When we have them here, we appeal to other localities to come to us; if for no other reason, we should now be anxious to do as we would be done by. But outside of these considerations, we think it is for our advantage sometimes, to go from home with such shows. It gives us an opportunity to let others see what we are doing, elsewhere; we trust our manufacturers, as can to keep up our good reputation.

The Sturgeon.

The Sturgeon which has in this Province been long despised and neglected, has suddenly sprung into notoriety. Fishermen looked upon it as an ugly monster of the river bottom and the deep, which it was misfortune to catch in their nets, and whose "flesh" was unfit for human food.
