Nicholson Hayden

A fashionable wedding took place in the Methodist Church at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, June 11th., when Rev. Robert Fulton, of Chatham, a former pastor of the church solemnized the marriage of Miss Ida Hayden, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Hayden, and Mr. Donald Nicholson, the well known merchant tailor. The decorations of the church were lovely. A large arch had been raised completely covered with white lilacs and green leaves, from which was suspended a large bell of the same flowers, under which the bridal party stood. The ushers were Ernest Ross and Arthur Fisher, and Fenwick Nicholson, brother of the groom, was groomsman. The bride who was given away by her father was gowned in ivory duchess satin with rose point lace overdress, and her bridal veil was caught up with orange blossoms. She wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and cream roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Olga Hayden, who was gowned in pink satin with bugle trimmings. She wore a large white picture hat and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. Hayden wore a gown of reseda green satin with sequin trimmings and a lovely hat to match; Mrs. Nicholson was gowned in black silk with trimmings of jet, and black hat with plumes; Mrs. Donald Connell wore a princess dress of white satin trimmed with lace, with rose brocade jacket; Miss Sarah Nicholson was dressed in black crepe meteor cloth with French blue trimmings, with hat of black and white maline.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. The bride received many beautiful and costly presents, including a hand some gold bracelet from the groom. The honeymoon trip will be spent in Montreal, Quebec and Buffalo. On their return they will reside on Broadway.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

In his sermon in St. Paul's Church on Sunday morning, Rev. Frank Baird had reference to the work of the General Assembly from which he had returned on Saturday.

With regard to the great truths of religion he pointed out that the Assembly had spoken with no uncertain sound; the men who would reduce the Scriptures to the level of mere literature had received no sympathy or support. False teaching and the so-called new theology had been openly assailed. The evangelical note had sounded throughout; foremost in this connection being the Rev. John McNeil, the Scottish evangelist, now settled in Toronto.

The subject of missions, home and foreign, had been freely dealt with, a notable illustration of the value of home work being afforded by the reception of twenty young Ruthenian students into the ministry, all of whom were to work among their own people in the west. The opportunities for foreign work in China were shown to be greater than ever owing to the break-up of the old system there.

Great emphasis was also laid on the social and moral work of the church. It was shown that the Church must take a part in the securing of good laws, in the removing of existing evils, and in securing cleaner cities. A resolution calling for prohibition of the liquor traffic had been passed unanimously.

Church union had occupied a large place in the discussion and the motion to continue negotiations had carried by a vote of three to one. This however did not mean that union would be consummated. It was true the majority favored it, but a strong and resolute minority had resolved upon continuing the Presbyterian Church, believing that it would be in the interest of true religion to do so. The end of this controversy is not yet in sight, but it is now plain to all that the whole Church will never accept the union proposed.

During the year 15,000 new members had been added to the church, eighteen ministers had been received from other Churches, and the givings for missions had largely increased.

Premier Flemming occupied the pulpit of St. Paul's church at the evening service, and gave a synopsis of the work done by the great Congress. The Premier said it was a great gathering and a great opportunity. There were between 5500 and 6500 people present, not only from the larger centres, but from almost every parish. Some of the delegates travelled 3000 miles to be present at this great assembly, others travelled over 300 miles before reaching a railway in order to be present. The meetings were held in Massy hall and were attended by many men, giants in intellect, from all parts of the world. The resolution proposed by Dr. Grant on the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor was passed unanimously. The speaker said the Presbyterian body was the largest in Canada amounting to 1,115,000 members. He spoke of the insufficiency of the organization dealing with home Foreign Missions, also of the wonderful chance brought about in China in the last 12 years.

He said one of the best speeches of the Congress was made by Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Chicago, on the rural problem, how the government should cooperate with the Church to get people out of the congested cities, and place them in the rural districts, which had become in a measure depopulated because people are moving to the west. The city problem was also touched upon by Graham Taylor, who said that if the Church was a failure the city would be a failure, the one depended on the other. The church should not hold itself aloof from city affairs.

Mrs. Wm. Loane left on Monday for Palmer, Mass., to attend the graduation of her daughter, Miss Bessie Loane. She will be away about a week.

Miss K. Clarke, Boston, who has been visiting her father E. J. Clarke for two weeks, left for home on Monday.
