

The Hindus Left Early This Morning

Vancouver, July 23. Sacrily after five o'clock this morning the Japanese steamer Komagata Maru steamed out of the harbor on her way back to the Orient. The Hindus on board made no demonstration and the services of the local militia companies, who spent the night on the wharf, were not needed. The vessel was conveyed out of the harbor by the cruiser Rainbow which will accompany her to a point off Vancouver Island. Two months ago today the Komagata arrived in Vancouver harbor.

Among the demands formulated by the Hindus in their last minute requests were a liberal supply of beer for the homeward trip, five sheep and sufficient live fowl to give each man one a day on the trip across the Pacific.

Immigration Inspector Reid stated at a late hour last night that these demands would probably be complied with, and the provisions put aboard the Komagata Maru.

Another scare From Vancouver.

Ottawa July 23.—The authorities at Ottawa this morning had no sooner breathed a sigh of relief over the news of the departure of the Komagata Maru, when they got another scare from Vancouver.

A Vancouver message from the immigration authorities states that there are strong rumors that another ship loaded with Hindus is off Cape Flattery. Attempts are being made by wireless to verify the rumor. There have been rumors for some time that a ship loaded with Hindus sailed from Calcutta for Vancouver some time ago, but Ottawa has never been able to get confirmation of the story, and regards the reported vessel as a phantom ship, which the imagination of the officials in Vancouver has conjured up on in their present highly nervous state of mind.

HYOMEI

The Breatheable Remedy for Catarrh

The rational way to combat Catarrh is the Hyomei way, viz: by breathing. Scientists for years have been agreed on this point but failed to get an antiseptic strong enough to kill catarrh germs and not destroy the tissues of the membrane at the same time, until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-oh-me).

Hyomei is the most powerful yet healing antiseptic known. Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs $1.00 and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents. Obtainable from your druggist or postpaid from The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Hyomei is guaranteed to cure asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grip or refund your money back. Sold and guaranteed by E. W. Mair.

HELEN'S TRIAL

'Hello. Is this Miss Carlson?' 'Yes.'

This is Orrville Harris. I wonder, Miss Carlson, if you could spare a few minutes this afternoon. We have some parties coming in to look at our pianos. Pierce is out of town and there is no one here to demonstrate them. Could you come down for an hour, say, at two. I'll make it worth your while.

'Why, yes, certainly I'll come.' 'All right, at two, this afternoon. Thank you. Good-by.' 'Good-by.'

Helen Carlson hung up the receiver with a joyful thud. If she could only earn a few dollars now and then it would help so much. She needed, oh! so many little things. Perhaps if she did well her services would be required again.

Properly at two Helen stepped into the piano house. Harris met her smilingly, and led her to one side.

'Now, Miss Carlson,' he began these persons I told you of are wealthy and will probably buy a high-priced instrument. However they are entirely incapable of judging the quality, and—well, you understand what I mean. You will receive five per cent of our profit on the sale.'

Helen understood and her eyes flashed indignantly, but before she could reply the door opened and a lady and gentleman elegantly dressed, came in.

'Harris stepped forward to meet them, smiling blandly he presented Helen.

'Now, Mr. Evans, here is one of the latest S—models. The tone is superb, Miss Carlson, will you please try it for us.'

Helen drew off her gloves, seated herself, and ran her fingers nimbly over the keys. The tone was beautiful, but Helen recognized that it was shallow, and would become 'tinny' with use. The case was handsome and showy and the Evans's were evidently pleased.

Several others were tried and rejected, until finally the choice lay between the first and a K—of much the same style, but plainer and more durable. Harris made the same price on both. The K—was really a magnificent instrument with a pure singing tone which would improve with age, but to the inexperienced person the two sounded much alike.

Helen was sorely tempted; she knew that Harris's profit on the S—would far exceed that on the K—. Her commission would consequently be greater. How she needed that money! She could see her father wearing his rusty old suit which had done service three seasons; her mother in her last year's hat and shabby cloak, skimping and saving every cent they could make on the old farm that she might take a year in the conservatory. Twenty-five or thirty dollars would mean much to her.

Harris was slightly and deftly urging the purchase of the S—Mrs. Evans was admiring the case. A word from Helen would decide the matter. It she recommended the S—it would mean occasional employment from Harris with more commissions. Mr. and Mrs. Evans knew so little about it, they would probably never know they had been duped. They were asking her opinion now. Harris's eyes were upon her. She hesitated. Should she? No. She could not face her Sunday-school class with the brand of Sapphira upon her. Clearly and slowly she spoke:

'Mr. Evans, you will find that the K—will give much better service than the S—Its tone is much superior and it will improve with use, I cannot recommend the S—. Were I purchasing, this would be my choice.'

