FREDERICTON, N. B., December 1, 1881.

The Convention.

The success of the Liberal Conservative Convention, which took place on Tuesday and Wednesday, 22nd and 23rd ult., could hardly be better proved than by the weak attempts of the Toronto Globe to ridicule it, by calling the most influential members of the party in number nearly 1,400, and presenting all the constituencies of Ontario, and all the nationalities and occupations of the Dominion, as "a band of Tory conspirators."

Deceased Wife's Sister's Bill.

During the next session of both the Imperial and the Dominion Parliaments, the movers and promoters of the bill to legalize marriage with a deceased wife's sister, will make strenuous efforts to have it passed. It is a remarkable fact that such marriages are legal in every Christian State in the world, and in all the British Colonies except in Canada and the Cape, and in Great Britain itself.

The Banquet.

In no conventional phrase, but with warm words welling from the heart, might Sir John, when the thunders of applause that greeted his rising to the toast of the evening—the Guest—had subsided, have simply said, "this is the proudest hour of my life." Indeed the spirit of these words ran through his speech, and inspired its happiest hits.

The Danger Ahead.

We last week argued that an appeal to the Imperial Privy Council, was the safety valve of our constitution, and that were we independent, that safety valve would be shut down, as in cases which are continually occurring, where the powers rights and claims of the Dominion, and the Local Governments come in dispute, there would arise a danger of conflict between them, and that event, there would be no authority that would be accepted, as absolutely final, and whose decisions would be received as given without bias or prejudice.

proceeds of the sale of certain portions of the land, would pay the interest, and the capital eventually, of every dollar of the debt incurred by the railway. He upheld the Senate, as at present constituted; showed that the scheme of Imperial Federation was utterly impracticable; tore the veil from the face of the thing called "Independence," and showed the disastrous looking in it, and closed with a heart-felt acknowledgement of the grand and magnificent oration accorded him, and sat down amidst the overflowing enthusiasm of the brilliant assemblage.

Sir Leonard Tilley.

Sir Leonard Tilley appeared at the banquet as the devoted adherent of the chief, "the lucky captain," whom he delights to follow. But he carried off a due share of the honors of the demonstration. He felt that that demonstration was some compensation for the ceaseless envious censure and criticism he has been subjected to. He rose not so much to defend the policy, which he did so much to inaugurate, as to show forth the manifold benefits to the financial agricultural, manufacturing, interests which had flowed from it. Not arrogating to the government, the claim of having by their policy entirely produced the present prosperity, he held that it was undeniable that that policy had restored credit, increased capital, established new industries, given employment to the people, extended commerce and given hope for the future.

Ultra Vires, Again.

Cases are continually arising of conflict between the powers of the Dominion and Provincial Legislatures. Our constitution is ever on its trial. Last week, we gave a short account of the Andrew Mercer case. This week, we think it well to notice a case in which Dominion and Provincial legislation—on liquor—is brought into conflict. This is the most interminable of questions, and never will, we imagine, entirely settled, until the right to legislate on liquor—from prohibition to minutest license regulation—is vested beyond question in the Dominion Parliament.

to the Imperial Privy Council are to be deprecated, it will be admitted that it is essential that there should be in the Dominion a strong central authority. The difficulty is to maintain that without trenching on the freedom and autonomy of the individual Provinces. Toronto Globe which is an opponent of Independence, and a supporter of our Federal form of government, professes to be serious danger of conflict between the Dominion and Local governments, from the tendency of the present administration to pursue a policy of centralization. It points to their putting aside the decision of the arbitrators in the Manitoba Boundary case, and their disallowing "the Ontario River and streams Bill," to their threatening to cancel the charter for a Provincial railway, granted by the Legislature of Manitoba, as proofs that it is not speaking without warrant. All allowance must be made for the eternal suspicion that haunts the Globe's mind, when any act of Sir John is in question. Still it can hardly be doubted, that there is danger of conflict arising. The Globe's opinion and counsel in the matter is as follows:—

"In the interests of peace, good-will, and progress in the Dominion it is eminently desirable to avoid any such conflict. It can be avoided only—may we not predict it can be avoided only—by some authoritative and harmonious agreement at the outset. Let the matter be taken in hand at once by the proper leaders, and decisively settled. All that is needed is the addition of some explanatory clauses to the Act of Confederation. But what is the difficulty? It is the first importance to the harmonious working of our Constitution and to our future well-being that the rights of the Provinces be simply granted, and not further enlarged. Not another session of Parliament should be suffered to pass without steps being taken in the direction of a final and final settlement of the question at issue."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. Van Horne, superintendent of the Canada Pacific railway, receives a salary of $30,000.

