PROMINENT RAILROAD MAN

STRONGLY ADVISES HIS FRIENDS TO TRY GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS
"I have been a Pullman Conductor on the C. P. R. and Michigan Central during the last three years. About four years ago, I was laid up with intense pains in the groin, a very sore back, and suffered most severely when I tried to urinate. I treated with my family physician for two months for gravel in the bladder but did not receive any benefit. About that time, I met another railroad man who had been similarly affected and who had been cured by taking Gin Pills, after having been given up by a prominent physician who treated him for Diabetes. He is now running on the road and is perfectly cured. He strongly advised me to try Gin Pills which I did,—with the result that the pains left me entirely. FRANK S. IDE, BUFFALO, N. Y. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sermon From Shakespeare

(Copr. 1909 by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)
O what a world of vile, ill-favor'd faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year.

Merry Wives of Windsor, Act III. Sc. 4. Money! There is nothing that has been so much reviled, and nothing that is so much sought after. There are more shames to Plutus than to Christ. The love of money has been described as the root of all evil. This judgment, pronounced two thousand years ago, has not lessened the energy of those who search after wealth. It is not unnatural that such high value should be set on money. Power is pleasant; it makes kings of ordinary men. There is nothing that so readily gives power to mortals as wealth.

Money is an excellent servant but a bad master. The love of it becomes an o'er-mastering passion. To gain it many men have sold themselves body and soul. Fortune-hunters are everywhere, and a father, as in the "Merry Wives of Windsor" has been known to sell his daughter to a witless creature like Slender, whose three hundred pounds a year made him look handsome in his eyes. Eastern potentates are condemned on account of their proneness to purchase beautiful women for their harems, but they are not much worse than Americans or Europeans who set out deliberately to purchase themselves wives by means of their wealth. The Eastern slave has no voice in the matter; her only sin may have been that she was beautiful. Enemies may have seized her and sold her into bondage or parents in their greed may have disposed of her. The semi-barbarous Circassian father in such an act is no more ignoble than the cultured American or European who weds his daughter to moneybags. The refined girl, who deliberately mates herself to some wrinkled old dotard or illiterate boor for wealth and position, is in many instances not as high a type as the slave who has been forced into a harem.

It is surprising what a touchstone money is. It causes suitors to "see Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt," and this admiration continues just so long as the money lasts. Shakespeare has many references to the perpetrating power of gold. One of his most striking is in "Romeo and Juliet" where he speaks of it as "saint-seducing." Men who would otherwise have lived holy lives have been caught by the glitter of money and seduced from righteousness. Judas was no doubt a man of high moral character save for the one evil trait, the love of money. His tragic death would seem to indicate that it was "saint-seducing gold," and not innate depravity which caused him to betray the Master. For a moment earth and its pleasures seemed fairer to poor Judas than eternity.

Money is a maker of traitors. There is no war in which the authorities have not to be watchful lest their plans be sold to the enemy. Courageous men of noble impulses have yielded to the tempter. The name most abhorred on the American continent is that of Benedict Arnold, who Judas-like attempted to sell the cause to which he was attached for gold. One of the most disgusting sights in life is when The learned pate ducks to the golden fool."

Yet it is a frequent one. In church and state men who have nothing but money to recommend them are raised to high positions. Among the representatives of the people in the nation are many who are chosen solely on account of their wealth. The power their money has purchased them, for the time being gives a false lustre to their character, and, though they may have many vile, ill-favor'd faults, in their millions they seem attractive.

Through the false value put upon money earth is filled with crime and unhappiness. It is the pomp and display of the wealthy that ordinarily makes the thief. Honor and virtue are sold by those who are made ignoble by the deceptive promises of gold. Happy families have been broken and scattered by the greed for treasure which cannot satisfy. Shakespeare has a wealth of phraseology condemnatory of the love of money. In "Timon of Athens" he makes Timon discourse at length on its depraving nature: "Thus much of this will make black white; foul, fair; Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; coward valiant.

This yellow slave Will knit and break religion; bless the accursed; Make the hoar leprosy adored; place thieves And give them title, knee and approbation, With senators on the bench."