Mr. Evans thanked her wrote a cheque for the amount and ordering the K—to be delivered next day, he and his wife entered their carriage and drove away.

Helen slowly drew on her gloves Harris came toward her with an amused smile on his handsome face. He handed her a ten dollar bill, saying mockingly 'I must congratulate you, Miss Carlson, upon the possession of so very rare a virtue in these days as complete honesty. I wouldn't be afraid to trust you with all of the wealth I possess. However you will find that the old maxim, 'Honesty is the best policy,' doesn't always hold out, as now, for instance. Your commission would have been three times as large had you even kept silent.'

Helen made no reply, but thanking him tucked the bill in her purse and quietly walked out.

She felt she had done just what she ought, but Harris's mocking words taunted her, and she came near wishing she had at least, as he said, kept silent. Ten dollars seemed so pitifully small compared with thirty. How much she needed a new suit and hat! She felt almost shabby beside the other girls and, economize as she would, her wardrobe was almost lacking in little necessities. Harris would never employ her again of course. He had always been kind to her.

These thoughts were running through her mind one chilly evening a week afterward as she returned to her boarding-house from the conservatory. Several letters awaited her and she hurriedly tore them open. There were two or three letters from home friends, and then she wonderingly opened a square business envelop. A cheque for twenty-five dollars was pinned to a sheet of paper enclosed, which read:

'My dear Miss Carlson: "A friend of ours, well competent to judge informs us that the piano we purchased is far superior to the other we were considering. But for your candid opinion we would probably have taken the latter and thus been the loser by a few hundred dollars.

'Please except this small amount as partly expressing our appreciation of your advice.

"Truly yours, JAMES EVANS."

There was also a dainty, scented note in a delicate hand

'Dear Miss Carlson,

'I am in search of a teacher of music for my little daughter. I admired your playing very much, and if you wish to accept pupils I would gladly place her under your instruction.

'Please let me know soon,

Free from Dust, Clean and Delicious always.

TRY A PACKET You Will Not— - TO-DAY - Be Disappointed

Very sincerely, 'MARGARET L. EVANS.' Tears of joy filled Helen's eyes and she bowed her head to thank God for her good fortune.—'The Watchward.'

Electrical Storm at Scotch Lake.

Fredericton, July 22. During a heavy electrical storm of last evening large barns owned by Edwards Bros., of Scotch Lake, were struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The loss is estimated at about $700, the barns containing several valuable pieces of farm machinery and two or three wagons.

The storm which passed over this city was one of the heaviest of the season. Over an inch of rain fell in three hours.

Tuesday evening the Hindus, through their shore committee, agreed to accept the terms of the Government, and will allow peaceable possessions of the Komogata Maru.

It is semi-officially stated in parliamentary circles that there will be no session this fall, and that the House will not meet till January.

Both political leaders, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Borden will tour the country from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast, Sir Wilfrid will spend six weeks in company with Hon. George P. Graham and other of the Liberal leaders, Sir Robert Borden, with Hon. W. T. White and Hon. L. P. Pelletier, will leave the capital for Winnipeg on Sept. 8 on a six weeks speaking tour of the West.

All the pulpwood of the Union Bag & Paper Company, situated at Magdalen Cape, about four miles east of Three Rivers, Quebec, has been burning since Monday afternoon. The estimated loss up to the present totals over $200,000.

"Don'ts for Swimmers"

Don't go into water deeper than your hips if you cannot swim.

Don't bathe within two hours after having eaten a heavy meal.

Don't dive into water which you don't know the depth of.

Don't dive from a boat or canoe in a high wind; you may not be able to overtake it.

Don't take a prolonged swim when fatigued.

Don't bathe alone if subject to giddiness or faintness, or in secluded or unfrequented places.

Don't get into a panic if you get a cramp in either of the limbs. Swim to shore with the unaffected ones. Cramp is more painful than dangerous.

Don't swim at all if you are amongst water lilies, turn on your back and paddle gently with your hands, swim down stream if you get into weeds.

Don't clutch the person who comes to help you if you are in difficulties, keep cool and do what he tells you.

If you have not learned to swim, acquire the knowledge at once; it is the most healthful, pleasant and useful of all physical exercises.

Approach a drowning person from behind whenever possible so as to avoid being clutched.

Don't waste time removing clothing unless the drowning person be a long way out. Remove boots and heavy clothing first.

When a body has sunk look for bubbles. In still water the body will be immediately below where they rise in running water the bubbles will be higher up stream.

When conveying a drowning person to shore avoid wasting strength by swimming against the current, rather float with the current, gradually working towards the shore.

Persons have been revived after twenty minutes immersion. It may and probably would mean several hours of sustained effort, but to save a life who would not continue while hope remained?
