Hackland-Tupper

One of the pretty Easter weddings took place yesterday in St. Stephen's Church, when Nellie Edgar Tupper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rice Tupper, and granddaughter of Lieut.-Col. Tupper, of Woodstock, New Brunswick, was married to Mr. Gordon Sutherland Hackland, Hanley, Sask., son of the late Mr. J. H. Hackland and Mrs. Hackland of Paris, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. S. Broughall, former assistant rector of St. Stephen's Church. The wedding music was played by Dr. Doward, and the bridal hymn sung by one of the choir boys. The fair young bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in ivory Duchesse satin and train, with trimmings of lace, pearls and orange blossoms, the bodice veiled in marquisette. Miss Marjorie Tupper, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, in pale yellow satin, with guipure lace, and the bridesmaid, Miss Mary Tupper, of Rockport, Mass., cousin of the bride, in pale blue satin, with Bebe Irish lace, had large black maline hats, and carried bouquets of Richmond roses. Dr. Robert M. Macfarlane, of Berlin, Ont., was best man, and the ushers were Mr. S. Brock Tupper, brother of the bride, and Mr. J. B. O'Neill. Mrs. J. Rice Tupper held a reception afterwards, when she was wearing blue satin veiled with black nion, embroidered with gold. American Beauty roses, and large black hat with plumes and touches of pink and blue. Mrs. Hackland, mother of the bridegroom, wore black satin, and Mrs. Spence, of Hawthorne Avenue, sister of the bridegroom, was in pale blue satin, and real lace. The happy couple left on a short trip to New York before going West, the bride traveling in a navy blue suit, smartly tailored, with hat to match.

A MOTHER'S PRAISE OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Wm. Sullivan, Main River, N. B., says: "Up to the time my baby was three months old it cried almost continually day and night. I tried many things but got nothing to help it until a neighbor advised Baby's Own Tablets. I got a box of these and there was a change almost after the first dose and in a short time the child was in the best of health, and is now a big, fat, good-natured baby. I am now never without the Tablets in the house and recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The death took place at her home at Meductic, N. The Kings Highway

Johnston-Golding

A very pretty, but informal wedding, took place at 219 Fourteenth avenue west on Thursday evening March 28 th., at eight o'clock in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sanderson. The bride was Miss Lottie May Golding, formerly of Fredericton, New Brunswick, who has been in Calgary for the last six years. The groom was Mr. Percy Wilfred Johnston, of the real estate firm of Johnston and MacLeod of this city.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Kerby of Mount Royal College, in the presence of the family and a very few intimate friends.

The bride was becomingly dressed in a gown of white Duchesse satin, court train and pearl trimmings and carried a large bouquet of white roses. She was unattended.

After the wedding supper, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left on the night train for Winnipeg, thence to New York, where they sailed for a three months tour to Europe. They expect to visit many places of interest and will be guests at the home of Mr. Johnstons parents in England.

The presents were both costly and numerous; among them were gifts from England, New York, New Brunswick, many city personal friends as well as from the choir of Central Methodist church of which the bride was a member.

Red Cross Half Mast

Founder of American Red Cross Society Dead.

Washington, April 12.—Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross Society, died at her home in Glen Echo, Md., at 9 o'clock this morning. The cause of her death was chronic pneumonia, with which she was stricken about a year ago. Her brother, Stephen Barton, of Boston, was with her when she died. Miss Barton was born at Oxford Mass., in 1831.

Miss Clara Harlowe Barton, founder of the Red Cross in America and one of the most famous philanthropists of modern times, was born in North Oxford Mass., in 1831. She was the youngest of five children of Stephen Barton, who when little more than a boy had been one of General Wayne's soldiers in the West.

Her first apprenticeship to the duties of nurse, in which she afterwards made such a noble record began when she was only twelve years old and was as the special attendant of an ailing brother. Afterwards she resumed her studies in the district school, and subsequently graduated from the Clinton (N. Y.) Liberal Institute. She taught school in various places in Massachusetts and New Jersey until 1854. Her health failing as a result of overwork, she obtained a position in the Patent Office in Washington, but was dismissed on the ground of antislavery sentiments. After Lincoln's accession to office, when she went back to Washington. With the news of the attack on Sumter she declared her intention of devoting her strength and savings to the care of those wounded on the battlefields.

Her work in this direction began April 20, 1861, when about thirty wounded of the Sixth Massachusetts were taken to the Washington Infirmary, having been attacked while passing through Baltimore. Her undertaking was a hard one at first, for she was without official rank or authority, but these obstacles were removed soon and with a carload of supplies she started for Culpeper Court House, then crowded with the wounded from the battle of Cedar Mountain. At Antietam hers were the only supplies on the ground on the day of battle.

During 1863 she toiled hard near Charleston, allowing nothing to keep her from the soldiers' bedsides. Her marvellous organizing ability and executive force, by which she could always direct and hold others to their place in the work, saved many lives and smoothed the way into the dark valley for many others who could not be saved. Eventually, General Butler gave an official position which enabled her to accomplish even more, and one of her most notable achievements was the tracing of missing soldiers supposed to be in prison camps.

Miss Barton went to Europe for rest and recuperation in 1869, but at the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war she was entreated by the Central Society of the International Red Cross, to which her record was known, to go to the front and assist in caring for the wounded of both armies. She went at once to the seat of war and for a year worked with the society in Germany and France. On her return to her native land, she awakened public interest and proceeded to organize the American Society of the Red Cross. She long had seen that the society could be quite as efficient in other cases of calamity as in time of war and this feature was given full prominence in the constitution adopted. She was elected president of the organization early in June, 1881, with headquarters in Washington. Her first personal Red Cross relief work was done the following year, when the Mississippi River overflowed its banks. The next great disaster in which she gave aid was the overflow of the Ohio, in 1883, and this was soon followed by the Louisiana cyclone.

Since then her work had taken her to all parts of the globe. Among the disasters in which she rendered invaluable aid were the West Indian hurricanes, the Johnstown and Galveston floods, and others where loss of life was great. She was soon on the ground after the Armenian massacres, in 1896, and her work in the Spanish-American War is still fresh in the public mind.

In recognition of her services she had received decorations from sovereigns, including Queen Victoria and Emperor William, as well as from foreign and American organizations and individuals.

Miss Barton resigned the presidency of the American Red Cross Society in 1904, at the time when that organization was disrupted by factional strife. In the year following she became president of the National First Aid Association.
