justified."

"I'm not going to church to day," Mrs. Manning quietly announced at the breakfast table on Sunday morning.

Then what a clamor followed. She never stayed away from church unless one of the family was ill. What could the matter be! She must be ill herself; they would stay at home with her. But to this she would not listen; she wanted to be alone to think and to plan.

After long argument she succeeded in persuading them to go without her. She told Kenneth, with a little touch of bitterness in her voice, which made him look wonderingly at her, that he must remember to keep his arm down at his side so that the darned place would not show. She looked disapprovingly at Janice's faded ribbons, and retied Philip's tie in a vain attempt to hide the frayed edges. Then she watched them go down the street, and with the variability of human nature a great desire came over her to go with them. When Janice turned at the corner and looked wistfully back the desire became irresistible. Why had she been so foolish as to stay at home? Had a rebellious spirit kept her from church, and had her husband and children read the rebellion in her heart?

Hurrying into her room, upbraiding herself for her weakness before the children, she hastily snatched her things from the closet, and with brisk, energetic fingers fastened hooks and pins and smoothed her hair.

The choir was singing the first hymn as she went up the aisle to her seat. A big bowl of lilies of the valley perfumed the air. How restful it was, and yet—she paused at the end of her seat, mystified, frightened. The seat was empty.

How she sat calmly through the services she could never understand. She could not have repeated one word of the sermon. She was vaguely conscious that the woman in the seat at her right was exerting herself to the uttermost to keep her small son quiet; that Mrs. James Ritchie Churchill was wearing a new silk dress; that people in general were looking inquiringly at the Manning pew, for it was an unusual thing for only one occupant to be there.

When the services were over she hurried out, not waiting to speak to any one. What could have kept her family from church? Should she find them at home?

When she came in sight of home and saw Doctor Glidden's roan horse standing in front of the house, she almost ran up the street. Pale and terrified she rushed in, to find the family with Doctor Glidden in their midst.

"Oh, what is the matter? Who is sick? Has any one been hurt?" she anxiously questioned, looking anxiously at each face. Then the doctor came forward and took her hand.

"Were all hale and hearty here, Mrs. Manning, but we've been just a little worried about you. You haven't been feeling as well as usual for the last day or two, have you?"

"Me?" she asked, wonderingly.

"But you did not feel able to go to church this morning, and you always go if we are all well," attested Mr. Manning.

"I did go to church, and was the only one of the family who did." And then Mrs. Manning sat down and laughed immoderately. It was such a blessed relief to know they were all well. Then she asked: "Did you really get the doctor for me?"

"Did you think we could go to church and leave you at home alone, and perhaps sick?" Janice reproached.

"I think I shall have to hunt up a patient elsewhere," the doctor laughed.

"I won't put this call down in my book. Good morning, all."

Then the family talked matters over, and Mrs. Manning finally convinced the others that she was not ill; but she did not divulge the real cause of her disturbance of mind until she and Janice were washing the breakfast dishes the following morning. Then she told Janice everything, her certainty of success and the disappointment.

"And do you think," she ended, "that if I fixed your white dress all over, I can buy two or three yards of muslin to match it, and make a new waist, and there are a good many pieces left from the dress now, and I could make the skirt over, and I have used the lace to trim it, and you could have new ribbon for your hair, do you think you could be satisfied with it?"

There was a moment of intent thought, and then the heartfelt answer: "I'd rather wear the old dress without any stitch put into it than to have my mother wearing that dreadful worried look in the place of her usual dear smile."