Guinean detests assassins, and wants the men who shot at him to be treated as they deserve.

Mr. R. C. Borall, C. E., and Messrs. Sears are now surveying a route for the proposed Harvey Beach R. R.

One ship and five officers are still in existence, relics of the Trafalgar Bay fight, which immortalized Horatio Nelson.

The widow of President Lincoln is in great need. It is proposed to increase her pension from $3,000 to $5,000 per annum.

The leading industries of Dorchester are dress making, law and oakum picking. This order of precedence is imperative.

A Montreal druggist is suing Vennor for $10,000 damages for breach of contract in not inserting an advertisement in his almanac.

What is the earliest financial transaction on record? When Pharaoh received a check on the bank of the Red Sea, crossed by Moses & Co.

"Papa, how do editors get in free at all the shows?" "Well, sonny, as a general rule they give $25 worth of advertising for a 25-cent ticket."

Recent advices from the London solicitor of the Dominion Prohibitory Alliance intimate that the C. T. A. case will not be argued until February.

The following typographical error shows the vast importance of a comma. At a banquet this toast was given:—"Women—without our men, is a brute."

Sir Charles Tupper was presented with an address by the inhabitants of Moncton on Friday night, in Riddick's Hall, and spoke to a large audience in reply.

The electors of Lambton, Ont., will shortly be asked to vote on the Scott Act. In the meantime it is being vigorously discussed by Prof. Foster and E. King Dodds.

Charles Dudley Warner, says that although many people are unable to pay for a newspaper, he never yet heard of anybody who thought himself unable to edit one.

The salary of Sir Garnet Wolseley, who is to succeed Sir Charles H. Ellice as Adjutant-General of the Imperial army in April next, will be about $13,000 a year.

Some of our local politicians will be debating at the statement made in a suburban society at Halifax the other night, that there is no party system in the N. B. Legislature.

At a meeting of the Grand Lodge of English Freemasons on the 7th Dec. the Prince of Wales will move a vote of condolence with the family of the late brother James A. Garfield.

President Arthur has boldly defined his position regarding the spoils system. He refuses to remove any man (unless unfitful) to his duties before the term of office expires.

The total value of goods exported from the Dominion during the month of October was $13,028,212, of which $13,163,831 was the produce of Canadian and $464,651 the produce of other countries.

At Philadelphia, the other day horses attached to a steam fire engine ran away and rushed to the side of a street car, killing two young men on the back of the platform. Several others were slightly hurt.

The Telegraph says that a young lady, formerly a resident of Fredericton, and well known in St. John, is one of the leading chorus singers in Patience, now enjoying its reputation at the Boston Museum.

During the progress of the great procession through London on Lord Mayor's day, the band of the Princess Louise Rifles in passing along the streets were greeted with cries of "Lorne" and "Lorne's coming home."

With the exception of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, and such battalions as obtained special sanction from headquarters, the whole of the infantry will in future, though armed with long rifles, use the short rifle drill.

Pensacola, in Florida, charges variety shows a license fee of $30 and free tickets for every city official. They are determined to discourage the high-kicking business even if every alderman is obliged to take a whole front seat.

Ten years ago there were 16 schools in Manitoba, now there are 107. Winnipeg contains now more pupils than the whole province did in 1871. The average salary paid to teachers in rural districts is from $400 to $500, and in towns, $1,000.

Mr. F. C. Brewster, Attorney-at-law, Philadelphia, Penn., was married at Halifax, N. S., on 21st inst., to Miss Sophia Grace Almon, a daughter of Hon. Senator Almon. Among the guests present were Sir Charles Tupper and Lady, Chief Justice McDonald, and others.

