The Reflections of X

Not a few people of the the present day are heard to complain of the excessive attention paid by newspapers to matters which are sensational and even gross in character. These people believe that the admission to their homes of papers which come laden with details of every foul happening which can be worked up to a supposed news value, is much the same as regularly admitting to the family circle some individual who insists on indulging in impure and profane language. They also assert that this undue emphasizing of the base and unworthy crowds out, or at best over shadows, many subjects which should elicit the worlds closest study.

During the past week two event occurred in the United States which have served well to illustrate what has just been said. One of these was the execution of the slayer of Avis Linnell; the other the holding of the great International Peace Conference at Lake Mohonk, N. Y. The first of these was the final act in a drama that had been enacted in the very slime of human thought and action and yet it was given, as had been each of the other acts, the widest publicity. Column after column and often page after page of the newspapers of America were given up to the description of its minutest details, until it might almost be said that the whole American continent stood viewing it in all its horrible gruesomeness.

The other event was unquestionably one of the most important of the year. It had called men and women from the farthest corners of the globe for the discussion of ways and means for the doing away with strife between nations, and all the unspeakable evils which attend such strife. The men composing it were in many instances men of world wide reputation, a reputation which had been gained in laboring to bless humanity.

But how was this important conference treated by the newspapers? One of the largest and most influential of these is at hand as I write. It contains two short paragraphs on the subject, and these are in a remote corner.

Society's back yard and the average newspapers front page have too much in common. What the world needs is a press which will make much of the good deeds which men do and less of their crimes, which may be only another way of saying that what the press needs is a public to sincerely demand of it a higher standard than it seems at present willing to adopt.

On The Range May 24th.

Owing to the rainy appearance of the morning not many marksmen took advantage of the holiday to hunt the bullseye. As the morning wore away, however, the rain ceased, and before ten o'clock everything was dry and clean, and those who were so fortunate as to get up to the range had a very pleasant outing, and all enjoyed the four or five hours shooting immensely.

Some good shooting was done during the day. In a special ten shot match at 500 yards distance, C. E. Sharp placed nine of his shots in the bullseye in succession.

Following are the scores put on in regular match for the club prizes:

World's Greatest Manufacturer of Cotton Goods
Dead

New York, May 27—Matthew C.D. Borden, one of the most prominent cotton goods manufacturers in the country, died at his residence here this afternoon of intestinal trouble, in his 74th year.

Mr. Borden was the largest individual cotton manufacturer and printer in the world. His seven print cloth mills operated under the name of the Fall River Iron Works Company, constitute the largest print cloth manufacturing plants in the United States. He was also the owner of the American Print Cloth Company of Fall River. For many years he was identified with Bliss, Fabyan & Co., of New York and Boston.

Mr. Borden was not a member of the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers Association and his independent action in the matter of prices and wages occasionally compelled the other mill owners to adopt his policy. He had resided in New York for many years, although he was a native of Fall River. Mr. Borden was a descendant of Richard Borden, born in England in 1595.

Chamberlain Succeeds Hays

Montreal, May 24—The following statement was given out at the Grand Trunk offices here to-day:

"We are officially informed that Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, vice-president, and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, has been appointed to succeed the late Charles Melville Hays."

"Mr. Chamberlain has also been elected a member of the Grand Trunk board in the place of Mr. Hays."

Mr. Wm. Wainwright, second vice-president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, has been elected first vice-president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. M. M. Reynolds has been elected a director of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and second vice-president."

When Mr. Smithers had made the announcement, he was asked if any action would be taken in the near future in the way of appointing a general manager for the Grand Trunk Pacific, as the newly elected president filled the dual position of vice-president and general manager, but Mr. Smithers replied that he thought they had done a very good morning's work and that the matter referred to would be taken up later on. He would likely leave Montreal about June 8, and he intended returning to this city the first of August. Asked if there would be any statement as to the company's steamship plans on the Atlantic and Pacific, the chairman answered in the negative, saying that would be taken up in time.

He would like to say however, that after discussing the matter with the new president as well as the chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific, he felt justified in saying that the rails would be laid from Moncton to Prince Rupert by the fall of 1914. The contractors were hurrying forward the work and everything pointed to the realization of the dream of a completed railway within a little better than two years.

Was A Native of New Brunswick.

Washington, May 25—A Stewart of Wausau, Wis., who served three terms in the House of Representatives, is dead at his Washington home, aged 83 years. He was born in the Province of New Brunswick and settled in 1840, where the City of Wausau subsequently was built, engaging in the lumber business, which he followed throughout his life.

Sikh Women Will Not Be Deported

Ottawa, May 24—The wives of the two Sikhs who were detained at Vancouver for deportation because they had violated the immigration act, and whose case has been under consideration by the government and before the courts for several months, will be allowed to remain in Canada. This has been decided upon by Hon. Robert Rogers, minister of the interior, as an act of grace and as the husband of these women are now in Canada, but without establishing a precedent. In view of the decision the proceedings will be dropped.
