Sermon From Shakespeare

(Copr. 1909 by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.) Against self-slaughter There is a prohibition so divine, That cravens my weak hand. -Cymbeline, Act III., Sc. 4.

Not a day passes but a number of cowards flee from the battle of life by the suicide route. Suicide is still common in all countries. Men, women and even children have been guilty of loss of fortune, loss of friends, sickness, can all be endured, and the sufthis dark crime. So far as the body is concerned, it should ever be kept in mind that the individual who wears it or inhabits it does not own it. In a broad way, it is society's. Man is a gregarious animal, and all he has, -possessions, his body, his soul, to a certain extent belong to the flock. The ideal state would be one in which individualism and socia ism reign together harmoniously. Life would be held in greater esteem by the possessor of it did he realize that he is an essential part of the world's social organism.

The body should be a holy thing. The founder of Christianity in speaking of it said: "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up." St. Paul viewed it in the same light. "Know ye not," he wrote, "that ye are the temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you." And again: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own." Shakespeare viewed the body in the same way,-no doubt taking the spirit of his remarks from the New Testament. Macduff in speaking of the death of King Duncan cried out:

"Confusion now hath made his masterpiece.

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke out

The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence

The life o' the building."

The Smart Man burst into the room. "Heard the news about Dickenson getting shot?" he roared, red with excitement.

Club members dropped their papers and sprang suddenly to life.

"Where did he get shot?" broke in another. "Down at the ironmonger's!" chuckled the Smart Man, slipping into the best chair. "He bought two pounds of it!"

When we go to an art gallery and think we are tired from so much, walking we are mentally tired, and our eyes are tired from being kept in a strained position. The greatest danger to the adult eye comes from overstraining and overtaxing and continued use of the eyes without change of position or focus.

Our eyes are always working, and how often does it occur to us to give them rest? We may be merely thinking, and our thoughts are miles away but in the meantime our eyes are wandering and unconsciously taking in the scenes around. The eyes should be closed occasionally for rest. When tired and worn out, close the eyes a few moments, and see how rested you will feel.

Racehorse for Fifty Cents

One has often heard of horses being sold for what is termed a "mere song" .and afterwards turning out useful (says a writer in "Horse and Hound"), but it is certain that no animal to win a race ever changed hands for so little as Sugar Loaf. She was actually some weeks since sold to Mr. Arthur Evans for 48 cents, but after the daughter of Wolf's Crag had easily won the Monument Plate at Great Yarmouth (England) recently, Mr. Evans bought her in for $750. The filly was virtually a gift to Mr. Evans, and the two "bob" paid was more or less a joke, but there it stands, as another record for a lowpriced racer!

The Grotesque Penguin

Of all the foreign birds to be seen in zoological collections, it is the penguins that gain the most popularity with the least attempt to do so; do not affably converse with the public like parrots, or make grotesque grimaces like pelicans; indeed, they studiously ignore the visitors, whom they attract by their inimitably quaint caricature of humanity. No birds depart more in form from the usual bird-type, and there is something about them which irresistibly suggests an over-fed little boy in an overcoat with the sleeves very much too tight for him, as they toddle about with their stiff wings hanging down, fection. He has the right attitude towards life and no blow could fall so guaranteed by E. W. Mair. Man is not his own; body and soul place of some god. That this body of the flesh is a temple is well worth brooding over. What does it mean? This finite being has infinite possibilities. Perfection should be the goal. By our physical powers we should aim after perfection, and the higher we attain the more do our bodies become temples of the Infinite. This is at once a solemnizing and exalting thought. A man who fully realised it could never end his existence by his own hand. It would be easier for him to put a torch to the church he worshipped in or the house he called home. The belief in the sacredness of the body has manifested itself in strange ways. The Chaldeans, the Babylonians, the Hindus, in their human sacrifices were inspired by this idea. They strove to appease their gods by offering them the most sacred thing they possessed, the bodies of their children or of themselves.

Under temptation, pressed down by the unbearable burden of life, many men have like Hamlet meditated suicide. They have been saved by the feeling that their body is not their own, it is God's. To destroy it would be to destroy His property. This, more than craven fear, prevents the practice of suicide from becoming common. Unfortnnately it seems to be increasing instead of diminishing. A materialistic age tends to promote it. The rich find that gold has not brought them satisfaction; the butter-

"Such Earthquake no Other Theatre Ever Produced"

Strassburg, Germany, Feb. 3-"Sit down, you idiots!" shouted Manager Martin to the startled audience in the Union Theatre the other night. "Here I give you a first class imitation of an earthquake in my play, such a one as no other theatre ever produced before, and you are so scared you behave like a lot of silly sheep rushing for a gate. Sit down immediately and let the play go on."

