CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Dennis soon fell into the routine o work and grew stronger rapidly. But his face had acquired a gravity, a something in expression that only experience gives, which made him appear older by ten years. All trace of the boy had gone, and his face was now that of the man, and of

Though at times his eyes would flash in view of her treatment, they would soon grow gentle and tender, and he found himself excusing and extenuating by the most special pleadings that which he had justly condemned. One evening his mother startled him out of a long revery in which he had almost vindicated Christine, by saying: 'A very pleasant smule has been gradually dawning on your face, my son.'

'Mother,' replied he, hesitatingly, 'perhaps I have judged Miss Ludolph harshly.' 'Your love, not your reason, has evidently been pleading for her.'

'Well, mother, I suppose you are right.'
'So I suppose the Divine love pleads for the weak and sinful,' said Mrs. Fleet

'That is a very pleasant thought, mother, for sometimes it seems that my love could make black white.' 'That the Divine love has done, but at infinite cost to itself.' 'Oh! that my love at any cost to itself could lead her into the new life of the side Dennis had not seen her at first; but

'Your love is like the Divine in being unselfish, but remember the vital differences, and take heed. God can change the nature of the imperfect creature that He loves, you cannot. His love is infinite in its strength and natione. You are He loves, you cannot. His love is infinite in its strength and patience. You are human. The proud, selfish, unbelieving Miss Ludolph (pardon mother's plain words) could not make you happy. To the degree that you were loyal to God, you would be unhappy, and I should surely dread such a union The whole to be greatly lowered to permit even to be greatly lowered to permit even.

Christine for the continuance of his surprise, and at once recovering himself, he set the picture against the wall.

This made the allusion still more strange and terrible to Christine. There was the dead before her doing just as she had been imagining. Just what he had done at her bidding months before.

Dennis was greatly puzzled by her look of alarm and distress. Then he thought to be greatly lowered to permit even of alarm and distress. Then he thought

'But mother,' said Dennis almost impatiently, 'in view of my uncanquerorable love, it is nearly the same as if I was mar-level to advanced toward her to assure her of the contrary.

Unless she changes, unless you change (and that God forbid), this could not be Vou would be divided. should not form such a union. Indeed, unless you change (and that God forbid), this could not be. You would be divided, separated in the deepest essentials of your life here, and in every respect hereafter. Again, while God loves every sinful man and woman, He does not take them to His heart till they cry out to Him for strength to abandon the destroying for strength to abandon the destroying where she in their indignation he advanced a few paces almost fiercely. She trembled violently and shrank farther away.

on the said Dennis, breathing heavily. Truth in the end is ever more merciful than falsehood, she answered gently. After a little, he said with a heavy sigh, 'Mother, you are right, and I am very weak and foolish.'

She looked at him with unutterable tenderness; she could not crush out all hope, and so whispered, as before, 'Prayer you to love. It is your duty, as well as privilege, to pray for her. Trust your Heavenly Father, to do His will, and he will solve this question in the very best way.'

Dennis turned to his mother in sudden and passionate earnestness, and said:

you never cared even to ask whether I lived or died in my long, weary illness that you could not ask whether I lived or died in my long, weary illness that you could not articulate one sentence of inquiry? Surely this is the very sublimity of heartlessness; this is to be callous beyond one's power of inquiry? Surely this is to be callous beyond one's power of inagination. It seems to me that I feel that much interest in any human is mighty, my child. It is not wrong for you to love. It is your duty, as well as privilege, to pray for her. Trust your Heavenly Father, to do His will, and he will solve this question in the very best way.'

Dennis turned to his mother in sudden and passionate earnestness, and said:

'And in your own also; the great Father loves you too, my son. If He choses that the dross in her character should be burned away, and your two lives fused, there are in His providence just the fiery trials, just the circumstances that will

to be acted on. 'Christine Ludolph is anything but weak and frivolous,' said he. 'Her character is strong, and I think most decided in its present bent. My physician stopped the bleeding and then ordered Cod Liver Oil and Lime; and I used various preparations, but they did no good. I lost all hope of life, and was an object of pity to all my friends. Last September I purchased a bottle of your EMULSION and before it was all taken I was better. I then bough; a dozen bottles and have taken all with the following result: Cough subsiding, night sweats stopped, appetite re urned, pains in spine disappeared, strength returning, and my weight increased from 118 to 140 pounds in sixteen weeks. I have taken no other medicine since commencing with your EMULSION and shall continu its use until I am perfectly well. I frequently meet some friend on the street who asks, what cured you, and I answer Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, &c. I have a friend who has not spoke aloud for 15 months and he is getting better. I gave him a bottle, and he bought two more then got a dozen and says it is food and medicine for him. He was given up to die a year ago: but he is improving now wonderfully. My recovery is exciting the surprise of many people, and I shall do all I can to make known your valuable medicine. Very truly yours, H. F. SLOCUM, Lowell, Ma LYNN, Randolph Co., Ind., July 2d, 1878. About the 15th of last April I got a bottle of your Emulsion and at that time I was so prostrated that no one who saw me thought I could live but a few days at most. I could retain nothing ou my stomach and was literally starving. I commenced the use of the EMULSION in small doses; it was the first thing that would stay on my stomach; I continued its use, gradually increasing the dose; and from that hour I commenced mending, and now am able to ride and waik and am gaining flesh and strength rapidly. I have advised other parties to try it, and some two or three have already tried it. I am sure I shall entirely recover.