Hon. J. A. Chaplain has received a letter from the secretary of the Paris committee for the relief of the sufferers by the Quebec fire, announcing that the French Government has authorized a lottery of one million francs for their benefit, the drawing to take place April 1, 1882.

Prince Bismarck, who boasts of being the most popular man in Germany, is sorely chagrined at the fact that his second son, Count Wilhelm Bismarck, who has offered himself as a candidate at Mulhausen, principally on the ground of being his father's son, was rejected by an overwhelming majority.

Sir John Macdonald is exceedingly apt in original quotations to illustrate a point. In his speech at the recent convention at Toronto, he described his opponents when in power:—"As bees on flowers, lighting, cease their hum, So settling into office, Grits grow dumb."

David Brady, one of the firing party who performed the last ceremony over the grave of Napoleon Bonaparte, died in Toronto on Wednesday last. On Friday morning mass was said for his soul in St. Paul's Church. Brady was one of the guard who watched over the Little Corporal during his weary sojourn on the island of St. Helena.

The last issue of the Canada Gazette contains the following:—"Charles Alexander Duff Miller is promoted to be second Lieutenant, provisionally, in No. 8 Troop, Sheldrake's (sic) mounted in No. 7 Troop. First-class certificates are granted to Captain Edward Sturdee, 92nd Battalion; 2nd Lieutenant John Thomas Twining Hart, N. B. Engineers."

A correspondent in Zululand reports an interview with the warriors who killed the Prince Imperial. When they were asked why they did not remove the gold chain and medallion around his neck after death they replied:—"Because he was brave. He fought like a young lion." A cross marks the spot where he fell, trees and shrubs are planted around, and, strange to say, the place is kept in good order by the same Zulus who slew the hapless Prince.

During the proceedings on Friday Guiteau broke in and shouted, so as to be distinctly heard in every part of the court room, "There is another matter that I want to speak about right now. I understand my divorced wife is to be brought here as a witness against me. If that's so there will be trouble. She was a poor, unfortunate thing, and I never should have married her. But if she comes in here to testify against me and do me any harm, I'll rip up her whole record."

Wallace Ross, the oarsman, was married one night last week, at St. John, by Elder Geo. Garraway, to Miss Flagler, daughter of Mr. Valentine Flagler.

The Post says that, Hon. P. A. Landry's speech on the Bourgeois-McManus case is considered the most effective and powerful appeal made in the Westmorland Court House for some years.

It was in a breach of promise case. Said the defendant, "I merely asked her if she would marry me, and she said yes; but I didn't make any promise to her." "You don't seem to be a very promising young man that's fact," said his Honor, "but as you rated this young woman's expectations, shall expect you to raise $10,000 also. Call the next case."

"I am a thief, a perjurer, a forger, and a liar," is the comprehensive and graphic confession of Cashier Baldwin of Newark, and I am ready to go behind the bars of a prison and end my days there." This is a melancholy ending of a career of high character hitherto. Baldwin is a man of 45, a prominent Episcopalian, and of no vices: he has a wife and two children, one a son of 18.

Burnard, the editor of Punch, has a pleasant handsome face. Though grey and bearded, he is comparatively young. He has fourteen children. He succeeded to the Roman Catholic Church while at Cambridge, and after reading a course of theology, was "ordained" and took "Minor Orders" with a view to the priesthood. Finding he had "no vocation" for that life, he took to humorous writing for a profession.

A certain justice of the peace was called upon to try a culprit who was charged with purloining his own clothes from the open house of another. "Did you try him for burglary?" asked a lawyer. "No," said he, "the house was open." "Did you try him for larceny?" "No, they were his own clothes." "Well, what did you do with him?" "Why," said the justice, "I looked all through the drawers, and found nothing to fit his case, so I fined him $10 and costs."

The ex-Empress Eugenie is adding eight more rooms to her new residence at Farnborough. There is to be a room filled with the robes of Prince Louis, and fitted up exactly the same as the one occupied by him at Camden Place. The idea seems to have been taken from the dressing-room of the Prince Consort at Balmoral, which remains the same as when he was alive. His hat and gloves are on the table, an effigy of him is also on the table.

