THE STAYING GUEST LURED
HOME

afternoon "washing up" in the kitchen. At the approach of train time he spread a proper white cloth and set the dining-room table for two. A porterhouse steak was broiling on the range. "Mebbe I'm wrong," he admitted with his grim grin, "but there's nothin' like bein' prepared."

When the usual string of passenger's began to file past his gate he was there, like a watchman on a tower. He didn't have to wait long. From the line that stretched down the walk a rotund, elderly figure came popping out, first on the right then on the left, as it passed more slow going pedestrians.

"There she be!" Uncle Timothy exclaimed, with mingled emotion, "and she's sure got a full head of steam on!"

"Well, you're still here at any rate!" she snapped, and, pushing past him, went up the walk and into the house. She was one of those round, ruddy women, who when excited and hurried, seem to be boiling just beneath the skin.

"Get your breath," he said, cheerfully, pushing her into a rocker.
"Then put your wrapper on and we'll talk. I'd hustle around and finish supper," and he vanished in to the kitchen. He had a fine sense of what was due in such a case, had Uncle Timothy!

She remained in the chair where he had placed her, her gaze taking in all the visible portion of the house and everything in it, as if she half-expected it to be whisked away from her. Uncle Timothy, amid a mighty clatter of preparation, called out a few amiable questions concerning the Whartons, but she scarcely heard him.

As he was stooping to the oven to take out the baked potatoes he felt her in the doorway. Her little squat figure seemed to have taken on actual inches. She towered there like Doom!

"We might as well have it out, Timothy," she said, in a tone he never thought could be wrung from her. "Who is the woman?"

"Er—which—what woman, my dear?" he questioned vaguely, setting the pan with the potatoes in it on top of the stove and facing her with more courage than he would have imagined possible.

"The one," she threw at him, with a break in her voice, "that you've been making a special kind of a fool of yourself over."

"Oh her!" he laughed.
"The shamelessness of you!" she panted.

"It is shameless, ain't it?" he admitted. I'm old enough to be gettin' sensible, but lord, honey, I can't do without you 'forever!
If I couldn't bring you back one way I was bound to do it another.

She put up her hands to the Irish lace stock around her plump neck and jerked it loose as if it were choking her. She dropped like a weight to the chair against the kitchen wall, her eyes fixing him incredulously.

"Then who was the man!" she gasped, her curiosity persisting to the very last.

"He wasn't nobody," Uncle Timothy said. "What was cut out was just a advertisement."

"D'y'e mean you actually planned it to bring me home, Timothy," she demanded, little crinkles of fun and relief beginning to show about her lips and the corners of her eyes. "I—I didn't dream you had it in you!"

That Bald Spot

Don't let that bald spot grow!
Go to your druggist at once and get a bottle of Parisian Sage and if that don't check the falling hair, and cause new hair to grow, nothing will!

Dandruff is the cause of baldness; dandruff germs cause dandruff. Parisian Sage kills the germs; eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and itching scalp. We will refund your money, if it fails to do this in two weeks.
Parisian Sage will cause the hair to grow, if the hair root be not dead. It causes the hair to grow thicker, more luxuriant, and puts new life into it.

The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package of Parisian Sage. It is sold for 50c by all druggists or sent postpaid by The Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., on receipt of price. Sold and guaranteed by E. W. Mair

He wiped his hands, and crossing over stood looking down at her:
"It was kind of a neat thing to do, wasn't it?" he agreed, with no hypocrisy of meekness, his eyes twinkling behind their egg-rimmed spectacles.

A W Hay Named as Special
Agent of Farm Board

(Wed. Jan. 22nd.)

Mr. A. W. Hay of Woodstock has resigned as a commissioner of the Farm Settlement Board and has been appointed as a special agent of the Dominion Immigration Department to act in conjunction with the Farm Settlement Board in the carrying out of the Ready Made Farms policy in New Brunswick.

Mr. Hay has already entered upon the duties of his new position and arrived from Woodstock Tuesday evening. He is at the Barker House today and has been in consultation today with Mr. A. B. Wilmot, the Dominion Immigration agent for New Brunswick with headquarters in this city. Both are to co-operate in carrying on the work of the Farm Settlement Board and Mr. Hay will inspect all properties purchased as well as be in charge of all improvements made in properties under the provisions of the act and with the approval of the Board.

The Farm Settlement Board have thus far invested upwards of $30,000 in the purchase of various properties in the province and about as fast as properties are located and purchased they are resold under the provisions of the act.
Last week a property at Canterbury Station, York County, was purchased and this evening Mr. Hay, accompanied by Mr. Wilmot, will go to Stanley to inspect several properties there preparatory to their being taken over by the Board.
Three properties at Glassville, Carleton county, were also purchased by Mr. Hay last week.

Bombs which liberate a deadly gas on bursting have been supplied to the French police for use against criminals who barricade themselves in buildings.

It is estimated that there is one automobile for every one hundred and ten persons in the United States.

it's generally a sign that his old friends are on to him.

A fine morning is a promise; a fine evening a benediction.

Air Pressure.

At the level of the sea the pressure of the atmosphere on the piston of an engine is about fifteen pounds to the square inch, but decreases at higher altitudes. As this atmospheric pressure must be overcome by the steam pressure before any work can be done, it is evident that at the diminished air pressure of high altitudes more work can be obtained from a given pressure of steam than at the sea level; or, in other words, an equally effective pressure of steam can be obtained with the expenditure of less fuel. The difference, however, is not great enough to be of any practical importance.

A Familiar Path.

"Well, Jorrocks, I understand you are to lead Mrs. Wintringham-Jones-Smythe to the altar," said Bubbleton.
"Not on your life," returned Jor-rocks. "She knows the way. I'm just going along."
