It is a continuous strain for a builder to watch his buildings go up.

DAILY FASHION HINT.

Miss's Sweet Costume.

This dress has a very pretty blouse with drop shoulder and plain sleeves, intended to be either full length or elbow sleeves and a handsome sailor collar to finish the neck. The blouse is also arranged to be worn with a high neck and standing collar and in this case it has a side front closing. The skirt worn with the blouse shows a pleated section, which is the latest fashion in walking skirts. This skirt is a three-piece model and opens at one side on the same line as the closing of the waist.

This is a model which will be very handsome in linen or other heavy wash material, and also in silk or in light weight serge.

The dress pattern No. 6191 is cut in sizes 14, 16 and 18 years. Medium size requires 3 3/4 yards of 44 inch material, with 3 1/4 yards of insertion to trim, as shown in our illustration.

The pattern may be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

Useless Extravagance

A patched shoe, a coarse jacket, a cheap garment that you can afford are admirable. Costly clothing for which you are in debt to the merchant, the dressmaker and the tailor is a badge of shame in character. The boy or man, girl or woman, who lives beyond his or her income, and is always dragging a chain of debt, is pitifully weak. Fortunately these are days when, by the exercise of good judgment and economy, people may dress well at comparatively small expense. Children should acquire a habit of caring for their clothes, of folding them neatly when they take them off, or removing spots and stains and of so using their everyday garments that they will look neat as long as they last. Vanity is a small and weak sort of fault, not worthy of a sensible person, but decent self-respect is a thing to cultivate. Meanwhile there is no harm in a bright ribbon, nor in a pretty gown or a becoming tie, but we need not emulate our ancestors, who were always snubbing their juniors lest they become self-conceited.

Keep up Courage

The most perilous hour of a person's life is when he is tempted to despond. The man who loses his courage loses all. There is no more hope for him than for a dead man; but it matters not how poor he may be, how much pushed by circumstances, how much deserted by friends, how much lost to the world; if he only keeps his courage, holds up his head, works on with his hands and with unconquerable will determines to be and to do what becomes a man, all will be well.

Parents should, so far as they can, guard children from any and every cause of terror and apprehension. A habit of courage can be cultivated and the child who has never been blamed for what he cannot help, not misunderstood for what is not his fault, will thank his father and mother in after life for their excellent judgment.

Home Sweet Home.

A cheerful happy home is the sweetest place on earth and the greatest safeguard against temptation for the young. Parents should spare no pains to make home a cheerful place. There should be pictures to adorn the walls, flowers to cultivate the finer sensibilities, entertaining books, instructive newspapers and periodicals. These things, no doubt, cost money, but not a tithe the amount that one of the lesser vices cost, vices which are sure to be acquired away from home, but seldom there. Then there should be social pleasure, a gathering of old and young around the hearthstone, a warm welcome to the neighbor who drops in to pass a pleasant hour. There should be music and reading. In this way each member of the family looks forward to the hour of the reunion as the brightest one of the twenty-four.

A love of home and homelife should be planted in every girl and boy, and there is no way so sure of giving this lesson as in making the home attractive and pleasant. Now, to make it attractive is not for the mother to do all the rough work and the daughter to do the trimming, but it is to have your boys and girls share the cares, experience and labors of the home. Teach them every detail, give them a personal interest. Lay a foundation early, for it will be slow work, requiring patience through oft multiplied failures.

Riddles and Answers

What is the difference between a 300-pound man sitting in a fragile chair and a steamer sailing down a winding river? One bends the rounds, and the other rounds the bends.

What is the difference between a man dodging footwear that is being thrown at him and a man chasing a flock of canvasbacks out of his pond? One ducks the shoes and the other shoes the ducks.

What is the difference between a sixteen-ounce baby and a man writing energetically on his typewriter? One weighs a pound and the other pounds away.

Natural Gas In Good Flow.

Moncton, S. pt. 11--Officials of the Maritime Oil Fields, Limited, report having successfully capped another large gas well at Stoney Creek. A heavy flow of gas was obtained when the drill had sunk 1,640 feet. The new wells have a capacity of about three or four million feet daily. Drilling operations are progressing at Sussex, and a big strike of gas is expected at any time.

NO MORE MUTTON.