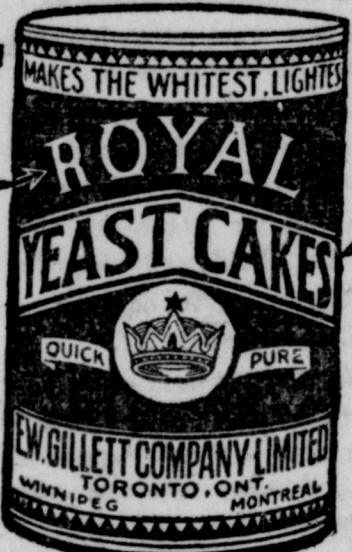

In the days that followed they studied and cut and sewed together. The sweetness of their intimacy atoned for their disappointment. As the sewing progressed Mr. Manning could see a difference in white dresses. Even the bright-eyed girl friends did not dream that Janice was wearing her old dress when they saw her ready for the graduating exercises, with fresh ribbons in her hair and a big bunch of lilies of the valley pinned on the dainty bertha.

When it was all over Janice confided to her mother: "The girls said my dress was the dearest one there, Mother, I believe we two are equal to any emergency."

When Mrs. Manning read the prize articles in the magazine she acknowledged that the editor had awarded the prizes wisely.

"I'd like to know what that woman did with her ten dollars," she pondered. "I don't envy her a bit, for I can't believe that her daughter would have worn her old dress at graduation with as good grace as mine did."

County Council.

The one at $4,000 had 200 acres, 100 under cultivation, well wooded, house and good barns. The house would be all right for the superintendent but a house for the inmates would have to be built. The other farm is about 200 acres, 70 cleared house and barn in fair condition. This land would be a pretty good proposition. $10,000 would put us in a good position to take care of 50 or 60 inmates. He believed it would be a good investment for the county. One of the great questions is: Are they getting the care they deserve?

Motion carried.

On motion of Coun Flemming. Resolved that a committee of three be appointed to confer with the sec-treas and to have the necessary arrangements made to secure the legislation for the establishment of a county farm, said committee to report at the January session. Carried.

Mr. Colpitts was heard before the board in the matter of an amount of money in his hands. He wished time until next January to square it up. I was about $200 against which there was two months' salary. The net amount due would be between $140 and $145.

Upon motion Mr. Colpitts was allowed the extension of time. He had been embarrassed by having to pay a note endorsed by him.

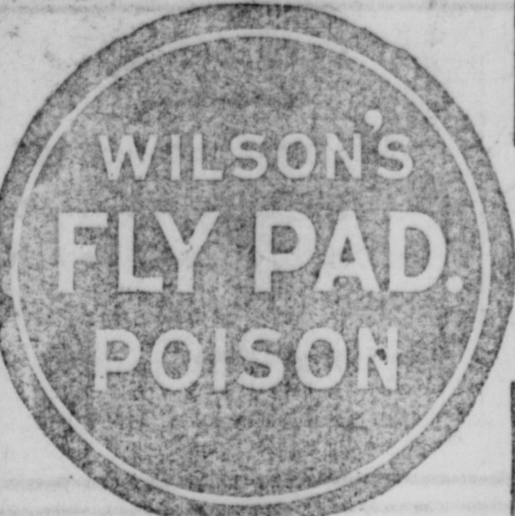

Coun Britton said that Mr. Colpitts was a good officer until he became too old. Would it not be well to square the account?

Coun Melville—It was through no fault of the council that Mr. Colpitts was stuck on a note. All he asks for is time.

The council acceded to the request. The sec-treas read the following letter:

Frederick, E. B., March 26th, 1914. J. C. Hartley, Esq.

Secretary-Treasurer, Carleton Co., Woodstock, N. B.

There are many imitations of this best of all fly killers.

Ask for Wilson's, be sure you get them, and avoid disappointment.

Dear Sir:—

As you know, a certain number of people from the Province of New Brunswick are sent to the School for the Blind at Halifax. The Province has in the past been paying $100.00 per year per pupil, the municipalities paying an equal amount, but due to the high cost of living, it has been found that the pupils could no longer be educated for that amount, and we are in receipt of an Act which the School for the Blind asks this Government to pass, increasing the amount per year, per pupil, to the Government, by $25.00, and consequently increasing the amount per pupil per year to the municipalities from $100.00 to $125.00.

