Captain Clarence Earl Williams

The death for his country of Captain Clarence Earl Williams brings home afresh the terrible reality of the war, and the ever present casualty lists containing weekly one or more names of boys from our own county, are constant reminders of its grim terrors.

The bereavement which Captain Williams' death means to his family can only be understood by those who have suffered in like manner. Mingled with sadness must be an element of tragic joy that our heroic young men are found ready not only to endure the rigors of war but willing to lay down their lives for the great cause.

"No finer fellow went overseas said Rev. H. E. Thomas, formerly chaplain of the 55th, now pastor of the Sackville Methodist church. "He was popular with officers and men, and was eager from the first to go to the front.

Captain Clarence Earl Williams is the son of ex County Councillor J. F. Williams and Mrs. Williams. He was born at Lakeville, Carleton county, on September 10, 1891, and consequently was 25 years of age. Captain Williams was a well qualified officer; he had trained at Fredericton Military School and the Military College at Kingston, Ont.; he was one of the officers sent to Jamaica to bring the German prisoners to Halifax. He joined the 55th Batt., and became captain of "A" Company, and was a very popular officer. After being at Shorncliffe and Bramshott camps, England, as instructor for several months, anxious to go to the front, he got attached to the "Fighting 26th" and was only a few weeks on the firing line when he met his death.

Lieut Rankin Slightly Wounded

Friends of Lt. F. S. Rankin, Royal Canadian Engineers, mentioned in last week's casualty list as among the wounded, will be glad to hear that his wound is not serious. This information has been received by letter from Lt. Rankin himself, to his father, Dr. W. D. Rankin, with characteristically brief account of the close shave he had and fortunate escape. It was in a fight with a Hun airman over the German lines. For some time Lt. Rankin has been qualifying for the air service, provisionally attached to Royal Flying Squadron No. 36. On this day he went out in an observation plane and was attacked by a fast German Fokker, which on account of being able to manoeuvre quickly got their range with his machine gun, before heavier British plane could turn. The pilot was shot through the leg and fainted. Lt. Rankin not knowing why his pilot did not back and turn, tried to swing the machine gun around and found its workings had jammed so it could not be moved. It was then he received a bullet across his head, fortunately nothing but an ugly graze. Seeing now the predicament of his pilot, Lt. Rankin seized the steering gear to steady the machine and held it until the pilot came to, when they dove into a thick cloud, losing the Fokker and descending safely into the British lines.

Lt. Rankin's record has been a very fine one. Thoroughly efficient, always cool and never excited he has been an invaluable officer. He has never taken but the usual short leave of absence, but stuck right to his duty. Offered a senior captaincy in a new Battalion in another army of the service, which would have given him a well deserved long rest at home, he declined, preferring to stick to the trenches. In order to finally qualify for the Flying Service he will have to go to England but has proved so efficient in practical work at the front, they don't want him to leave. He is a graduate of the long course at Kingston, a young man and most faithful and efficient officer, whose reward will come to him in time. We are glad his wound is not more serious.
