merely to "sleep and feed." He was born for a crown with its cares. Whether or not he win that crown lies with himself. Success will probably bring him anxiety and make him enemies, but adversity and enemies only test the strong man. He delights in the battle; he finds pleasure in even the uneasy nights that are filled with dreams and plans for the struggle of the morrow.

Distressing Headaches

Headaches are largely the result of disordered kidneys.

Mrs. Hall, 84 Flora Street, St. Flora St., St. Thomas, Ont., says "I suffered for years with headaches of a most distressing nature. They would come on me suddenly, and would last for days at a time. These were usually accompanied by spells of dizziness that would leave me unable to attend to any house duties. My back was weak and caused me much suffering through the night. I had doctored for years, but all to no avail. Nothing benefited me and my condition was gradually becoming worse. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills. One box gave me a complete and lasting cure. I have not had a headache or dizzy spell since and I feel like a new person." Booth's Kidney Pills are sold by all druggists, 50c. box, under a guarantee to refund your money if they fail to relieve any disease having its origin in the kidneys or bladder. Postpaid from The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by E. W. Mair.

How Doth the Busy Bee

In the light of comparatively recent discoveries of the existence of serious communicable diseases among bees, it is specially urged that only those who are prepared to give the apary proper attention, should undertake to keep bees even if only for pleasure.

The bee has an important work to do as a pollinating agent, and in cross-pollinating the blossoms of many bush fruits. This is done by the bee in the daily routine of work in gathering nectar from the blossoms and converting it into luscious honey, pure and wholesome as food for the human being. They thus save to the profit of man a product that is lost, unless gathered by the honey bee. The amount gathered is surprisingly large and shows the profit and pleasure derived from this source.

Last Section Of Corporation Drive Now On Its Way

June 10.—Word was received here yesterday that the sorting of the lumber at the booms of the St. John Lumber Company at Van Buren Me., had been completed and that the last section of the Corporation Drive would be under way early this week. This section it is expected will contain about 10,000,000 feet of lumber and if all is brought into the booms at Douglas and Lincoln will bring the total amount of lumber which has come down to be rafted at those places to 100,000,000 feet.

A large crew of stream-drivers in the employ of Aitken Brothers, contractors for Corporation Drives is at Grand Falls and it is expected that they will begin the drive today. The water is falling fast at the present time but rains may keep up the pitch of the water. If the water continues to fall rapidly the Corporation Drive will encounter difficulties. Slow sorting at Van Buren delayed driving operations during the past week. Had the lumber destined for the lower end been let through the booms of the St. John Lumber Company as rapidly as it should have been, the last section of the corporation Drive would have been well on its way to the booms now.

108 Cheques Will be Distributed Among Canadian Farmers. Will You Get One of Them?

In addition to the twenty-seven first prizes of $50 each, there will be eighty-one other cash prizes, ranging from $10 to $25 in our 1912 PRIZE CONTEST FOR FARMERS.

This contest is along the same lines as the one which was so successful last year, except that there are three times as many prizes, and therefore three times as many chances for each contestant to win. Every farmer in Canada who uses "Canada" Cement is eligible to compete. The conditions are such that large and small users of cement have equal opportunities to win a $50 prize.

The contest is divided into three classes, and there are first, second, third and fourth prizes ($50, $25, $15 and $10) in each class.

CLASS "A"—Prizes to be awarded to the four farmers in each province who use most "Canada" Cement on their farms in 1912.

CLASS "B"—Prizes to be awarded to the four farmers in each province who send photographs of the best concrete work done with "Canada" Cement on their farms in 1912.

CLASS "C"—Prizes to be awarded to the four farmers in each province who send the best description telling how any piece of concrete work was done with "Canada" Cement. (Entries for this prize must be accompanied by photographs of the work.)

In addition to thus being divided into classes, so as to give small users of cement an equal chance with those who use more, the Contest is also divided into nine divisions, one for each province. So you see you need only to compete with the other farmers of your own province, and not with those all over Canada.

Don't think that because you have never used cement, you cannot win a prize. Many of last year's prize winners had never used cement before they entered the Contest. We will send you a free book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," that will not only help you in the Contest, but will tell you everything you could want to know about the use of cement on the farm.

Don't delay, but send us your name and address today and get this free book and full particulars of the Prize Contest right away. Use a letter, postal or coupon.