The marriage of Rev. Llewellyn Jones, D. D., Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, to Miss Elizabeth Alice, second daughter of Lieut.-Governor Archibald, took place on the 22nd inst., at Halifax. The ceremony was performed by the Bishop of Nova Scotia, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Hill, of St. Paul's. The bride's dress was an ivory white satin train over a Spanish lace petticoat; orange blossoms at the neck and sleeves; a wreath of orange blossoms and myrtle, and tulle-veil, completely covering the dress; pearl neck lace, brooch and earrings, the gifts of the bridegroom's sister.

An Antigonish correspondent, writing recently to the Halifax Herald, says: Mr. C. C. Gregory, four or five years ago, purchased the farm well known in this country as the "Doctor's Farm," and entered upon the improvement of the land as well as the raising of superior stock with much enthusiasm, to which object he has already contributed not less than $25,000, and has become a benefactor to our people generally. His excellent herd of thoroughbred Durhams, and his fine flock of sheep, must soon give a good account of the land which he has so judiciously improved. Mr. Gregory's finances must soon change into handsome surpluses. We are glad to acknowledge Mr. Gregory as a Fredericton boy.

The editor of an Italian newspaper, having given offence to one of his fellow citizens and political antagonists, lately received a letter from him couched in these terms:—"Sir, I cannot send my second to such a scoundrel as yourself. Hereby, therefore, I smite you. That is the sole object of this letter. It conveys to you, on my behalf, a sound slap on either cheek. I remain, &c."

This epistolary assault appeared in the next morning's issue of its victim's journal, as well as the following truculent reply also:—"Inimitable adversary, you have struck me in writing. Similarly, I hereby discharge all the six barrels of my revolver at your head, and kill you by letter. As soon as you shall have perused this note, you may consider yourself a dead man."

Writing of the Archbishop of Canterbury, E. C. Granville Murray says:—"Dr. Tait is the first Scotchman who has attained to the primacy of the English Church. He owes nothing to birth, but to mother-wit, which has enabled him to win the various prizes of his profession. Any day you may chance to see Dr. Tait walking about the streets of London and lapping staring into the shop windows. He will probably be attended by a chaplain; and of course, he will wear the unimposing dress of his order. The imagination must make a slight effort to realize that the aged, middle-looking gentleman in gaiters is the first British subject after the Princess of the Blood, who fills the place once filled by Louis and Becket and Lancton, by Crammer and Laud." Dr. Tait is now seventy years old.

A well-known and popular clergyman of the Church of Scotland was some years ago favored with a visit of some of his congregation. Being of an hospitable disposition, and desirous of showing them every attention, he requested them to partake of some refreshment. Proceeding to the side-board, he took out a bottle of brandy, and holding it up to the light, remarked: "This will not do, it's the Free Kirk—hot and fiery; we'll put it back again." The next bottle he took up happened to be filled with vinegar. Cordial. It was replaced with the remark: "This is like the U. S. body—if it does little good, it can do little ill." At last a bottle of whiskey was produced, with the exclamation, "We're all right now! Here's the real Auld Kirk of Scotland; sit down and make yourself comfortable."

Rev. Lyman Abbott, writing about Henry Ward Beecher as an editor, says:—"He came in somewhere about the time his manuscript was expected; sometimes boiling over with excitement, sometimes bubbling over with humor. He sat and talked of anything and everything but the business before him, till the printer's devil made his final and imperative demand for copy. Then he caught up his pen, turned to the nearest desk, shut himself up in his shell as imperceptibly as if he were a turtle, and drove his printing machine and he were an electric battery. He threw off the pages as he wrote them, left the boy to pick them up and carry them to the compositor's room and, the work done, was off, leaving someone else to read proof, correct errors, and supply omissions. But what he wrote in a heat and at a sitting went as a ball from a Minie rifle, from one end of the land to the other. Wise men shook their heads over his 'incantations utterances.' But they kindled thousands of hearts into a blaze."