The Government did not deem it proper to pass the said Act at this Session of the Legislature, as before doing so, we wanted to have the opinion of your municipality on the subject.

I would be very much obliged to you if that matter was considered by the municipal authorities of your municipality, and an answer given in time for the meeting of the Legislature next year.

Yours truly,

D. V. LANDRY,
Provincial Secretary Treasurer.

Coun Morgan—Is the amount for a blind pupil charged to the whole municipality or to the parish?

Sec-treas—I think it comes out of the school drafts to the Halifax School for the Blind; we have had two pupils paid for by the county.

Coun Estey moved that this council is of the opinion that they are willing that the legislation should be passed so far as it effects this municipality.

Carried

The warden appointed as the Poor Farm Committee Couns Britton, Flemming and Kearney.

The council went into committee with the warden in the chair on bills and accounts.

The following bills were ordered paid:—

Owen Kelly	$ 16 50
Wm. Armstrong	$ 52 10
Judson Devenport	3 10
Wm. Armstrong	16 15
Weldon Carvell	3 25
Jas. W. Woolverton	19 30
Jas. W. Woolverton	6 60
Press Printing Co (assessment books)	320 50
Press Printing Co	13 00
C. J. Jones	10 00
John A. Lindsay (coroner)	4 20
" "	21 30
Mrs. J. Loane	4 30
A. C. Burden (jailer)	13 32
Wm. Armstrong	63 15
J. R. Tompkins (jailer)	85 06
Sentinel Publishing Co.	2 59
Albion R. Foster	8 70

Coun Gallagher said there was some money in his hands. There was a circuit at Bristol today and I swore in some special constables. I took $15 from the manager as a license and that I have in my hands for the county.

The committee reported on the above bills.

Bill of Owen Kelly for $34.50 laid over for further explanation, was finally ordered paid less $2 disputed items, and $1 charged to parish of Woodstock.

Coun Bell (Richmond) moved that Scott Act Inspector McLean be heard before the board.

Mr. McLean thanked the councillors for the confidence they had placed in him; he found the job a thankless one and asked for consideration and sympathy. Through the county there seems to be the impression that there was a controversy between his predecessor and himself. There is no foundation for that as Mr. Colpitts is a good friend to him.

Coun Morgan—Do you find much evidence of liquor being sold in the county?

Inspector—I don't find the evidence I want; I have been only offered one drink since I was made inspector (Laughter.)

A councillor—You have the sympathy of the board.

Inspector—I think the conditions are improved at the boundary line, but rum is sold; it can't be fought from one side, and I am not supported from the other side. I could handle this side, but it could not be fought by one side unless the other side co-operated. The party has his buildings, house, etc. on the American side. On one side about ten feet from the line he has his shop where he sells booze. He used to have it come by way of Debec and Benton, but I have cut off that supply; he gets his supply from the American side; he can ship liquor through Maine for export to Canada. The liquor is at the same time stored on the American side; but the sale is on our side and only sold when customers come along, except at night when I cannot get a search warrant; then it is brought over in cases. No booze is sold in the parish of Richmond. They are getting mighty dry there. I do not get much support from Houlton. The man at the line seems to have many friends there.

Coun Melville—How do you find Homan?

Inspector—He is the most agreeable man I ever met in my life. I was royally received. He is a fine man; he is tame. Mr. McMullin made me a very fair proposition; he said if I would let him sell he would pay me $500 along just as I wanted them. I told him I could not entertain the propositions, he seemed very much disappointed, but I never was better used; I think he was apprised of my going there from the time I left Houlton.

Coun Melville—You didn't make a trade? You just let him sell on without a trade?

Inspector—There is no trade at all. As I understand the sales are on the American side, just the reverse to the case on the line at Richmond. I have had no complaints from the parish of Kent; I was in Bath and conferred with several men whom I had been recommended to see; they told me things were good in that section, I had complaints from Bristol; the greatest difficulty we have to meet is pocket peddling.