It was a real earthquake and the theatre was rocking so that the people in it were on the edge of a panic. Realizing what a tragedy would follow a stampede for the exits Manager Martin, with great presence of mind and good judgment, sprang from the box where he was sitting to the stage and by his ruse so calmed the people in the house that they sat down again and saw the performance through.

Georgian Bay Canal Project Discussed

Objections to the Renewal of the Charter of Old Company

Ottawa, Feb. 6-The Georgian Bay Canal was the occasion of a lively conference before the Commons Railway committee to-day. The Ottawa, Montreal and Georgian Bay Canal Co., which some twenty years ago obtained charter rights for the construction of this canal, came before the committee with a bill to renew the charter. There were a lot of people on hand to oppose the renewal, including the Ontario government and the Conservation Commission. The promoters of the bill claimed that they had spent a half million in surveys, which gave them a vested right which should be recognized. The opponents of the renewal claimed that this was a project to grab land, navigation channels and water powers, which were for the people.

The Conservation Commission in a let-stays for any length of time outside the capital, he is accompanied by a Minister in attendance. The position is supposed to be filled by each member of the Cabinet in turn, the period of duty varying from a week to a fortnight, or even a month. In sotual practice only two or three Ministers are called upon to be in attendance upon the King, and the duration of their visits depends in great measure upon their personal popularity.

The late King Edward frequently dispensed with the service of a Minister when he went abroad, and the old custom of having a member of the Cabinet at Windsor when the Court went there does not now prevail. In these advanced days of telegraphs and telephones, motor-cars, and other methods of rapid intercommunication it is not considered necessary that a responsible Minister of the Crown should leave his official duties for so lengthy a period.

Compulsory Dinner.

The duties of a Minister in attendance are not arduous, except at times when the political horizon is clouded, or when this country is engaged in war. When things are normal - that is to say, dull - the Minister has little to do but enjoy himself, and nowadays every facility is given for his doing so after his own particular fashion. Breakfast is served in his private sitting-room, if he so desires it, or he joins the gentlemen of the Court.

Luncheon, too, is a meal at which the attendance of the Minister is optional. When the King is out shooting or fishing - and scarcely a day passes but sees him engaged in one or other of these sports - luncheon is taken, of course, in the open; and if the Minister happens to be a sportsman, he is naturally invited to join the Royal party.

The Minister's presence at dinner is, however, insisted upon, and he is required to be present in the drawingroom afterwards. Queen Victoria used to go through official documents with her Ministers twice a day - in the morning and after dinner. King Edward, who was exceedingly methodical, devoted the first part of the morning to official business, and unless despatches received during the day were specially urgent they were not submitted and discussed until the following morning.

King George is equally methodical. His Majesty is an early riser and is often at work at half-past nine. The King expects all documents to be ready for him, and business is therefore got through very expeditiously, and no time is "cut to waste." Unless any matter of urgency should demand attention business is then dismissed for the day, the evenings being devoted to amusement and general conversation.

All official despatches are opened by the Minister, who masters their contents and makes such notes as public utilities and should be retained may be necessary before submitting them to the King. If His Majesty approves of the manner in which it is suggested they should be dealt with The R. T. Booth, Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont.

Sand Bricks: Growth of Industry

The making of building bricks by pressing together milk of lime and ten or twelve times its volume of coarse sand is a twentieth century industry, says a Scientist. Beginning with the production of a few thousand bricks in 1901 at Michigan City, Ind., it has developed rapidly in the United States, and the product seems to have stood the tests of the baboratory and actual use.

The Greatest Man of All

A man who has made a happy home for his wife and children, no matter what he has not done in the way of achieving wealth and honor; if he has done that, he is a grand success. If he has not done that, and it is his own fault, though he be the highest in the land, he is a most pitiable failure.

We wonder how many men in a mad pursuit of gold, which characterizes the age, realize that there is no fortune which can be left to their families as great as the memory of a happy home.

Webster's dictionary says Hansard is an official report of the proceedings of the British parliament, so called from the name of the publishers. In Canada, also, Hansard is the official report of proceedings in parliamentary sessions. When you heard speakers referring to Hansard they had reference to the official report of debates, etc., on the floor of the house.

Chief Crawford Advised Hyomei For Uatarrh

J. Wilfred Brown of Water St., Camppellton, N. B., says: "Hyomei cured me of a severe case of catarrh and asthma after four years of suffering. I was constantly hawking and spitting and the catarrhal droppings that came from the head into my throat affected my stomach and I could not enjoy my meals. Chief Crawford having the same trouble advised me to try Hyomei. I did so and soon I was without a sign of the health racking disease that had troubled me for so long. I now recommend Hyomei to all catarrh sufferers.
