ROD and GUN

September Rod and Gun is out and shows the usual list of good things for sportsmen readers and lovers of the out of doors. This issue is a good one to put in the late summer vacationist's knap-sack. Such stories as "The Hide Builders," Bonnycastle Dale; "Two Weeks without a Care," T. N. Hewitt; "Duck Hunting on the Small Sloughs," George Belton; "A Cruise in the Sloop Ketharine," Austen Saunders; "The Time, The Place, the Game," Archie McKishnie; and "Fishing in Little Streams," Reginald Gourlay, make the vacationist glad he went and the stay-at-home man sorry he can't go and may be determined to get away into the north woods when the hunting season comes on. Among the special departments, that devoted to dog men's interests, The Kennel, contains this month a full report of the recent Regina Dog Show. Rod and Gun is published by W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.