Coun Lamont moved that a grant of $50 be given to the Carleton County Rifle Association.

Coun Carvell seconded the motion which was lost on the following division:—

Ayes—Couns Tracy, Carvell, Anderson, W. J. Gallagher, Flemming, Lamont, Morgan, Britton, Melville, Burt. —10.

Nays—Couns Shaw, Perry, Hemphill, Alex Bell, Gibson, Colwell, Moxon, A. G. Bell Thompson, Estey, Hunter. —11.

Coun Lamont moved that the council adjourn till tomorrow at nine o'clock, and the motion was carried on the following division:—

Ayes—Couns Melville, Hunter, Morgan, Britton, Perry, Hemphill, Lamont, Bell [Richmond] Colwell, Moxon, Stevens, Burt. —12.

Nays—Couns Shaw, Flemming, Gibson, Anderson, A. G. Bell, Carvell, Gallagher Thompson, Estey, Tracy.

Council then adjourned till 9 a. m. Wednesday.

Wednesday morning, 9 o'clock.

Council resumed session.

Coun H. E. Gallagher took his seat, all the councillors being present but Coun Hemphill.

Coun Burt spoke of the typewriter that had been placed in the record office for the recording of documents, and moved that the county pay for the same.

Coun. Estey seconded the motion.

Coun. Morgau asked what was the opinion of the building committee about this?

Coun. Melville said he was much taken with the work done by the machine. The question was who was to pay for it, whether the county or the recorder? It was a question. The cost was $220. I would be willing to pay for it rather than go without it. Perhaps Mr. Leighton would pay part of the cost and the county the balance.

Coun. Burt said all agreed it was a good thing.

Coun. Bell (Richmond)—Did the building Committee recommend it?

Coun Burt read certain letters on the matter; he had said if the machine was put in the council would consider taking it.

Coun Estey—I consider it is a grand thing for the county, and a great aid to parties searching the records; he would not agree to the county only paying part, but pay all or none.

Coun. Lamont did not think the county should pay for the typewriter; it was not the county's place to do so.

Coun. Stevens said that they have three machines in all the principal counties; it is a great saving of the books, and we will save two books in three. At that gait it would not take long to pay for the typewriter, for the books cost $40 a piece. I think we should retain it, as it would be very inconvenient if another recorder wanted to go back to the old system.

Coun Britton I examined this typewriter and it is a good machine, but I question if it is up to us to pay for it. If it saves books say nearly one a year, or two books in three years, it would take sometime to pay for the typewriter. I will have to vote against the expenditure.

Coun Melville If Mr. Leighton furnishes this it would not be up to us to pay for it, but I believe we need a typewriter. In this case Mr. Leighton benefits as well as ourselves, but I think we had better buy the typewriter.

The motion carried.

Those voting nays being Couns. Lamont, Britton, W. J. Gallagher and Thompson.

Coun. Melville moved that the warden appoint a committee of three to advise with the Scott Act Inspector on matters relating to the enforcement of the act.

Boun Bell (Richmond) seconded the motion which was carried.

The warden appointed as such committee Couns Melville, Bell [Richmond] and Gallagher [Kent].

Coun. Carvell—What are the duties of the committee?

Waaden—To work with the inspector.

Coun. Carvell Have they any financial power?

Warden No they simply advise with the inspector.

Coun Carvell I think the committee should have an idea of their duties; if they should want any power as to money I should think they should have it.

Coun Gallagher (Kent) moved that power be given to the committee to advance the inspector $200 more than now authorized if necessary and advisable in the opinion of the committee.

Coun Gibson seconded the motion.

Coun. Perry The warden has selected this committee from the three hardest parishes; they are to advise the inspector; I don't see why more money should be placed in the committee's hands.

Boun. Melville It is only that if necessary this money should be available. Continued on page 6
