delicate plants can come up readily. I never plant earlier than the middle of June, and often as late as July last week in June. If the ground is moist and the weather warm, they will come up in four days, and in ten Clusters, we begin to pick, and all this time the land should be free from weeds and in fine mellow condition. plant the green cucumbers for pickles, but all our pickle factories prefer the Cluster, and my experience is that it will yield double, comes into bearing much sooner, and is more easily gathered. The cluster will begin to bear by the time the vines are two yard long, and when planted five feet each way, will not cover the ground, so you are obliged to tramp the vines, but the Long Green will spread so that you cannot get through them without injuring the vines .- Agricola,