All this is true where the love of money becomes a passion and enslaves the will. However, money is man's best servant. It is the nurse of old age; a medicine and a staff in time of sickness or weakness. The love of it is undoubtedly the root of much evil, but money itself has produced a great deal that makes life worth living. Industry, learning and the state would all be in a very primitive condition were it not for accumulated wealth. It is earth's most useful servant, but should be kept in its place. Set it up as a god and it becomes a Juggernaut crushing its victims beneath its car.

Newfoundland Satisfied With Her Position

Ottawa, May, 22—"The attitude of Newfoundland toward federation with Canada is that of a man doing well in a small way who refuses the overtures of a rich neighbor because he prefers his own independence."

Such were the words today of Sir Ralph Williams, governor-general of Newfoundland. Sir Ralph is here en route from Toronto where he met the Duke Connaught on behalf of himself and the colony he represents. He will spend some time in Montreal and Quebec before he returns.

"The people of Newfoundland have every respect for Canada, its wealth and its resources, but just at present they prefer to remain independent," he stated. "Times are good there now; perhaps, if they do not remain so, feeling may change. However, we think we are doing pretty well."

Paid No Heed To Warnings About Icebergs

London, May 22—That the iceberg with which the Titanic collided was one of those of which she had warnings from other ships, is the conclusion reached by the board of trade court of inquiry after a careful examination of the wireless telegrams passed to and from the steamer on the day of the disaster.

This was brought out in the course of today's session when the testimony of Herbert John Pitman, third officer; Joseph Groves Boxhall, fourth officer of the Titanic, and Harold Godfrey Lowe, fifth officer of the Titanic was concluded. Their evidence was similar to that given before the United States senatorial committee.

During Boxhall's examination, however, the solicitor general, Sir John Simon, went at some length into the wireless despatches in regard to ice received by the Titanic, information which it was his duty to mark on the chart. Boxhall could not remember all the wireless despatches received but the solicitor general said from those of which they already had evidence, and others to be produced, it was plain the warnings received from the Baltic, the Amerika, the Californian and the Corona all related to icebergs in the oblong space where the Titanic met her fate.

Lord Mersey asked the witness whether he could explain why having received warnings of icebergs both to the north and south of her, the Titanic was allowed to continue her way in such regions. The witness did not reply.

Lowe was then examined with respect to the three bodies recently picked up in a collapsible boat and said he was absolutely certain the men were dead before he left the boat, from which he took a number of passengers.

Mi-o-na

An Excellent Stomach Remedy

Mrs. J. R. Whyte, Killarney, Manitoba, who says, "I have found great comfort and relief from Mi-o-na. I had been greatly troubled for months with heartburn and a heavy burning feeling in my stomach. A fair meal would disturb me so much that I would have to sit up at night—the food would sour on my stomach and form a gas which would cause belching and dizzy spells. These distressing troubles disappeared after using Mi-o-na and I shall always speak highly of this excellent stomach remedy."

Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble ever written. It gives quick relief and cures permanently. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. 50 cents, with a guarantee to cure or refund your money. Or postpaid from The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. You will search the world over and not find a stomach remedy half so good as Mi-o-na. Sold and guaranteed by E. W. Mair.

Not only this but these as well

DON'T think that concrete can be used only for building bridges, silos, walls and walks; because if you do, you will probably overlook all the places where you can use it now.

T. L. Irving, of North Georgetown, Quebec, used concrete for 81 different purposes on his farm in 1911.

There are probably at least a dozen profitable uses for concrete on your farm at the present moment.

Perhaps you haven't thought of Concrete, except for a new barn, or a silo, or some other big improvement for which you aren't quite ready yet. That's why you should read

"What The Farmer Can Do With Concrete"

It will open your eyes to the hundreds of uses that other farmers have found for this material. In plain language, and with the aid of many photographs, it explains just what these uses are, and how they can be applied to your farm.

Concrete can not only be used for all the purposes to which wood has been applied, but also many others for which wood would never be suitable.

It is not only a building material; it's a "handy" material, something that you'll grow to depend upon more and more, as you learn its possibilities.

So write for this book. You'll find it isn't a catalogue, nor an argument for you to buy our cement. Every one of its 160 pages is devoted to telling you what farmers have done and can do with concrete.
