Prof. W. C. Kierstead. Makes Appeal to Farmers

To the Farmers of New Brunswick:—

Lord Rhonda wrote the other day: "The food wanted by mankind does not exist. The word 'shortage' is not strong enough for the situation. To put the matter bluntly, the whole world is up against a nasty thing, familiar to the people of India called 'famine.'"

Herbert Hoover has said: "It is my belief that food will win this war; starvation or sufficiency will in the end determine the victor." And who will be the victor?

"I fear," declared Lloyd George, "the disciplined people behind the German army, the rationed family and the determination of wife, and sister, and daughter, and mother to stand and starve so that their fighting men may be fed—I fear it more than the Imperial army itself."

The importance of food in the war to day is fundamental. It is a species of ammunition, a fuel for fighters, absolutely essential alike for the efficiency and energy of the soldiers and the endurance of the civilian population. The food industry is a war industry. Its workers have the importance of ship builders and munition producers. Will our farmers and the women of our homes give to our brave soldiers in their noble cause that loyal support that Lloyd George tells us the German people are extending to their Imperial army in its brutal attempt to conquer the world?

The Allied nations have exactly the same right to our food supplies that we have to the protection accorded us by their men and means on the western front. At last there is complete unity in Allied strategy, resources are being used wherever they are most needed, and our food supplies must be placed on a reserve into the service of our common cause if we are to avoid defeat.

The Allies may be starved into submission. Always food importing, their home production has decreased greatly during the war. The wheat and rye crop of France is less than one-half her pre-war yield, that of Belgium, Italy, and neutral Europe is far below normal, and yet bread is almost the entire food of their poorer classes. The sugar crop of France has fallen to one-third its normal amount. In Italy it is a partial failure, and the Allied nations are excluded from the sugar supplies of Germany and central Europe. In meats and fats we have almost a famine. Their herds have been slaughtered until reduction cannot go much further if the children are to have the indispensable supply of milk. Their big shortage is over 33,000,000, and yet fats are peculiarly the foods of fighters, containing, as they do, in the same amount twice the energy of starches or sugar.

These nations and even the neutral nations of Europe are upon strict rations. Great Britain has reduced the individual consumption of sugar per annum from 92 to 23 pounds, and France to 13 pounds; even the rations of the soldiers have been reduced. Mr. Hoover declares that they "have made the most drastic reduction of consumption. There is actual privation among their women and children; there is starvation in Belgium."

The shortage in ships is even more serious than the scarcity of food. The Germans seek to sink the world's ships to an extent that will cut off supplies from the Allies and starve them into submission. "All we have to do," said Hindenburg, "is to hold firm and the submarine will win the war." A year of submarine warfare has destroyed over 1,000 ships or more than 6,500,000 tons, and nearly three times the amount built within that time. And yet the need of ships for the transportation of supplies and men is greater than at any other time in the war, while the tonnage is probably not more than three-quarters the pre-war amount, and its destruction is still proceeding faster than its construction. More ships, more food, more men; these are our imperative needs.