London, Sept. 12--Tommy Atkins has been "kicking" so frequently about the mutton which was served to him once a week that it has been taken off the soldiers' menu entirely. The troops will be fed henceforth on "the roast beef of old England", (from Argentine)

The Cost Of Living In Hotels

Visitors to Montreal of late have been complaining about the cost of accommodation and food in this city. One delegate to the American Bar Association convention tells of paying $8 a day for himself and wife for an inferior room in a private house. He certainly seems to have been grossly overcharged. But if he was told the rate in advance and saw the room, he knew what he was doing. Other visitors have not been so lucky, for some of them, it is said, thought they were staying in moderately-priced establishments until presented with their bills. Their consternation under such circumstances can be readily understood even by citizens who only occasionally dine outside their homes. For there are some great old meals and drinks to be had in Montreal, so far as their cost is concerned. It is possible for a man to take a party of three to supper after the theatre and spend $20 for the meal. If wine and cigars are added the price is about doubled, which works out at the rate of $10 a plate. This has actually been paid and the man who got the bill was as surprised as he was pained. Of course a supper can be obtained for a quarter that amount and even less in first-class restaurants, but a large hole is nearly always made in the pocketbook of the late dinerout. Relatively, also, the more moderate man who goes to the bar with his fellows is as hard hit on occasion. There are places where 50 cents is charged for a whiskey and a bottle of soda. To treat three companions is to spend $2. The drinker in such a case is helping to pay for the building and the land it is on. He is not getting his money's worth unless his vanity is being gratified to the extent of about 30 cents a head for the party. On the other hand, he can walk into good bars and get the same goods and similar service for a third of the price. As far as drinking goes, however, no outrage is committed, for the drinkers as a rule know what to expect in the places they drop into and refreshments are a luxury and can be done without. It is when guests are over-charged for food and room that injustice is done. People should always enquire before-hand what the charges are to be. If they do not, there is small use in complaining.

It is not in Montreal only that travellers find the cost of living high. All who have been abroad know what it costs to go about. In the United States it is just as bad. The New York Commercial in discussing the prices returning citizens paid for their vacations, tells of an incident that took place in the environs of Lake George as a typical instance. There was a man gave a farewell dinner for which he paid about $12 a plate. At its close the head waiter asked him if he wanted some sweets. He said he did. They came. They were worth about 25 cents, and the bill for them was $1.50. This in addition to the $90 he had paid for the dinner. The man was angry over the petty meanness shown, but he had to pay just the same.

The Commercial expresses the opinion that a certain type of city dwellers is in a large measure to blame for the fancy charges made at certain establishments. Men and their wives appear at summer hotels in glaring raiment and with currency in both hands. They are out to spend cash as well as time and demand expensive things. The hotelkeepers are compelled to meet their wishes, and, indeed, would be fools in a business sense if they did otherwise. It is the same with respect to the fashionable restaurants. As a rule in every place of importance a man can buy what he wants at the price he wants to pay. The mistakes that are made are few and the makers thereof do not usually repeat them. One lesson suffices.

Won the Bet

Pat made a bet with Mike that he could carry a hodful of bricks up three ladders to the top of the building with Mike sitting on the hod. The ladders were on the outside of the building. On the third ladder Pat made a misstep, but caught himself in time to save Mike falling on the stone sidewalk. "You've won the bet!" "Yes," Pat said. "You slip"

The Effect of Good Roads.

The direct effect that changing bad roads into good roads has upon land value and the general economic welfare of a community is shown in several concrete illustrations gathered by the United States department of agriculture. The department has just issued a statement on the subject, based upon a mass of information gathered by the office of public roads, which is making a special study of the economic effect of road improvement in the country. According to data gathered, where good roads replace bad ones the values of farmlands bordering on the roads increase to such an extent that the cost of road improvement is equalized, if not exceeded. The general land values, showed marked advances, following the improvement of roads.

Trotting record broken

Handine, Minn., Sept 8--The State trotting record of 2.051, established by Cresceus on August 31, 1901, was broken by the champion Uhlan today when he circled the mile in 1.59.

The king of trotters made the first quarter in 30 seconds, the half mile in 59 1/2 seconds, and the three quarters in 1.30. Coming down the home stretch with the pacemaker setting the pace and Doc Tanner urging him on, the trotter crossed the wire in 1.59. The crowd rose to its feet as Uhlan came down the stretch and cheered madly. When the timekeeper hung up 1.59, the 15,000 in the stands gave Uhlan and his driver Doc Tanner, one of the greatest ovations ever tendered anybody at the State Fair.

Nothing new in the McGillan Case

As a result of the investigation by Constable Woolverton, in the case of the McGillan, who disappeared near Grand Falls about July 23, and whose body was afterwards found in the river, has convinced the attorney general, so it is said, that there is sufficient evidence of foul play to take measures to unravel the mystery, and as a step in that direction, it is also said that the government will offer a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the parties concerned in the death of McGillan.

There seems to be an unaccountable tendency in the McGillan case to do anything but what is right. The McGillan case is a very hard one to solve.
